The cup stays here. On Thursday the Columbia won the third race with the Shamrock, having won the three races in succession.

President Roosevelt, with his usual energy, has taken the southern question in hand, and proposes to break up the corrupt minority that has controlled Federal affairs. The President proposes to place respectability above politics in his southern appointments. This may send anti-Roosevelt delegates to the next Republican National convention, but Teddy cares not.

Stereopticon Entertainment.

On Friday evening, Oct. 16, at the Baptist church a grand entertainment for children will be presented, entitled "A Journey Round the World" illustrated by one hundred magnificent stereopticon views. Many of the pictures are photographic reproductions of famous master pieces, and will be of considerable educational value. The descriptive lecture will be given by Geo. F. B. Hughes, who has visited most of the places described. Entertainment will begin at 7:30 p. m. Admission ten cents.

SCHOOL NOTES.

During the month ending Oct. 4th, 1903, there were enrolled in all the departments of Charlevoix school 571 pupils, as against 548 for the corresponding month of last year. Based upon the average number, changing we have made a record of 14.2 per cent of attendance with only 12 cases of tardiness. The tardiness is distributed as follows. Primary dept. 7, Grammar dept. 3, High School 2. The best record was made by the first and second grade rooms of the Lincoln school, with Miss Fanning as teacher, which was as follows: Enrollment 39; average attendance 38; tardiness 1; all the entire enrollment 54.5 per cent were neither absent nor tardy. We have had so far aggregate attendance of 20,630 half days and 1253 half days absence, in connection with this report we wish to thank our patrons for the generous support which is very greatly appreciated by all concerned.

Parents having the best interests of their children at heart will please see to it that the children are punctual and regular in their attendance at school. Students cannot do their best work unless they are made to feel that in the matter of regularity and punctuality they owe to themselves a sacred duty. We would also suggest that parents regulate the amusements which the young folks indulge in. Students cannot do good work who are out late every night, and the freshness and the vigor are impossible to the young man or woman, boy or girl who spends the night at his evenings in frolicks and light amusements. We are anticipating an excellent year, and trust that we will have as many co-operation from the parents as possible.

An accident occurred at the construction of the new school building Monday, caused by the falling of a scaffold. Three men received injuries which were not very serious. Mr. F. J. Meech receiving the most serious injury, which was a broken leg.

The fall meeting of the County Teachers' Association is to be held at E. Jordan Saturday Oct. 17, 1903.

ARMY LIFE

CHAPTER XVIII.

"Sentenced to death! did you say?" said Lieutenant Curtis, with a sudden sense of painful offence to his adjutant and friend. "Yes, sir, sentenced to be shot to death."

"But is the thing thus hurried and rushed, and without any adequate reason, in the opinion of the president of the court?"

"Why, sir, I suppose it is. I don't know. I only know what I have told you, sir, and what I think. But I can prove, sir, that it was thought best by the president of the court to have it done at once, and I was ordered to do it, sir, and I will do it, sir, if it is ever so much against what I think. But, down sir, as I said once before, I'm willing to give you an hour to think and talk with the father of your prisoner, if that will satisfy you that I am right."

The captain, who was the younger and by far the more generous man, forced his hand upon the adjutant, who felt and took it.

"Well, Mac, I suppose I must obey orders, and I will, of course, and I wish you joy of your promotion, and I wish I could, too, with all my heart, but I can't, and I don't see how you can, either, if you know what I know about the affair. Why, Mac, the president of the court is Major Lane's father-in-law, and he and his daughter are the only people in the garrison who have anything to do with Major Lane, and they are all in a state of frenzy about the matter. Why, Mac, the poor girl is almost crazed, and I don't know what she will do if her father is shot. Why, Mac, I'm a married man myself, and I know what I think. Tell them, if you will, that I will do my duty, and that I will do it at once, if they insist on it, but that I think it will be a great pity, and that I wish they would wait a few days, at least, and see if something does not come to prevent it. I wish you would, Mac, for I know that I can trust you to do your duty, and I know that you can't do more than that."

"Well, I will, Curtis, and I wish you luck with your wedding, and I wish I could be there to-morrow night to see you married, instead of being here to see—to see—to see—"

"To see a man shot to death," said Curtis, finishing the sentence for his friend, who was unable to do so himself.

"Yes, sir, to see a man shot to death, and I wish I could be anywhere else in the world than here at the time, and I wish I could be sure that I can do my duty as well as you can, sir, and I will try to do it, sir, if I can, sir, but I don't know how I can, sir, I don't know how I can."

"Why, Mac, what's the matter? Are you—are you—are you—"

"Afraid of the sight of blood? No, sir, I don't think I am, but I don't know how I can stand by and see—and see—and see—"

From the Philippines.

Malolos, Bulac, P. I., July 21, 1901.

DEAR OLDS AT HOME:—The name of this province has been changed. The province of Manila and the district of Morong have been consolidated and named Rizal.

Got a letter to-day, dated June 14. It must have come on the Hancock which broke the record—only twenty days from San Francisco to Manila.

Your small pox scare amuses me. They get scared about the same thing over here. Everybody has it here—I mean among the natives. It doesn't amount to much more than the measles and mumps.

Sunday, July 21.—We are having lots of changes nowadays—nearly promoted officers reporting for duty, old chisled men going out, and new sergeants and corporals being made. Several men have re-enlisted lately.

We have had a very fine wet season so far, no heavy rains at all. The season of '99 must have been a phenomenal one.

I saw to-day where some war correspondent in speaking of the ceremony in Manila, cited as an illustration that the word "ambush" would not be allowed to pass, and seemed to think that that was not allowing the facts to go, but in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred so-called "ambushes" were not "ambushes" in any sense of the word. Only in cases of small convoys of two to four men could there be an "ambush." Any body of native large enough to attack more Americans were bound to expose themselves in some way, but it did happen frequently that a cousum, knowing the native to be in a certain concealed and intended position let no option but to go ahead and let the enemy open the ball when and how he pleased, giving him all the advantage of an ambush except that of a surprise, yet taking the only chance of getting within sniffing distance, the man expecting the attack, and ready to make a rush for the position as soon as a shot was fired. The rush knew what the order would be as well before it was given as they could after, and, in fact, an order was only necessary as a matter of discipline and it is very likely that the column would be full in the execution of the order before platoon leaders could repeat it. While such attacks were undoubt intended as ambushes, it would be a great wrong to both men and officers to so call them in every dispatch sent out, especially as they were happening every day and in every part of the islands.

If published accounts of every time columns were fired on from a concealed ranch were called "ambushes" it would appear that the American soldiers ever here were doing nothing else but room around looking for "ambushes" to fall into—in fact, that is just what they did do, but they usually had a pretty good idea where the ranch was before they started out, as soon as the foreigners had been driven from the islands and the country plots among Aggie's associates. It's too bad they don't turn the poor fool loose and take away the little satisfaction he derives from his role as martyr prisoner in the cause of—Agoncillo I mean. Funny—he's as big a fool as the rest of them, and the Americans will realize it sooner or later.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. P. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which of recent much a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney troubles, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c. at F. G. Hixon & Co's drug store.

SCHOOL COMM'R COLUMN.

A. W. CHASE, COMM'R.

We take pleasure in announcing to you that the County Fair Association has appointed a committee to revise the premium list along the lines of school work, and will offer premiums for meritorious school work at the next county fair.

The premiums will be offered for individual work, and competitors for prizes must comply with the rules and regulations of the association in entering work for exhibit.

The premiums offered will be more liberal, and apply to more subjects than heretofore.

The display of school work at our fair the past two or three years reflected much credit on both teachers and pupils. The work also received many high compliments from those well qualified to judge of such work.

With our past experience and observation, we both hope and expect the work of this year to surpass in amount, variety, and excellence that of the past.

Do not get the idea that to prepare work will take a great amount of extra time or work on part of teacher or pupils, or that it will crowd out some of the regular school work. Such is not the case. The premiums to be offered will be but work that is done in all our schools.

The teachers who have made such excellent exhibits heretofore, kept up all the school work in excellent shape, in fact their exhibits were largely made up of "every day work" well planned by the teacher and nicely executed by the pupils. We will announce more fully the premiums to be offered, soon.

Below resides in E. B. Ridgley of Pittsburg was a member of the Kansas congressional delegation and chairman of the Pinkerton national committee. Now he is cook in a restaurant in Lorain, O., working for his board. A W. Hoyt, the boy of Hoyts, Kan., congressman, was in Lorain a few days ago and was looking up a man to fill the vacancies. Ridgley was pointed out. Hoyt asked him if he would like a job. Ridgley said he had gone up against it for the proposition a thousand times, but had not met with the success he expected. Hoyt said it was a pleasant place, and if Ridgley would do his work well, behaviour, that he had was the little money he had left and he would get a congressman's salary. Ridgley said he would try it. Hoyt said he would be back in a few days and see how he was getting along.

TITLES OF ENGLISH KINGS.

Many Changes Made Since the Days of Edward the Confessor.

The new title which is to be bestowed upon Edward VII. in tardy recognition of his sovereignty over Canada, Australia and the other self-governing colonies of Britain, adds another to the already long list of terms by which our monarchs have been called.

Edward the Confessor, in the Saxon style, was "King of the English." On assuming this after Hastings, William I. added "Patron of the Normans." William Rufus was "King of the English and Duke of the Normans," adding the pious "Dei Gratia" omitted by his father. To this Henry II. added "Duke of Aquitaine." Henry VIII. assumed the royal dignity. He was the first "King of Ireland" and also the first to add the distinguishing numeral to his name. It was Henry VIII. too, who first bore the title "Defender of the Faith." The pope bestowed it upon him for his attack on Luther. Afterward, when Henry departed Rome, the holy father annulled the title. But Henry liked it so well that he had an act of parliament passed conferring the title on him and his successors forever. Since then English monarchs have been Defenders of the Faith. In addition to these alterations Henry also changed the usual form of address and reference. Until 1537 he was content to be called "His Highness, but thereafter he was "His Majesty." Elizabeth was frequently styled "The Most High, Mighty and Magnificent Empress Elizabeth, by the grace of God Queen of England, France, Ireland and of Virginia, Defender of the Faith."

With James I. came at length the additional "King of Scotland." He also styled himself "Most Sacred Majesty." Thus the title remained for a century, when the act of union made Anne Queen of Great Britain, France, and Ireland Defender of the Faith," with the general address of "Her Most Sacred Majesty." Just a hundred years ago this Irish union made George III. "King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and France, and Defender of the Faith," with the address of "His Most Gracious Majesty." So the style remained until in 1876 tardy recognition was made of the Queen's sovereignty over India by the conferment of the title "Empress of India." This existed until popular opposition that it was sign-land that the title should not be used in the United Kingdom. But modern coins now bear the figure, "Ind. Imp."—London Mail.

IT DIDN'T KEEP TIME.

"Yes," he said, "I've quit, and I want to say that I think these stories of the way men get ahead in the world are all fairy tales. I've tried the methods and know. Only a few days ago I read about Tom L. Johnson making his first big hit with the manager of a street railroad by picking up the setup he found lying around. 'You're the kind of a careful man I want,' said the manager, and he promoted him right away. That was enough for me, so I began picking up things whenever the boss was near. 'What are you doing?' he demanded yesterday. 'There's no use letting these things go to waste, sir,' I answered for that's what Tom Johnson said, 'of course not,' he said, 'and we hire men for a dollar a day to do just that class of work. But we can't afford to have cranks wasting their time over it. Hump yourself back into the office now, or I'll have you on the pay roll as a day laborer.' So I quit. Something didn't seem to happen to real life the way they do in print."

HOW TO A SAM KEEPS TAB ON CROPS.

There are in the United States, approximately, 1,750 counties of agricultural importance. In each of these counties the agricultural department has a principal county correspondent, who maintains an organization of three assistants, each covering a special territory. Facilities are furnished the principal correspondent to enable him to obtain regular reports from his assistants. These reports he tabulates at the end of each month, supplemental to the information thus obtained by his own observation and knowledge of the situation and the consolidated report is submitted to the statisticians affiliated to the position, an average of about 90 per cent. of them reports monthly.—Washington Times.

Torpedo Boats and Steam.

Contrary to the general belief the engines of torpedo-boats are not at all extravagant in the use of steam, but approach high economy, considering that they are driven, regardless of cost, the sole view being to get the greatest possible speed in the shortest time with forced draft of greatest intensity. The coal burned per indicated horse power in the case of one boat recently constructed was forty-five pounds per hour, with a consumption of sixty-eight pounds per square foot of gas.—Chicago News.

A Veteran Governor.

Alexander Ramsey, who became the first governor of Minnesota territory June 1, 1849, celebrated his birthday recently. His friends say he holds the blue ribbon as the first governor now surviving. The veteran said to an acquaintance who congratulated him: "I'm probably 47 years old, as you are for almanacs don't lie, except about the weather and th. patent medicines. But I hardly feel the 80, though I'm 10 inches to the 1."

A Lively Princess.

The liveliest and the English people think, the prettiest princess in Europe is Princess Maud, youngest daughter of the king, and now Princess Charles of Denmark. She can not only blad books and nurse a sick patient scientifically, but also ride a half-rater, ride a bicycle, and let go the bridle, swimming, sailing of yoh as well as row, play chess and speak five languages, including Russian.

Adopted by the Indians.

Professor Starr, the authority on anthropology, is an Iroquois Indian—by adoption. A year ago he went among the Iroquois and received a strange ceremony, which ended in his adoption as one of a tribe famed for their strength, bravery and prowess.

G. W. ROBINSON,
Chairman of State Board of Equalization.

JASON E. HAMMOND,
Secretary of State Board of Equalization.

STATE OF MICHIGAN,

AUDITOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,

LANSING, SEPTEMBER 25, 1901.

I HEREBY CERTIFY, That the foregoing is a true transcript of the determination of the State Board of Equalization, as filed in my office on the 18th day of September, 1901.

PERRY F. POWERS,
Auditor General.

STORY WITHOUT AN END.

Serial Novelist Who Wouldn't Bring His Work to a Termination.

Have you heard of my friend P., who used to write for the State Horse Press, the publisher of that remark able paper—I am not sure that he had an editor—offered P. a cent a word for a story of adventure, and P. agreed to write it in chapters, supplying them weekly till the tale had been told. The chapters went to press as fast as they came. Presently the publisher became restless. Purple is this story were developing extraordinary things, and never getting anywhere. P. left them in the most awful plights whenever he wrote "To be continued in our next." At the sixteenth chapter he was no nearer to a solution of the plot than he had been in the ninth. The publisher wrote to P. begging him to close the narrative as quickly as possible, but P. replied with another batch, which added, like the others, with the heroine hanging over an abyss by the eyelashes and the villain holding her would-be rescuer by the throat against a tree a mile away and shouting with ghoulish glee. Every chapter ended like that, so that there simply had to be another one to explain it, and get the suffering people out of trouble. The publisher did not dare to interfere. His customers would insist on the end of the story. It was an investive case, and he kept that story write, and he threw under his contract, about $75 a week, and frank champagne. Vicious threats at last obliged him to kill off most of his characters and write the long drawed word. Finis.—New York Independent.

193,000 Spruce Seeds in a Pound.

A pound of the seeds of the Colorado blue spruce contains about 193,000 seeds, and sell for $3, whereas the price was formerly $12 a pound. There is a good deal of competition to-day from California to Oregon, but owing to the mild climate the seeds from the Pacific coast are not so hardy as those from Colorado, and will not stand the severe winters of the northeastern States.—Ulica Globe.

Stocking Seeds.

At least half a dozen scientists are now carefully studying snails. The reason, according to one of them, is because these little animals are extraordinarily sympathetic and intelligent.

ROCKEFELLER'S RANCH.

It Consists of 14,000 Acres in Kiowa County, Kan.

Down in the southeast corner of Kiowa county, Kan., on one of the finest ranches of the Southwest, Frank Rockefeller, brother of John and William Rockefeller, spent the summer. Ranching can scarcely be said to be a recreation with Frank Rockefeller, for he makes it a business, the object of which is to raise blooded cattle for money. In the winter Frank Rockefeller, who is the youngest of the brothers, lives in Cleveland and attends to his interests in stocks and oil, but in the summer he throws himself with vigor into ranch life. For half of his fifty years he has owned this 14,000-acre ranch, which is called Sheldon Creek Park, from the sparkling stream which waters it. As he takes his family to live with him here in the summer, Mr. Rockefeller's group of ranch buildings are unsurpassed in the state for luxuriousness. The large frame house is equipped with modern improvements. On his ranch is raised all the necessary grain to feed his stock. There are 3,500 acres under cultivation, 500 acres being in alfalfa, a desirable feed for fattening purposes. He can raise three crops of alfalfa in a single season and thus have a good fall pasturage on the field. There are 300 acres in wheat, 300 acres in rye and the remainder in millet corn. The fine qualities of these lie in their stability for feeding and forage. A large orchard has lately been put out, many of the trees already bearing fruit.—New York Press.

The Transsiberian Railway.

It is time that ships the Trans-Siberian railway was commenced and 3,240 miles of rails have been laid, showing an average of 360 miles a year. The connection between Europe and Vladivostock is now assured by means of the steamship service in the center of Siberia.

Washing the Clothes.

The woman who does washing by the day is willing to hang out almost anywhere.

Wonderful Cattle Trail.

On account of a scarcity of bricks in a Texas town the congregation of the local church allowed their new edifice to remain unfinished while a saloon was being erected.

A SHIP'S NEGRO CAPTAIN.

Colored Man Who Is Successful on the Ocean.

A colored man has been made captain of the British schooner Sarah E. Douglass, now in port with a cargo of pineapples from the West Indies. He is Captain Robert G. Sawyer, of Savannah Sound, Eleuthera Island, Bahamas. Captain Sawyer was born in the West Indies. In boyhood he followed the life of most colored boys in the Bahamas, which consists in diving for conch shells, sponges and fishes and owing to the geography of the country, they spend the best part of their lives in small boats crossing the rivers, bays and sounds which honeycombed the island. Eighteen years ago the captain went to sea in deep-sea vessels. He educated himself and mastered mathematics so that he could solve the intricate problems of navigation. He then became a navigator, and was seen here in the West Indian schooners Brothers and Sarah E. Douglass as navigator of these vessels between the West Indies and Baltimore in the pineapple season. When the Douglass entered the pineapple trade this season Captain Sawyer was appointed master by J. W. Culmer of Nassau, who owns the vessel. Captain Sawyer is a man of powerful physique. He is about 6 feet 4 inches tall and weighs 214 pounds, every ounce of which seems to be muscle and bone. He is built like a human wrestler, speaks English fluently and has excellent manners. He has a dark brown skin. He wears a natty blue jacket, blue serge suit and cap.—Baltimore American.

England as an Apple Buyer.

A STORY OF ARMY LIFE IN A Western Fort.

Copyrighted, 1902, by Robert Bonner's Sons.

The news of Capt. Plume's arrest soon spread through the Fort, and the soldiers who felt that they could trust his word, were speaking to some extent the shells in their knapsacks of Neal, German, for the reports were a general one.

"The major is thick-headed," said one. "He doesn't like to see Neal disgraced."

Colin Morton had become, over the little Hessian's misfortune, a hero in the regiment. He he had drilled away his time in the guardhouse, and was now at the head of the company.

The news the news of affairs when one day the mail carrier came. Portland was a very little town, and the mail was always a big event.

Capt. James Hopewell, the commander of the Rifle Company, was one of the officers of the regiment of Fort Clark. Plume was his second-lieutenant.

For the time they were up in white as the Quartermaster's office, and the two were sitting together, when Plume was called in to look over some papers.

"Here's a letter for you," said Hopewell, as Plume was about to leave the office, handing him a letter addressed in a very delicate hand.

The letter was in a very delicate hand, and Plume was a little surprised at the sight of it. He had not seen Miss Fairfax since the evening which ended in "Miss Fairfax."

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The Benzoire Portland Cement Company filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state at Lansing, Monday, October 7, with a capital stock of $750,000.

Elk Rapids expects to have a wood novelty factory. Work will be commenced upon the building this fall and early spring is expected to see the factory in operation.

The East Jordan & Southern train now makes but one trip to Bellaire each day, going over from East Jordan to meet the afternoon train at 2:45, and waiting until the arrival of the south bound at 4:17 before returning.

The Manistee & Northeastern railway co. evidently has serious designs upon Ludington already and a railroad extension from some to Northport seems a successful proposition looking to the building of the extension next spring

After several postponements and unsatisfactory attempts, the men who were to have come off at Traverse City, under the auspices of the Traverse City Driving Park Association, were cut short by the weather, it being the unusual inclemency of the weather.

About a hundred barrels of lime was lost in Torch Lake last week by the Cameron Lumber Co. It was loaded on a scow at Elk Rapids and was towed to Torch Lake by a the steam tug "Jennie" when the snow sprang a leak and filled, and the lime were dumping in 35 ft. of water.

Hon. W. H. Tuttle, of Kalkaska, state representative from this district, has moved to Detroit for the practice of his profession. Mr. Tuttle is one of the acknowledged leaders among the old stalwarts of Northern Michigan and is a hard worker, and will doubtless win his way to the front in the metropolis of the state.

Col. Frank Watts, of Manistee, is authority for the statement that as soon as Murderer Wright's parole expires April 24, he will be arrested on another warrant charging him with the murder of a deputy sheriff, at the same time as the deputy sheriff was killed. He further says that if Benzie county is unable to put up the money to meet the expenses of a trial the murdered man's friends will do it.

Traverse City Record: E. D. Whitney of Chicago advertising agent of the Michigan Central Railway Co., in the city accompanied by A. M. Coburn, a prominent citizen of Petoskey. These two gentlemen are joint owners of 500 acres of land on the shore of Lake Michigan at Gills Pier, between Northport and Leland. They purchased the property formerly occupied by Wilber Gill's saw mill and added other items, making it almost 800 acres and three miles of water front. It is the intention of these gentlemen to make this a popular resort and it will hereafter be energetically and had put in attractive form. They are on their way to Detroit to arrange for improvements made last spring.

Manistee Herald: Jim Wade met with a rather funny experience while at Central Lake last week for the purpose of attending the sheriff sale. When ready to return home he concluded to take the lively hack by phone and after waiting awhile for tardy, restless soul went to livery for team. He found the assistants at the barn hitching a team to his buggy that did not belong to him, and he marked that he ought to know his own team. He was requested to pick them out and after looking at the horses in the barn selected two that he thought answered the description of his own. When he reached Bellaire a telephone message was awaiting him stating that he had a team belonging to a farmer near Charlevoix who was very irate and was threatening him with arrest on a charge of horse stealing. A rig came down from Central Lake and he was given another horse—still not his own—in exchange for the one belonging to the Charlevoix farmer, when he continued his way home. The day following Mr. Wade's own horse was driven over and the tangle was at last unraveled.

Central Lake Torch: Mrs. Frederick Eaglston, mother of Mrs. James Cameron, died at the house of her son, Richard Eaglston, in Elk Rapids, Tuesday morning the 8th. She had made her home with Mrs. Cameron for some time, and went to Elk Rapids on a visit when Mr. and Mrs. Cameron went east a few weeks ago. Last Thursday she was taken suddenly ill and continued to grow worse until she passed away early Tuesday morning. Mrs. Cameron was summoned and went to Elk Rapids on Monday returning with the remains the next day. The funeral was held yesterday in the residence of James Cameron and was largely attended, Rev. E. E. Hewitt, of Kewadin conducted the ceremonies. Of the relatives from abroad who were at the funeral were James Eaglston and wife and Mr. Forman and wife of Traverse City, Richard Eaglston and wife of Elk Rapids, and George Eaglston and his two sons of Charlevoix. Charles Eaglston of Boyne City was unable to be here on account of sickness in his family. Mrs. Eaglston was a kindly and much beloved old lady and leaves many friends here and at Torch Lake where she was well known.

The following Traverse City special relates to an ancient resident of Antrim county. The matrimonial adventures of Peter H. LeClair, who has been brought back to Muskegon Tuesday, on a charge of bigamy, are rather amusing. His record runs:

Light here in the spring of 1892, when an entirely old here, who had married him, left him because she found he had been too much married. LeClair was arrested at Thorpe, Wis., in October, 1892, and sentenced to two years at the state penitentiary, for bigamy. It came to light at the trial, that he at that time had a wife in North Dakota, one at Iron Lake, Wis., and No. 3 in the Thorp victim, who was but 17 years of age. As soon as he was out of prison LeClair went to St. Ignace, where he married an estimable young woman by the name of Campbell. They removed to Elk Rapids, where LeClair opened a jewelry store. His new wife thought all was not straight with him, and returned to her parents in this city. LeClair disappeared out of Elk Rapids, leaving many debts behind, and stating that he intended going to Canada. Nothing more had been heard from him until the dispatches announced that he had been arrested for marry a young girl in Tennessee, and the further development that since leaving here he had married a Muskegon woman also. LeClair is an old soldier over 50, and of not so prepossessing appearance that it would appear so easy for him to find women victims. His story, however, that he was a pensioner and had just received a large back pension, has probably something to do with his easy finding of trusting female hearts.

SCHOOL COMM'R COLUMN.
A. W. CLAY, EDITOR.

A large number of our teachers were in attendance at the Teachers' Association held at East Jordan last Saturday. We appreciate the efforts of those teachers, who sacrifice so much time, comfort and expense, to make our meetings a success, without such meetings every thing tending toward the upbuilding of the schools and the profession of teaching, would prove a failure.

The elements, the roads, the means of conveyance, etc., were conspired against us on Saturday. Nevertheless, we had our usual large attendance.

The teachers present will appreciate the meeting. A committee on program consisting of H. E. Bell, Fred R. Gordon and Miss Rose B. Hipp, will prepare for the next meeting to be held in Boyne City, May 1892, a working program.

The minimum age for teachers is raised from seventeen to eighteen years. The statutes provide that the papers written in any county and upon which a second grade certificate has been granted may upon request of the holder of such certificate, be sent by the commissioner of any county in which the holder of the certificate desires to teach, and when such papers are received by the commissioner they shall be treated as if written at a public examination in that county.

If the papers are found to meet the requirements in said county a certificate is issued in duplicate.

We wish to notify second grade teachers not to take advantage of credits in this county, and ask to have their manuscript sent to another county. In such cases the examination must be written in full.

NOTICE—Smoke Night Hawk cigars or you will be liable to be arrested on sight. W. J. DEAMOS, Sheriff.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Coutre of Cheraw, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. CURIOUS TELEGRAPH APPARATUS.

Ingenious Combination of Telegraphic Talk Spheres and Phonograms.

One of the most remarkable things exhibited at the Paris exposition last year was a telegraph apparatus invented by two Hungarian scientists, Messrs. Pollak and Virag. The most extraordinary things were promised of it, and the French government decided the invention to merit trials with the lines from Paris to Lyons. The experiments were subsequently also formed initially on account of the expense of transport. The inventors have, however, installed their system upon a wire from Budapest to Vienna, a distance of 275 miles, and actual practical working is taking place at the speed of thirty words per minute. The messages are written in Roman characters and receive no transposition. Suggestions are in contract for establishing the system in France and Germany, and the latter government has committed to a practical point between Berlin and Cologne. The Hungarian system is in complete and working order, very shortly time. It is intended to make that our service is so thoroughly established that it will compete and photographic the messages being written on paper ruled under by a set of light and thin metal pins and fed by an automatic process. The speed of this apparatus has attained a maximum of 1,000 words, taken consecutively, that is to say, three times the speed of the Morse apparatus and of all other telegraphic devices in actual requirements. The relation would therefore be about the ratio of typewriting.—Savage Journal.

About the Rothschilds.

Lord Rothschild is of course now the head of the famous banking family and its most wealthy member. He is a bachelor and resides at Tring Park, his brother Leopold, but the two are much attached to each other and they have a joint establishment in London, as peculiarly their own of agent. There is a legend that Lord Rothschild was incorrect that he had been giving an annual donation to the Society for the Conversion of the Hebrews through a clerical blunder on the part of one of his busy clerkers.

An Unmeaning Nuisance.

The duke of Norfolk is one of the most inactive members of the English peerage, and gives enormous sums away yearly. He has a great passion for aquarianism, and a story is told of his having one day been met walking down Pall Mall with a big brown paper parcel under his arm. Upon a friend's inquiring what he had there, he informed him that it was "his aquarium." He was on his way to a drawing-room at Buckingham palace at which he would have to appear gorgeous in red and gold.

Milk May Produce Death.

If milk does not disagree with one it cannot do more than give one a good meal in the work of getting fat. It should be sipped either slowly as it turns into curds the moment it reaches the gastric juices of the stomach and when it does so it is digested. Milk should be sipped rather slowly as it turns into curds the moment it reaches the gastric juices of the stomach and when a large quantity is swallowed at once the large mass formed is not quickly digested. A tablespoonful of lemonade in a glass of milk will insure its digestion.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Empress Frederick left a fortune of $2,500,000, saved up from her dowry of $500,000, her English allowance of $40,000 a year, her allowance as dowager, and the income of $75,000 from the duchies of Lauenburg. Her husband left it all to her, and her children, but the Kaiser, the emperor, demanded, Princess Margaret of Hesse, gets in addition the castle of Friedrichshof.

KING DAVID'S SOLDIERS.

The Israel Valley Established an Adult Military School.

The kingdom of Israel in the time of David embraced a territory almost equal to the state of Massachusetts and had a population nearly the same as that of New York—about 2,000,000. That it was able to maintain the long place between the Mediterranean and the Euphrates and from Lebanon on the north of Arabia, was principally due to the skill of David and the efficient military establishment he had set up. It is found not only that gave him the full development of the custom system of enforced military service as adopted in Germany and France, the Israelites let principle was that compulsory by law, and that every able-bodied man owed military service to the state, which he must accomplish for a certain period in years and was David transformed the irregular fighting forces of Israel into an organized and effective army. This he found which he found now and a leadership of should, sion, divided into twenty-four divisions, each consisting of 24,000 men, and each one had its duties for a period of three months in the year, so that there were always in the field 24,000 men. In war emergencies each man was called for the period and the force, when placed under the command of a general of tried experience and ability, ranging in a specially trained military force equal to the demands of Israel.

When Israel was strong in arms and recuperated by the successful conclusion of his war Absalom and had put down Absalom, a rebellion in his authority, the time was ripe for the full triumph of his plans. He had now the strongest military force that any king had ever had. Through years of his reign he had been building up a system of military training, which was unequaled in the world, and which was the result of Absalom when he had the power of Israel, "Mighty Men of Valor," a well trained force of the monarchies of Global, supplying in the physical features the vigorous "Wilderness," where Saul and Jonathan met martyrdom. The physique and in David was the last of Israel the Hapsian and Absalom in warfare behind the mantle of Ephraim, and compared to every Lion, cross-bred movements of the Kadesh, Jesse, the ancestry of Judah who commanded the tribes of Israel, was peculiarly the of Israel, Israel was upon Israel, on Absalom's line of march.—Chicago News.

Curious Cases in Italy.

In the Middle ages the geometrical science was so far in advance of the medical science that the physicians, Thus in what he prescribed, Every man from the Emperor down, was given to understand that if a patient died, he was a victim of a crime of a crime of faith. The "dead man" was put into a coffin and that nothing else should be taken, and when the dead of a public character, in cases in the Dominican monastery where the physicians were consulted, Avenzoar in the Moorish period, introduced the practice of dissecting the dead, he presented and the cases presented to the conclusions reached by the doctors of disease. MANY SUDDEN DEATHS

WOMAN AT DAYTON, OHIO, IS HELD ON SUSPICION.

Fact that Thirteen Persons with Whom She Has Been Associated Have Died Unexpectedly Leads to Her Detention—Entertainment Footbiller in Alaska.

Mrs. Belle Wittmer, widow of A. J. Wittmer whose death occurred in July last, is held in the jail at Dayton, O., upon instructions from the coroner. Her arrest followed a post mortem examination upon the body of her sister, Mrs. Anna C. Pugh, who died a few days ago, supposedly from gastric. Evidence of poisoning was found. When the brother of Mrs. Wittmer was questioned it developed that he has been treated with illness and mysterious deaths have occurred in the women's family for a long, long time. Rigor has not marriage in this family has been fatal to husbands, and children have died in great numbers.

Prosecutor Dunkinson of Dayton, who is conducting the investigation, has obtained affidavits from 13 persons who were associated in the Wittmer family when death came to them. The affidavits show that Mrs. Wittmer was present when each of the persons died. Dunkinson, in his affidavit, says that Mrs. Wittmer's husband died in 1899 and that her mother died in 1900. Mrs. Wittmer's sister died in 1902, and her father died in 1903. Mrs. Wittmer's son died in 1904, and her daughter died in 1905. Mrs. Wittmer's son died in 1906, and her daughter died in 1907. WHY WE LEAD ENGLAND

Constitution Modified by Differences in Treatment of Locomotives.

Nothing perhaps better illustrates the difference between British and American methods in the present year of grace than the satisfaction of the Great Northern Railway company of England over one of their locomotives. Built in 1892, has completed 1,000,000 miles. This is a record, says the London paper, a thing to be proud of. "Because it shows that our engines are made to last and do not disablé." But the American view is quite different. The result sets the superintendent of some one primer of one of our great trunk lines to be beyond anything we have done, and I may add in sound of anything we hope to equal in quality, durability and speed. It we kept an engine in service thirty years we should think we were neglecting our duty to the public. An engine thirty years old is an antiquated machine. We expect to get as much work as possible out of our locomotives and know that when they are worn out progress will have produced so many improvements that it would be no economy to continue the older engine in service, even if it would be possible. In England an engine is petted and the public treated as much as possible. Herein exposes an a common way England no long for, in whether it be in locomotives or the machinery to make them, and the lead in the champion in the end. The Engline are spoiled with a long lifetime thirty years old—a locomotive which has run equal to ten years and "patent"—which is unsuccessful because it might not prove a lasting to people. Thirty years ago it was perhaps the best locomotive in class of "Compositions" or Pilots has been laborious for a long time with the cleanly complaints to provide an improved type of pilots. The one that is most commonly omitted simply of two pieces with knobs or rectangle to hold the little foot rests in place. A person can climb up on these latches. But as a person must on the load. It happens so often that a pilot is thrown with something like if these things that it is the invariable rule for the twists to shoot away from the side of the ship as soon as the pilot has been vitalizing. This is done so that if he falls he shall fall into spit water, instead of into a hot boat.

Affected Them Differently

Recently the German Crown Prince called the Kaiser's attention to the fact that the teachers in certain colleges gave their pupils some extraordinary subjects on which to write essays. Whereupon the colleges were in a "Know that the Kaiser was displeased, some has been confined to only the county side of the matter. It makes not that a teacher in a college for girls of 12 to 15 years of age gave the following as a subject for an essay: "What Was the Effect of the Egyptian Ring Around Moses?" and "What Do We Christians Think About It?" The teachers spoken both the Crown Prince's authority and the Emperor's sarcasm.—Berlin Correspondence London Telegraph.

Count Boni Street Sounds.

Eleanora Duse, the famous Italian actress, is peculiarly nervous. When she is not at rehearsals or acting she spends her time in perfect rest. She relives no one except old friends, and only a few of them. She has a lady companion, who arranges her journeys and engages rooms in the hotels. The lady says that Duse's rooms are at the back of the hotel and that, if possible, the back not on a street. She cannot bear street sounds and sights.

Effect of Heat in Sweden.

The thermometer climbed to heights unknown in Sweden last summer. The heat was almost tropical. One result was that men for the first time appeared in negligee shirts and without coats. Such a thing was never before thought of. In many cities the ladies published cards in the newspapers asking the men to dress in a comfortable manner.

Mr Thorwald Wesses Doctors.

A Hartford lady is the matter of women practicing medicine. The first was Elizabeth Blackwell who graduated as physician in 1849. Three years later there were six in Philadelphia. In 1880 there were three thousand women doctors in the United States; in 1890 there were 4,556, and now there are probably six thousand, some of whom have a very lucrative practice.—Indianapolis News.

HARD WORK FOR PILOTS.

Climbing Up the Sides of the Great Ocean Liners Sometimes Is Fatal.

If certain standpoint buildings to grow in size the place of this harbor will need a bridge soon to board them, says the New York Press. It is as much as you can do to get up the vast gunwale, black sides of the great liners, and sometimes more for the pilot common, sailors have occasion two cases where pilots have dropped dead on reaching the deck of the vessels.

If all the front door entrances to New York buildings were equal and the intending visitor had to climb up the side of the house to the height of ten more on a rope, twisting, swinging rope ladder he would form some idea of the operation experienced by the pilots when they face one of the big ships with flanks towering duly the deck beside.

And the ships do not stand like a wall. They pitch and roll. Pitch and roll No. 1 send the pilot swinging far away of the side of the ship like a pendulum. Pitch and roll No. 2 bring him back quickly and slap he goes against the iron plates. As soon as the pilots are clearly pots and footing to fastening. As soon of a big ship he not vessels with unmixed defiant to climb.

Arthur Bartley and John Carvin are the two pilots who had with their lives in the performing his duties. In each case they dropped dead almost on the instant that they reached the deck. Bartley had his hand grabbed out to grasp that of the ship's captain when he fell. Both had been suffering from heart disease and the violent exertion of climbing killed them.

It is Nash, the pilot, thoroughbred and keen-eyed president of the board of "Commissioners of Pilots" has been laboring for a long time with the cleanly complaints to provide an improved type of pilots. The one that is most commonly omitted simply of two pieces with knobs or rectangle to hold the little foot rests in place. A person can climb up on these latches. But as a person must on the load. ROMANCE OF A BANK BOOK.

Things Account That Have Lain Dormant for Many Years.

The Bank for Savings, which is 82 years old, has the heaviest dormant account in New York, about $200,000, in which 1,000 accounts are tied up. Of these the ownership of about 200 are entered each year, and to this account are added about $10, which, after the lapse of twenty-two years, without being touched, are omitted to enter the dormant case. But in these days the bank does not allow accounts to rest so long, and after ten years have elapsed a search is made and the depositor notified. Over that the bank keeps informed of their whereabouts each year. In this the year when the bank first opened its doors, a church minister in New York made a deposit in the name of Maidon in Jerusalem. The amount deposited was small, but it was sixty-one years before that the account and interest was paid to the proper church authorities. This of the oldest items which I have seen above book, and it was one of our page books, advised them to bring it to the bank. "The girl who was 17 or 18 years old brought it to me, and, on being shown the entry, she said, looking up the account, I saw that I called for several hundred dollars she replied by a woman who answered proved to be the girl's grandmother. Eventually the girl got the money, and the husband. I thought, was closed. But several months afterward she came in and said: 'I was just going to say I thought I'd drop in and tell you how upon good the money did us. And we do not know! We have married on it. And she left beaming all over as if congratulated her.—New York Press.

Dr James Weir Hall tells us that he has traveled more than 100,000 nautical miles, and has usually had under his care several hundred passengers, landing the same. He therefore speaks from experience when he says that although there may be certain cases which are of normal origin, such cases are in the minority, and that in the majority of cases the symptoms arise from the abdomen. People who are well inured to sea life and are usually quite free from sickness may still suffer if they go to sea when liquid on board, say he is quite sure that by the proportions often taken to experiment vicinities they do to take pro ... therapeutics from matchbreak which, which otherwise could, may prevent—being the taking of a sailing preparation the day or so, before traveling, adopting the recumbent posture and avoiding disagreeable smells and the company of those who are sick. He strongly advises those who suffer with gastric phenomena to provide themselves with a good, Sunday breakfast, vestes, tea, long and dry biscuits, bread and wine if round their trunks over the whole width of the abdomen. This will afford great comfort by preventing the contents of the abdomen viscera from undue movement. He also says that for severe vomiting and persistent sickness nothing is so (unknown) as a hypodermic injection of morphine.—London Hospital.

To Study the Sea.

Representatives of eight nations met at Christiania early this autumn to consider methods of systematic international research. Sweden, Germany, Great Britain, Denmark, Belgium, Norway, Russia and Holland were the nations represented. The scheme provisionally adopted divides the eastern north Atlantic and its contiguous seas into a series of "boxes" each of which is to be worked by one of the nations. It is expected that each country will equip a special ship for the work. Thus it will be a central international laboratory, possible at Christiania, where the work of the various ships will be collated and classified and the general results of the work made ready for the public. The work of the annual ship will be a continuous one, with a scientific character. The study of the distribution of fish food of the sea, etc., will be one of the first items in the present plan.

A Curious Barometer.

A curious barometer is said to be used by the remnant of the Aroucanian race, which inhabits the southernmost province of Chili. It consists of the cut-off shell of a crab. The food shell is white in fair dry weather, but, indicating the approach of a storm atmosphere by the appearance of small red spots, as the moisture in the air increases it becomes entirely red, and remains so throughout the rainy season.

Applied Knowledge.

"Spell: former and give its definition," requested the teacher. "Former-n-r, for work," responded a diminutive maiden. "Now place it in a sentence so that I may be sure you understand its meaning" said the teacher. "In summer I would rather play out-of-doors than ferment in the school-house," referred the small scholar.

Oldest of the "Immortals."

The oldest of the "Immortals," or members of the French Academy, is Legouve, who is ninety-four. The Paris Gaulois thinks that the best thing he wrote is this: "It is often said that God endowed man to live, and gave him work as a mitigating circumstance."

Scientific Preparation of Timber.

In the scientific preparation of timber, after the tree is felled the bark and outside layers of sapwood are removed, the trunk is raised from the ground and reduced to the desired form, then left to season.

Wanted—One for Mayor.

Charles W. Slack, a regent of the University of California, declined to run for mayor of San Francisco on the ground that he was too poor.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor

Harvest Festival services were held last Sunday morning and evening at which the attendance were good considering the unfavorable weather. The music was special for the occasion and consisted of two anthems, solo and duet, all of which were much enjoyed. The pastor preached in the morning on "Fruitful Seasons and Their Teaching," showing how we are entitled to God's Rising, superintendence, Providence, Resurrection and Fatherhood, the evening subject was "The Thousfold Harvest." It was the common theme that the day had been a very helpful one.

The B. F. Society had a pleasant social in the church parlors on Tuesday evening.

The positively offering for between leaves was taken Sunday for Home Missions. The church decided to raise $50. A few dollars are collected to reach that sum, but it is hoped to make it up this week.

Subjects for Sunday, Oct. 20th, morning, "What's the Good of the Sabbath?" Evening, "A Penny for Your Thoughts?" The former subject will deal with the Institutional Influence and Aesthetic Aspects of the Sabbath, the latter subject will examine the current thoughts and typical minds and estimate its value.

Beginning Sunday evening November 3rd the Baptist, Methodist and Congregational churches will hold three weeks of Union Gospel meetings.

Dumb Heat Falls Imperceptibly.

Frost, blistery and Damage have recently made a number of sensitive to dust from various sources by means of the spectroscope that from the clouds collected either by itself or in hail, snow, sleet, or rain, exhibits a regular series of lines, which, when compared with those of the elements, prove the presence of sodium, potassium, lithium and calcium. Wood of some other substance, possess the same properties, and it is said that the Sun of Nassau on 1911 at 10 o'clock in the morning, a shower of dust fell in Holland, which on analysis proved to be composed of silicate of magnesium, and the lines of the spectrum of the dust were those of the elements of which the Sun is composed. Dust from the Sahara Desert is supposed to be carried up in the air and then deposited in Europe. Dust from Vesuvius was found in Sweden.

Dr. Hall's Sea Sickness Remedy.

Dr. James Weir Hall tells us that he has traveled more than 100,000 nautical miles, and has usually had under his care several hundred passengers, landing the same. He therefore speaks from experience when he says that although there may be certain cases which are of normal origin, such cases are in the minority, and that in the majority of cases the symptoms arise from the abdomen. People who are well inured to sea life and are usually quite free from sickness may still suffer if they go to sea when liquid on board, say he is quite sure that by the proportions often taken to experiment vicinities they do to take pro ... therapeutics from matchbreak which, which otherwise could, may prevent—being the taking of a sailing preparation the day or so, before traveling, adopting the recumbent posture and avoiding disagreeable smells and the company of those who are sick. He strongly advises those who suffer with gastric phenomena to provide themselves with a good, Sunday breakfast, vestes, tea, long and dry biscuits, bread and wine if round their trunks over the whole width of the abdomen. This will afford great comfort by preventing the contents of the abdomen viscera from undue movement. He also says that for severe vomiting and persistent sickness nothing is so (unknown) as a hypodermic injection of morphine.—London Hospital.

Cure of Oatmeal Dentistry.

Whether Scotsmen generally are getting their porridge in the morning, or oatmeal cakes becoming less common, it is hard to tell, but experts after looking carefully into the matter give it as their opinion that the consumption of oatmeal is falling off in Scotland, or, at least, is not keeping pace with the increase in population. Possibly the "long frit and the tea breakfast" are not so much confined to Sunday as they used to be, and "bakeness parridch" is no longer the distinctive national dish in the country of Burns and Scott.

George Eliot's Hate of Speed.

George Eliot is said to have written "Middlemarch" in four months. Some doubt is thrown upon this statement by the fact that she commonly worked slowly, writing with great care and deliberation and making few erasures after her work was done.

Equine Statistics.

There are in the whole world about 25,000,000 horses and 11,000,000 mules and asses. They are distributed as follows: Europe, 20,000,000 horses, 200,000 mules, etc.; America, 23,000,000 horses, 4,700,00 mules, etc.; Asia, 3,100,000 horses, 1,500,000 mules, etc.; Africa, 1,000,000 horses, 1,900,000 mules; Australia, 2,000,000 horses. In the United States there were January 1, 1902, 13,000,000 horses and 2,000,000 mules and asses.

TRUE AS STEEL

A STORY OF

Nic took the money from my soft palm at it in the direction of the sugar and food there which he could supply to me. Three separate times came from the direction of his figurehead some sweet promises, the most delightful and tempting.

They were soon to have the mill ready for us, and we should be well and successful. I was good as bread, and the Indian Department in Washington would be pleased to see me. I would be well and happy and prosperous, and the future would be all right. Nic was so good and so generous, and I was so tired and so hungry that I was ready to do anything he asked of me.

"Well, Fish Hawk," said the major, when that good-natured, jovial man came into his room as alone as a shell, "I hope you have some news."

"I have been speaking," said Fish Hawk, coming quite toward the bunk and showing his big, white teeth, in what was intended for a smile.

"Speaking—what?"

"To the Gun of the Knight," replied Fish Hawk.

"And you gave Morton and the white squaw going off with them?"

"I was quite free."

"And why did they not go all the way?"

"If I told you that, Major, I would tell you where they went," said the wily Indian.

"And did you not come here to tell me?"

"Ah, Major, the white man is very un-wise."

"What do you mean, you savage?"

The Indian came still closer, and when all the tents and tipsies then contained, he said, in a low voice, and in the most impressive way possible, "Major, I am a big, and so big, that I can see the sun, and I can see the life a man may live, and I can see the life a man may not live. Major, I am wise, and I will not tell you what I know, but I will tell you what I think."

"Well, what do you think?"

"I think that Morton and the white squaw going off with them."

"Why do you think so?"

"Because I know it."

"Well, I think so, too, and I know it, but I want to know why you think so."

"Because I know it," repeated the Indian, with a grunt, and he turned and left the room, and the major was left to his reflections.

The Indian was gone for the purpose of making a report to Nic Nicholas, who was in the room of the Indian Department, and who was waiting for him in the office of the agent, Jerome Morton, who was now in the field, and who was the only man who could give Nic information as to the whereabouts of Morton and his wife.

The Indian was delighted with the success of his mission, and he was very proud of the confidence in him which Nic had shown, and he was very sure that Nic would be very grateful to him for the information he had brought him, and he was very sure that Nic would be very generous to him in return for it, and he was very sure that he was very hungry, and he was very sure that he would be very much better off if he could get something to eat, and he was very sure that he would be very much better off if he could get something to drink, and he was very sure that he would be very much better off if he could get a little of the money which he was sure Nic had given him to give to him, and he was very sure that he was

She took me aboard from the boat, and all it is, the finest craft of her size afloat. Three months ago I was sleeping in a cabin forward of the foremast, now with a stateroom aft of the quarter deck, and a cabin for my exclusive use forward of the mast. Quite a change, I tell you, from the cabin of the Shawnee.

They sent word to Sam, who still—Sam was in the hospital—that I was expected back, and I guess they told him the rest, for he came to see me the day before we sailed, and I guess he told Miss Gilmore all about the Shawnee, and the fight with the Sioux, and how I came to be a prisoner among the Indians, and how I came to be a deserter, and how I came to be a prisoner in Fort Clark, and all the fool sayings that I made in my delirium.

"Why, Sam," said I, "I thought you said you were a good deal better than I was, and yet you talk as if you had been sick yourself."

"Well, I guess I was sick, too, for a little while, but I wasn't sick enough to stay in the hospital, and I wasn't well enough to do much else, so I just sat around and—and—"

"Why, you mean to say you were in love, too, and—"

THE PLOWING MATCH.

The Barnard Grange plowing match came off on October 17th, with its usual interest, although the day was one of the worst of the season, a cold bleak and rain storm came up from the south, which made it very unpleasant for spectators and plow men.

But the plow men and the boys went at their work with a determination to do their best each one for himself. There were twenty teams entered, all in good condition and well trained and all did their work so well that it was hard for the judges in each class to decide which should be first. Sentiment by some seems to run more the plow men had to draw cards to see which should get the first prize as the score card showed a tie. The result was as follows:

THREE-HORSE SUB-FOLLOWING.
John Mitchel, first prize	131 points
George Anderson, second	124
Grove cuts.
Henry Black, third	120
George Ball, fourth	116
CLASS NO. 2.
Ed. Cook, first prize	136 points
James Willis, second	134
Wm. Sheppard, third	134
Drew cuts.
Ed. Shapton, fourth	130
Bliss Bowden, fifth	126
THREE-CLASS—GANG.
Joseph Trimble, 1st prize	126 points
Herbert Agar second	125
Willis E. Clark, third	124
Arthur Ball, fourth	92
SOUTH CLASS—SINGLE.
Tom Shapton, first prize	134 points
Wm. Shapton, second	131
Willie Trimble, third	129
Walter Black, fourth	128

The shooting match came off also in good shape, giving plenty of sport for the Charlevoix Gun Club.

The officers and members of Barnard Grange wish to extend their thanks to the business men of Charlevoix for their liberality in giving prizes. It shows that they are in sympathy with what may be of benefit to the farmers of our county.

W. E. CLARK, Secretary.

Thanking the Charlevoix business men and merchants for their generosity in giving so many good prizes to encourage better plowing. You will be interested to know how they are given away. The bids show where each article is placed and competent judges chosen for each class, to decide by points on score cards from one to twenty, given according to work done.

The executive committee being asked by the plow-men to give their reasons for going back to the stakes when the crowd was waiting patiently to hear decisions read, were told "it was none of their business," and refused to explain and showed their good nature by getting angry.

The organizers of the plowing match are disgusted with such actions. We would like to see the snow-men and those who give prizes manage deals with. Judges in this class were competent men and their decisions should stand.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The members of the Extemporaneous class are doing excellent work.

A very interesting program was rendered by the Lyceum last evening.

The Charlevoix and Petoskey junior teams played foot ball last Wednesday. Charlevoix won 5 to 0.

The County Teachers Examination was held in the central building last Thursday and Friday.

The girls are practicing hard at basket ball, and expects to have a champion team by Christmas.

The time of the senior supper was given in the S. U. Hall Saturday evening. The class was well pleased with the result.

"We won't go there any more," is what the Petoskey boys said when they went home Saturday defeated to the tune of 50 to 0.

The high school boys are trying to arrange a game with Saturday with Traverse City or Harbor Springs. It simply means another victory.

"one that boy with lecture tickets" didn't turn him away, because your family wants to hear the finest class of public entertainments that ever come to Charlevoix. Five numbers for $1.00.

SCHOOL COMMR COLUMN.

Act No. 98, public acts of 1897, provides: "That the board of education or the board of school trustees in the several cities, townships, villages and school districts of this state shall purchase a United States flag of a size not less than four feet two inches by eight feet and mode of good flag bunting "A," flag staff and the necessary appliances therefor and shall display said flag upon, near or in a conspicuous place within) the public school building during school hours and at such other times as to the said board may seem proper; and that the necessary funds to defray the expenses to be incurred herein shall be assessed and collected in the same manner as moneys for public school purposes are collected by law. And the primitive for neglect of duty provided in section two, chapter fourteen of the general school laws, shall apply to any school officer refusing to comply with the provisions of this act.

This is the penalty. Any person duly elected to the office of moderator, director, trustee, or treasurer of a school district, who shall neglect or refuse, without sufficient cause to qualify and serve as such, or who, having entered upon the duties of his office, shall neglect or refuse to perform any duty required of him by virtue of his office, shall forfeit the sum of ten dollars.

We are glad to note that the school officers throughout the county have complied with the law, with the exception of three or four at most.

We urge upon those school districts a compliance with the law. The flag is the symbol of our National Government. It is more than a banner of beautiful design and color. Its exact design and proportions are regulated by statute. The manner which it shall be flown and the hours in which it shall be displayed at military and naval posts, are prescribed in the Regulations. But the flag does not belong alone to the army or the navy. There are a very small part of our government, though representing its power. The flag is the glorious emblem of our nation. As such it should be set before the people clothed with all the sovereignty dignity, and beauty which are its just prerogatives.

RECLAIMING BAD BOYS.

Parole System is Making Good Citizens out of Them.

Miss Lillie Hamilton French tells in the World's Work how the parole system for boys who have been convicted for crime in New York is putting the majority of those whom it reaches upon the straight track to manly life and good citizenship. For instance, it says Miss French, "there was absolutely nothing except the common jail as a place of detention, nothing except the penitentiary as a place of punishment. For the benefit of these boys, then, the law was amended, and when Mr. Willard volunteered to take under his charge as an experiment, boys between the ages of 16 and 20 or 21, who had been for the first time convicted of misdemeanor, the court turned them over to him, parolling them instead of sending them to the house of refuge, or imprisoning them, or suspending sentence. During the course of the year there are sometimes as many as 1,500 of these boys arrested, at that susceptible age when, as one of the judges said to me, a few days in the tombs will act as a corrective while a few months' imprisonment will ruin them for life. Once let a boy get into the penitentiary and his hope for reputation is small. He must be saved in the first instance or not at all. And the result? I asked one of the judges. The result" he answered, "You remember some of those boys, nice nice lads, who were committed here they had. Had we no parole system we should have been obliged to send many of them to prison. We could not even have suspended their sentences. In such cases, what chances would they have had? For a few convicted of stealing, in a department store could not have been taken back under suspended sentence. The examples to the others would have been bad. But with the parole system the condition is changed. He goes back to prove himself."

Not an Apartment House Plan.

A third a neat little on the apartment house plan is a certainty in Franklin square. Two families of colored people the most white is among built into a cottage on the 50th of a dwelling one. The old bricks are rearing fancy gables at side in the old and, with an air of domestic concord. The lot is much larger than the usual size contributed by the corts, and it is divided into two portions by a portion of twigs lined with Cushions. In one apartment there are three young ladies and in the other four constitutes the family.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Gaudi Sun's Dream Locates Money Which Is Nearly Yours.

Dreams are often remarkable, perhaps when I am found to some dead balance even requires. Which such feeling—I was quite I dreamed—and I had a dream which my attention of a chip in Toledo. A little Fox, lively and sassy I had the same dream, strangely and suggestive, that in the night time I hoped against at the bottom of the garden in my childhood home. Lay at a little bank of earth, also lying rugged, silver, and gold, and not understandably looking up. I found before me, and watching me—the same as the landlord of the vista. As old hungry woman, having dreamed this so often I instantly relinquished my claim, which requisition it in my friends. Thought who was work of a superior intelligence, tried to locate the Tailor in the plot of ground in question, but he would not listen to good advantage, as he was so exhausted by spending lost. Well, some years ago the land and occasion on quite a long at the bottom of the garden, and wonderfully for the Gaudi's, a good gold crown was uncovered. How is it that a dream had of I Without and knowledge of the place or of the time the owner of the ground in question, and should have such a dream, when nothing of the kind had happened.

Paris Cabman.

On the national festival day cabs are allowed in Paris at high prices. The Paris cabman pays 15 francs as license on the day of the Grand Prix—the big horse race—in his mind $2.50 for the cab and an extra horse. In case he works long hours, the fee by the $2.50 Francs, or 34 cents American money, for a license, and as he has to give his horse rye for extra exertion to an ale house and fifty francs for the use of the cab, and the rest of the day of July cabbies of the street, but at the same time he makes sometimes as much as three or 30 Francs, but these are the days in the year, so he threatens to strike, and the big station some given as their bonus during the last summer months, when the cabs are busy, so that the cabbies are not on the ground. The cab and horse cost $1 a day down to 25 Francs, or $2.40 for the day. There are 15,000 cabs in Paris, and they have the monopoly of the sightseeing the times and how the underground railway which is to open in 1900 is to be completed.

New Form of Matrimony.

A French magazine has discovered that marriage is a failure and asked a jocular well known for the benefit of his views to suggest a remedy. He replied with a proposal which has the merit of originality. "There are those who still hold with marriage as at present established, he remarks in substance. They are in the minority. Why not give satisfaction to all? To this could be easily manageable by adopting two forms of marriage. After choosing each other affianced lovers would make their choice of divorcees. Conservative spouses would enter into those which can only be ended by the complicated, expensive and vexatious procedure of the divorce court. The unmanageable would enter into marriage, which would be for the contrary only only by mutual consent of both parties, but on the one side, dayle of either that he or she had disapproved of it. Both forms of matrimony would be equally recognized in the law."

MEASURING HUMIDITY.

How Scientists Manage to Take Humidity of the Atmosphere General.

To most minds scientific instruments are so fearfully and wonderfully constructed that to attempt to ever make or to try into the manner of their performing their functions, the results obtained being accepted as a matter of course. Yet many such instruments, while apparently more complicated are really based on very simple principles. Of these the thermometer and the barometer are of course now generally understood, although little was at first known. Another meteorological instrument, however, which is not quite so well known, and which is more mysterious to the public is the "Hygrometer," which the amount of moisture in the air is determined. While definitely constructed and balanced by means of fine springs the chief reliance is placed on a few horse hairs, which are extremely sensitive to the influence of dampness. When the air becomes moist they relax, and a pointer, fastened one end of which forms an indicator is drawn along a scale, which shows just to what extent the moisture is saturated with water. When the air is dry the horse hairs become tense and the indicator is returned to its appropriate place on the scale. It is in this way that track is kept of General Humidity, whose damp forces so effectively contribute to keep humanity in sneezing Warm weather.

NOTINKERING NEEDED

THE FOUNDATIONS OF NATIONAL GREATNESS APPROVED.

What Genius in the Country Was Lost for Want of Encouragement and Who Are Responsible for Making Over the Question at This Time.

Nothing is so manifest in the census reports, as far as given in the hand lists as the industrial and harmonious workings of the Dingley law. Wheat, corn, manufactures and wages have increased there we find in every instance, and every in her sense of term greater. Yet only the we are so accustomed to the visible fruitage and a sense of complacency. This is a perfect demonstration of the necessary wisdom of protection. In a speech made in the House of Representatives, March 30, 1842, Henry Clay said:

"The greatest work of creation ever is the market for the surplus and sale of its surplus produce. This produce must be in some shape, in order to be consumed, of animal or vegetable origin. The home market is that which is nearest and most intimately connected with the agriculture of the country. The home market is that which is most under our control. It is that which we can most easily and most effectually secure. Yet after great sacrifices, after enormous expenditures, after the loss of many valuable lives, after great disasters, after the expenditure of many millions of national treasure, we have at last secured the Mexican market, and we have opened the great market of Chile. Yet when we have succeeded in securing these two great foreign markets, we have but secured a market for the surplus of our agriculture, which, in the last year, amounted to two hundred and twenty millions of dollars, and which, in the future, may, if we continue to cultivate our home market, amount to three hundred millions of dollars. Indeed, the home market is the only one on which we can rely for the sale of our produce. Foreign markets are precarious, and we have no control over them. Our home market is the surplus of our agriculture, which, in the last year, amounted to two hundred and twenty

THREE MEN KILLED AND ONE MADE INSANE.

Tragedies Follow Quarrel at Ball in Lane, Kansas—Bloody Events of One Night—Colorado Rancheman Shoots Youths in His Rabbit Preserve.

As a result of a quarrel at a dance in Lane, Kan., two men were instantly killed and another fatally injured, and an other is insane from the shock. The affair was straight to a large number of people men of the county, and a general fight started. When it was over it was found that John Trudeau had been struck on the head with a large instrument and his skull fractured. Trudeau is now in a very low condition. Today was half the other dances scattered. One of them, Hughes Brothers, a real estate agent, went to his office to sleep, and was accompanied by J. McDonald. The men were in bed in the same of the other lodgers, and the two men were jumped in bed. The fellow then went upstairs and blew himself to pieces with a shotgun.

ENGINES COLLIDE; FOUR DEAD.

New York Central Employes Killed in Wreck at Chicago Junction.

One of the worst wrecks in the history of the Michigan division of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad occurred at Ottawa, N. Y. Four railroad men were killed and one was injured. The dead are: Fireman Fitzgerald, aged 24, a light engine which was running from Park 2 to yard 1, ran into the train, was killed and fatally injured the New York Central yards at Ottawa. The bodies of Thomas Palmerton and Strawman were found in the debris of the wreck. Both were badly scalded, but their bodies were not mutilated. Strawman was pinned under the boiler head of the engine and was scalded to death. Palmerton was necessary to extricate him. Fireman Fitzgerald was killed. The engine was found under the boiler. HOW THEY HURT THEM.

Hard Blows Democrats Inflicted on Trusts.

Didn't the Democrats hit the trusts hard when they were in power? Didn't they hit the whiskey trust when they extended the time for paying the million of million dollars taxes due the government? Didn't they hit it in the wind when they shifted with the tariff bill until the trust had dropped the earth for new music and brought it to you under the McKinley bill? Didn't they add it to the sugar trust when they repealed the sugar-trust provisions of the McKinley bill when trusts were not exceeding? Didn't the sugar trust, encouraged by authority, hit that provision so powerfully against every except among Republicans, who are not organized and never have been? Didn't they make the trusts tremble when they assert that only the protective tariff frightens them, while it is known that trusts are organized and financed in free trade England? Didn't they give land another staggering blow to the trust subsidies when they declared in favor of a bill which is known that Major Andrews' chairman James K. Jones has drawn up and the Major knows it? Didn't they do the other trust a hard when they declared against the plan to subsidize an iron trust that wants to Washington D. C. and ground the capital, employing men from every country in the free enterprise? That's the New York Sun's idea of a good time for the capital, employing men from every country in the free enterprise.—Hopkins (N. Y.) Times.

Our Salvation.

In a recent address President Mackenzie of the University of Wisconsin, said: "Our salvation as a nation, our power of public economy, depends solely upon the maintenance of the Union. Take away the Union and what is left? Nothing but a group of small, jealous, quarrelsome, petty states, which by reason of their jealousies would be easy prey for foreign aggression." Democrats, who are to be President Mackenzie's successors in the University of Wisconsin, are not so much of a jealous and quarrelsome party as to be easy prey for foreign aggression. Democrats are not afraid of foreign aggression. They are not afraid of anything but the success of the Republican party. They are not afraid of the Republican party because they know that it is the party of the people, and that the people are not afraid of it. They are afraid of the Democratic party because they know that it is the party of the trusts, and that the people are afraid of the trusts.—Hopkins (N. Y.) Times.

TRUE AS STEEL

A STORY OF

Copyright, 1901, by Robert Bonner's Sons.

Meanwhile Captain Fred and his Mexican Captive had reached the fort, where the latter was placed in the guardhouse to await the action of the commanding officer.

Lieutenant Ford, who had charge of the post during Colonel Morton's absence, was at first inclined to be very severe with the young Mexican, but the latter's pleadings, coupled with the fact that he was a prisoner of war, and that he had surrendered to Captain Fred, who had promised him his life, soon had the desired effect, and he was released from the guardhouse and allowed the freedom of the post, on his parole not to attempt escape.

When the news of the capture of Mexicans in the vicinity became known, as it did by the time Fred had returned to the fort, he was greatly praised for his bravery, and he was called upon to tell the story of his adventure over and over again, which he did, though he felt very modest about it, and he did not learn how little the old man had told of his share in the affair until long afterward, when he was with Colonel Morton, and he expressed to him his surprise at the way in which he had been treated by the Mexicans.

"Why, they treated me like a king," said he, "and I was only too glad to get away from them."

"Well, I guess they knew that you were a dangerous man," said the old man, with a smile.

"Dangerous! Why, what do you mean?" asked the young man, in surprise.

"Why, they knew that you had killed a dozen men, and they were afraid of you," replied the old man, with a smile.

"Killed a dozen men! I killed no one but Pedro Ortiz, and I only knocked him down," said the young man, in surprise.

"Well, that was enough for them, I guess," said the old man, with a smile.

"But how did they know that I had killed Pedro Ortiz?" asked the young man, in surprise.

"Why, I suppose he told them so himself," said the old man, with a smile.

"Why, I thought he was dead when I left him," said the young man, in surprise.

"Well, he was not, and he was very much alive when he came to the fort with a flag of truce and a party of his men to bury his dead and to demand the release of his nephew, Don Pedro Ortiz, who was a prisoner in our guardhouse charged with the murder of a Mexican

ELECTRIC LIGHTS!

FACTS CONCERNING THE LOCAL PLANT AND ITS RATES.

Most people are natural kickers when it comes to paying taxes, special assessments, or lights and water rates, and it takes a long time to become calm and reasonable when changes are made that tend, a direct bearing on their pocket books, be the change right or wrong. They are always suspicious of either bad management or corruption.

Consequently, when the Charlevoix plant abandoned the flat rate and adopted the meter system, there was much niggling and wave kicking. The council was composed of seven idiots, and the seven idiots were combined by one man—Jim Maxwelaire, superintendent. We frankly confess that the editor of this paper(bit about as much kicking as anybody.

This dissatisfaction, again, was argumented by the fact that meters went into use in the fall, and that the first official readings come in the long evenings. If the council did an unwise thing in the meter legislation, it was when they did this. Had the meters gone into use in the spring, low meter rates during the summer would have materially subdued the evening feeling.

But now, as to facts. Charlevoix rates are 10 cents per thousand kilowatts, with certain discounts, giving something like 12 cents net. In addition to this the village furnishes the lamps.

In order to meet the complaints concerning rates, Superintendent Maxwelaire has secured a statement of rates from a large number of cities and villages in Michigan. Among them are East Jordan, Petoskey, Traverse City, Marquette, Coldwater, Hubbard, Shelby, Fremont, Marshall, Lowell, Grand Ledge, South Haven, Durand and Portland.

Most of these places are cities, of much larger population than Charlevoix, and these places, consequently have larger patronage. In none of these towns are the rates lower than in Charlevoix, considering our discounts, and the value of lamps furnished. In only one of these above towns are lamps furnished by the plant. In several the rates are much higher, one charging 12½ cents against our ten. In five of the towns the plants are run by water power, hence at less expense than ours, and yet, in three out of the five the rates are higher than in Charlevoix. The correspondence goes to show that the meter system is used at all these places. The superintendent of the Marquette plant says:

"On the other hand we find the wastage of current incidental to our Flat rate system to be very large, estimated at one-third of our output without mentioned output. We also find that the meters now manufactured for measuring electric current are reliable and satisfactory in operation and of moderate cost, and that the Flat rate system is everywhere gradually being abandoned in favor of the Meter system. The advantage of the Meter system is manifest. The City will get pay for all the current used, and the users will be able to put in lamps liberally where ever required of necessity or convenience, and still pay for only the current actually used."

Again, the quality of our lights should not be maligned. Comparing same towards Charlevoix lights unfully up to the best standard. We have in our desk two lamps brought us by Supt. Martindale. One is a new one, the other an old one with the filament intact, but heavily coated inside with carbon. It burns dim, fully one third less light than the new one. It is unfair to judge the quality of the light by old lamps.

Superintendent Martindale will recommend to the council that a man be sent around to replace these lamps, which, the same now, have failed or die at the proper time. With a few lamp Charlevoix lights are as good as any.

Now as to our duty. Every citizen who pays taxes has an interest in the plant. It is also wise to see to our dividends. Hence, we should frankly consider the facts, and do our duty in sustaining it. No syndicate gets the earnings. It belongs to us, and the money we pay it returns to us.

AT HAZELDEN'S

IMPROVEMENTS AT BELVEDERE.

Great changes are being wrought over at the Charlevoix Summer House grounds under the direction of landscape gardener Wm. Oliver of Kalamazoo.

Away back in pioneer days the "old Stockadon tarn" was a lovely spot, with its terraces, sward and charming groves. We know whereof we speak, for thirty years ago the first summer we lived on the lower terrace in the old Stockadon log house, surrounded by the once lonesome but even now partly surround the Bardeen cottage.

But let us come back to the present. On the upper terrace the driveways, that have so long rutted on the plot, are being graded, gravelled and bestud by narrow border lawns. The beautiful groves have been cleared out and trimmed, the hummocks leveled until a most charming series of terraces have been the result.

The area fronting music hall has been plowed up, and, when finished, will provide a most beautiful "sun pan." Surrounded on four sides by the cottages nestled in the groves, this spot will be the loveliest within the boundaries of the "Home."

Down at Bayview station the grounds have been nicely graveled and a large oval flower bed created. The beach improvements are yet crude. The lagoon, however, is nearly done, and we may even now see what the finish promises to be. It is reported on the best good authority that in the near future a large casino or audience hall be erected between the railroad and the lagoon.

Down at "Pronounciery Point," on Newman street, Mr. Gurney is having his grounds improved by a graveled drive and lawn adornments, and similar improvements are contemplated in this vicinity.

The Association has planned improvements that it will take three years to complete. These improvements will go far beyond the nature of those described in this article.

It is safe to say that when these plans are fully worked out, the Charlevoix Summer House grounds will exceed in beauty those of any other summer resort in Northern Michigan.

Stopped Into Live Coals.

"When a child I burned my foot frightfully," writes W. H. Eads, of Johnsville, Va., "which caused his ribs big sores for 30 years, but Buck-len's Arnica Salve wholly cured me after everything else failed." NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Up to the hour of closing business last Tuesday checks to the amount of $31,145.72 had been cashed at the Cadillac State Bank in payment to the farmers of this vicinity for potatoes, since Sept. 1st. From estimates based on past years business in this line it is expected that not less than $200,000 will be paid out at the Cadillac bank during the potato selling season.

A leading resident of Petoskey last week received an anonymous letter through the mails warning him that his wife and two other ladies of L.P. town were to be murdered between the 20th and 30th of the the present month. The letter stated that 100 women were to be killed in the United States to avenge the life of Czolgosz. The authorities do not give much credence to the story and believe it the work of an idle jokist.

Capt. John Anderson of Mackinaw City, master and owner of the Soft Forester was lost overboard from his vessel and drowned last Friday night in the vicinity of Hog Island, one of the Beavers. It is thought that he was knocked overboard by the main boom during the storm. Capt. Anderson was a highly respected man and one of the best sailors in this region.

The official call for a special election in the township of Leelanau, Benzie and Antrim Bay, in Leelanau county, has been issued. The election will take place on the 11th of November and the amount of bonds asked is $26,000, the object to improve the highways and bridges. This is the action which is to determine whether a railroad shall be built from Traverse City to Northport, with a car ferry system in view for the near future.

Implementation of a large packing establishment were in East Jordan last week looking for a location for a branch of their institution. One of the conditions was the assurance that the farmers would raise at least 200 acres of cucumbers for which the seed will be furnished. They claimed that the price paid would enable the farmers to realize from forty dollars upwards per acre. The factory would only employ about 20 hands, mostly girls, for only two or three months each season but the advantage to the farmers would be considerable.

George Brandow, who lives six miles northeast of Cross Village, is in jail at Petoskey, charged with the murder of John Tartt, a neighbor. According to Brandow's story Tartt and a companion came to his house Saturday night with the avowed intention of doing him up. In the fight Tartt was killed. Brandow immediately started on foot for Petoskey, 25 miles distance, where he surrendered himself. He was later lodged in the county jail. He refuses to discuss the killing of Tartt, other than to say that he acted in self defense.

The Antrim County Sentinel contains this very interesting potato item: "Henry Richards's potato field of 100 acres is attracting much attention. A crew of about thirty men under Thos Pickrell are now engaged in digging the tubers, and it will probably take all next week with the best of weather. Mr. Richards is offering 5 cents a bushel, and is anxious to get more such stock. He has his potatoes contracted at 70 cents a bushel, and as the most conservative estimate the probable yield at 125 bushels an acre, while others put it much above this figure, it can be seen that Mr. Richards's expectations to realize enough the whole of his large farm and clear a tidy sum besides is self-based."

Wed Without Formality.

In Scotland the path to matrimony is broader and smoother than in England. The great builder time is changing in the fair week. All the shipyards are closed and man has time to marry. But many shirk the toll gates of the high road. Recently irregular marriages took place this fair in Glasgow. The method is simple and inexpensive. The couple take each other man and wife before witnesses and then they go to the sheriff and ask for warrant to register. There is an absence of fuss and wedding cake which appeals to the modest and economical minds. Besides miners, laborers, engineers and shipyard workers generally, the seventy numbered a ventriloquist, a physician, a valet, a music board officer, a hotel-keeper, a coachman, a soldier, a sea captain, a jubilary and a motor car driver—London Chronicle.

Learning Among the Clergy.

The idea that the education of a clergyman is to maintain and spread belief in a particular religion which he believes to have been revealed, and of a creed to see that he does it, is slowly dying away, until there is a doubt whether learning is of any use, and the man who possesses it, especially if it be of the older kind, is regarded often with business no doubt, and sometimes with admiration, but usually with a pity from which contempt is not entirely absent. What could you expect "with a country born magnate a few years ago when told that the largest parish was falling into disorder. "Why H——— (the rector) is a Hebrew scholar."—London Spectator.

Cringle's Self-Confidence.

The following story is indicative of Cringle's self-confidence. On one occasion he was asked in the chamber by a colleague if he belonged to Mantini's mess. "Why, regard Cringle, "They perhaps belong to Garibaldi's?" "No." "Then whose party do you belong to?" "Cringle's!"

Revenue Trade with Cuba.

The largest single item of trade between the United States and Korea is ginseng, which for the year 1900 amounted to $468,200. The Russian Oil company maintains extensive warehouses at Chemulpo, and is now erecting others at Fusan. The trade is growing rapidly.

Signs Which Attract Snakes.

It is a curious fact that there are certain kinds of noises which attract snakes. The whirr of the mowing machine is seen and in six months as many as 150 snakes have been killed on a grass farm in India by getting in front of the advancing machine.

Don't Want Christianity.

Hamilton King, consul general of the United States in Siam, says the people of that country do not want the Christian religion. They are believers in the Buddhistic faith, the faith of their fathers, of their king and of their country. But the king is willing that they should learn of Christianity and meanwhile work goes on unhindered.

Claim on Millionaire's Estate.

Mark Hirschberg of Moresnet, Mich., has contributed the work of establishing his claim as one of the four heirs to an estate of $1,000,000 left by his uncle, Andrew Brinnesser in Sweden. Hirschberg has sold his tailor shop in Moresnet and will leave for Russia.

John D. Rockefeller's favorite pastime outside of business, seems to pitching quoits, at which he is said to be very clever. Professor Marsh of Wisconsin, in speaking recently of the pecuniferous of Lake Winnebago, said that it is remarkable for its shallowness. Although it is about 32 miles in length and 10 or 12 miles in width, it has a depth of only 12 feet. This is due to the fact that the lake's basin is comparatively deepening and that its inlet is gradually filling its bottom with sandy or earthy deposit. This shallowness always has done for, then deep enough, perhaps because fish are more sensitive on the bottom of the lake than on the vegetation does not nourish in deep water.

HAMMOCK MEMORIES.

Mr. Brown Gets Nightmare and Falls on a Sidewalk.

It was this way. Brown, getting ill plainly, is fat. Some of the friends with characteristic imaginations say that he is fat enough to burst if he let that pass. He is fat, and the other night, after eyes at the collar, camp bait spread as well and fan going like a patchwork of a grandfather's clock, he served notice that he was going to stretch a hammock in the back yard and sleep there. Mrs. Brown made the usual succession of hysterics over it and neuralgia, but he was fixed in his purpose. Brown is the best and most generous husband in town. The hammock came with its design. The swaying hammock lacked only the fan and the swinging trustees of the big mustache. Brown had the fan and the mustache. Has they only cooked him, and the rain cooled him. His chins were a charm until he dreamed that he was a little young man in his twenties and was going for the foot of Main, sleigh stress as though pursued by a dozen mad dogs. The sleigh was a journal proof. All would have gone well, as a nightmare, but he spoke to his feet with a valiant shout, waved the imaginary reins, stirred up his dogs in a maelstrom, spent overboard head first, and came down sore on a sidewalk, thrown in all tight situations, comparatively. He had one side of his mouth trying to grow on again, his left eye bulged, he has an arm in a sling, and there is a dowel rung missing. The dowel he dodged in that could ten hundred years in a great poverty.—Chicago News.

VIEWS OF STATESMEN

SENATORS AND REPRESENTATIVES ON TARIFF REVISION.

The Country is Doing Well and Knows Great Need of Revision—Some Of the Dangers and Losses of Tariff Tinkering Should be Avoided.

Letters from senators and representatives in congress on the subject of tariff revision have been sent to the editor by the American Economist. From among them we find we get the following:

Senator Hanna:

"How can I make a definite answer now, for to against any proposition relating to protection, commerce and I do not know what any action or revision of the policy of country begins or what the proposed revisions are to be? Every sensible time is obliged to take this ground at least, that if it appears after extensive argument in answer to petitions that there is something that really seems to be done, then we could do so. I think so much of the tariff whatever come may be made up. I believe no revision or others disturbing the existing tariff and asking for new bills. The country is more generally prosperous, and it seems to me at the time that it would be folly to enter into any discussion of the tariff at setting. In what respects can you make the tariff any better? Of course, as we have so enormous volume growth during our affairs, it is possible that the law may be improved. It is not a question of agitation and tinkering not generally but only in particular cases. Where tariff changes in materiality and in the solution of the problem presented by industrial conditions.

"In my opinion it is yet to be proved that a change in any schedule is necessary in the disappointing of the American people of the protection effected thereby, unless we are ready to assign the destruction of industries as the suspension prices to be paid for possible slight temporary reductions in price. Business generally has been been in so satisfactory a condition throughout the country as it is at this time, neither has labor ever before been so generally employed and well paid.

"In view of these facts it seems to me that there is no good reason for a change in tariff schedules but every reason to continue the policy of the country. Who would disturb present conditions must be a bold adventurer, or a misguided man, or one who has taken advantage of the conditions to accumulate for his estate, at a time when will seriously menace the prosperity of the country, causing losses and bring in its path rude disaster, misery, want, poverty.

"On the other hand previous legislation may be carried on when and where it will benefit the people, and do injury to any of us.—A. Barbour."

Ex-Congressman Aldrich, of Alabama.

Editor American Economist: I am not a member of our Fifty-seventh congress, not having been a candidate for re-election.

In reply to your question, I am of the opinion that carefully considered revisions of the tariff tend to the enlargement of the American market for manufactured goods and to more benefical to the country than any general change in the tariff would be.

It seems to me that it would be better for the country that we put off the tariff revision, as it is and much continue for a long period the prosperity of the time in which business prosperity has been built and will be continued. Very truly, W. F. Aldrich.

REVISAL OF ROAD HOUSES.

Hotel Taverns Only a Source of Revenue at Present Time.

There are scattered in the country taverns here and there, up toward Wagner and down toward Brooklyn and over on Clinton Island—not many of them, but some. Some of them are thoroughfares on the Bloss and Gaylord road, by the Bell & Wilson Farm, but remain open which have not set least in the middle of the weeks and which are have a few out door, with faded pictures of Dexter and Mace in and Dewey and Sampson in the hall, in some cases, to be sure, though still upheld as a modern institution with great fields all about, they also now used to transmit the impression of the presence of the few candidate for sheriff, or the hotel keeper, and most of them would have gone out of business long ago if it had not been for the appointment of the city and the sidewalks. Now hotels are a great year generation who enjoy fast motors, if the idiom of time may ever I, go back to insert the good old days to gather, they must be supplied with gilded prosperity disappointed, to find some Blue machine during a better improvement been ever in their ear. INDIANS MUST MARRY

LOVE AFFAIRS MUST BE CONDUCTED WITH PROPRIETY.

Uncle Sam Exerts Them of to Prevent Mortality Among His Wards on Ships and Other Reservations—Lost Trust Money to Be Valuable.

Uncle Sam is anxious to see his Indian wards married. Government officials are very emphatic in the matter of the Indian marriage question. During a visit I was desirous of making to one of the Indian agencies in Oklahoma I was informed that the Indian agent was absent on a tour of inspection among the Indians of the Kiowa, Comanche and Apache reservations, in the western part of the state, for the purpose of marrying a large number of Indian couples.

Upon inquiry I ascertained that the agent was not a minister of the gospel, nor a justice of the peace, but was a clerk in the Department at Washington, having been appointed to the position by President Roosevelt. The agent had taken with him a supply of marriage licenses, which he was to issue to the Indians he found living together as man and wife, but who had not been married by the ceremony of any minister of the gospel or civil magistrate. The agent was also to see that the ceremony was performed by some person authorized to perform the marriage ceremony in the Indian Territory, and he was also to see that the parties married were of proper age to marry, and that they were not related to each other within the degree of consanguinity or affinity prohibited by the laws of the Indian Territory. The agent was also to see that the Indians married were in good health, and that they were not afflicted with any of the diseases which are liable to be communicated to their offspring, and that they were not addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors to such a degree as to make them dangerous to society or themselves. The agent was also to see that the Indians married were of a sober and industrious character, and that they were able to support their families, and that they were not habitual gamblers, or given to other vicious practices.

The agent was also to see that the Indians married were not married in violation of the laws of the Indian Territory, which provide that persons who have married one husband or wife shall not be married again while the husband or wife of the first marriage is living, and that persons who are married shall not be married within a specified time after the granting of a divorce. The agent was also to see that the Indians married were not married in violation of the laws of the Indian Territory, which provide that persons who have married a husband or wife who has been sentenced to the penitentiary for a term of years shall not be married again while the husband or wife is living, unless the person who was sentenced to the penitentiary has been pardoned out of the penitentiary, or has served the term of imprisonment for which he was sentenced, and has been discharged from the penitentiary by the expiration of his sentence.

The agent was also to see that the Indians married were not married in violation of the laws of the Indian Territory, which provide that persons who have married a husband or wife who has been adjudged insane shall not be married again while the husband or wife of the first marriage is living, unless the person who was adjudged insane has been discharged from the asylum in which he was confined on account of his insanity, and has been declared by the proper authorities of the asylum to be sane.

The agent was also to see that the Indians married were married in accordance with the laws of the Indian Territory, which provide that persons who have married a husband or wife who has been adjudged to be a habitual drunkard shall not be married again while the husband or wife of the first marriage is living, unless the person who was adjudged to be a habitual drunkard has been declared by the proper authorities to be sober and reformed.

The agent was also to see that the Indians married were married in accordance with the laws of the Indian Territory, which provide that persons who have married a husband or wife who has been convicted of a felony shall not be married again while the husband or wife of the first marriage is living, unless the person who was convicted of a felony has been pardoned out of the penitentiary, or has served the term of imprisonment for which he was sentenced, and has been discharged from the penitentiary by the expiration of his sentence.

The agent was also to see that the Indians married were married in accordance with the laws of the Indian Territory, which provide that persons who have married a husband or wife who has been adjudged to be a habitual criminal shall not be married again while the husband or wife of the first marriage is living, unless the person who was adjudged to be a habitual criminal

SEEKING FOR MISS STONE.

Six Young Bulgarians Band Themselves to Search for Missionary.

A REPORT OF DEATH AGAIN.

Sofia Newspaper Gives Detailed Account of Kidnaping of Women by Brigands — It Is Known of Heads.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Oct. 29.—Six young Bulgarians have bonded themselves to search Mr. Miss Stone, the American missionary, and her companion Mme. Tsilka, and with the consent of the Bulgarian authorities have left name. for Mehomia with this object in view. The account of news about Miss Stone has led to a revival of the report that she has already been killed and that the brigands have dispersed into Macedonia, perhaps in small parties. Inquiries made the following statement regarding Miss Stone this morning (Monday).

"Miss Stone is living also will be found within ten days. Three different parties are now en route to meet her on an appointment with the brigands. Protoposov has sent two persons from Sofia. They are Macedonians and know the country well. A party of Turks has gone from Gadskov with the same object. They are former pupils of Miss Stone and volunteered for this trip. Mr. Dickinson must all expenses. The third party consisting of one sent by the Russian minister.

In a Mysterious Affair.

"This is the most mysterious affair we have had since the court photographer was murdered in the wood near Sarakiov eighteen years ago. He is still living, and so Miss Stone's life will be regarded until the end of several discovered.

"It is evidence that robbers has been found in the region for a month. The movements have driven the brigands from the Turkish frontier and it is now a race between the three rival parties to see which will find Miss Stone and be sure to find her if living. News has reached us that the brigands were attacked by Turkish troops, but this is not confirmed.

It Is Rumored—or Death.

While the government declines to parley with the brigands, it instructed every effort to find Miss Stone. The religious dominions are now in some Turkish hands. The Turks invariably permit them to be unchanged. The Sultan will visit Miss Stone if they do not get the ransom. They have sent out a short time a line will be built, equipped with American cars to run from the ocean from "Tirnova to the Parthenon at Athens.

QUERIES FOR W. S. SCHLEY

Cross-Examination of the Admiral the Next Step.

COURT WILL TAKE A HAND.

Questioning by Attorney Rayner and the Judge Advocate May Occupy Two Days Rayner Will Ask a Complete Vindication of Schley.

Washington, Oct. 29.—The next step in the proceedings of the Schley court of inquiry is to place the wounded under examination by Mr. Rayner in order to bring out more strongly the points which he had made and to make clear the ones which he left obscure. In the cross-examination of Schley occurs the greatest interest. The judge advocate has prepared a long list of questions which he intends to ask the witness, and the court has in store many more up which it should enlightenment. It was noted that during Schley's examination of the Sampson controversy, which he gave during the two days he was on the stand, Admiral Benham wrote on slips of paper questions which the court will ask when the cross-examination has been completed. It is estimated that it will require fully two days to complete the cross-examination. Then will follow some questions by the court and probably another day will be occupied in redirect examination. This finished, witnesses will be called in rebuttal. By then the navy department will endeavor to show that Schley had received direct information that the Spanish squadron was in Santiago before he began his navy-search movement. The retrograde movement, his failure to destroy the Cuban cable, the Ingram correspondence seem to be the points on which the navy department mainly relies to place its case.

No Criticism of "Rough."

As for the Brooklyn "rough" stormy incidents of the battle of Santiago and the one which has been many months discussed than any one of the two preceding, it is probable not to be any officers directly concerned in this investigation that whatever individual officers may have said, the department itself has never made any criticism of Schley for that maneuver. Secretary Long, in his letter made no mention of it and it is now known that he had early information that Cook and not Schley had given the order—that Cook had repeated it at a good tactical move and that officers who claim it for himself had approved it as such. It is claimed in the Admiral's friends here that Sampson in his narrative of events very nearly demolished or authoritatively explained the mass of testimony which had piled up against him concerning the other charge. In his examination of the witness Mr. Rayner hopes similarly to dispose of all the real, and in his summing-up will endeavor to show how his client should receive full vindication at the hands of the court as he has already received it from the public.

Invitation from Louisville.

Louisville, Oct. 29.—A telegram signed by Mayor Weaver Marlin, H. Taylor president of the board of trade, Caroline Pulliam president of the Commercial Club and others, has been sent to Rear Admiral Schley in Washington to visit Louisville after he has visited Chicago on invitation of the Hamilton club. Admiral Schley accepted an invitation to attend the triennial conclave of Knights Templar in Louisville in August last, but later wrote that it would be impossible for him to be present.

Schley Again on Stand.

Contrary to expectations Judge Advocate Lemly began his cross-examination Monday morning and assumed the role of prosecutor so clearly that the friends of Admiral Schley in an unofficial point of view were committed to abandon that position. Captain Lemly read from the naval regulations in an attempt to show that Schley's act was improper in that he had taken a pilot at Little Inlet and gave it to his signaling officer, Lieutenant Hayes, instead of in the proper way, the signal "Follow the flag" was a sufficient plan of signal.

Nelson at Trafalgar, signaled "England expects every man to do his duty." and the command "Follow the flag" conveyed the same. Schley's words were, "Follow the flag."

Admiral Dewey and his colleagues resumed the consultation, and, returning announced that they waived all questions raised concerning Schley's conduct of the fleet after the data when he assumed command of the squadron.

Judge Advocate Lemly overlooked an opportunity to substantiate the charges made in the department report. He asked a multitude of questions calculated to show that Schley was guilty of various misdemeanors, but proved little trivial details until the faces of the admirals on the court showed they were growing impatient. Lemly did his best to elicit information unfavorable to Schley, but made no effort to develop other lines of evidence. Decisions the latter advocate will leave it to Schley's counsel to bring out that part of the testimony.

Kills Wife and Himself.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—Maddened by the report that his wife, from whom he had separated, was going to secure a divorce and marry again, James Kennedy killed her and then ended his life by sending a bullet into his temple. The tragedy occurred at the residence of Mrs. Annie Barrett, mother of Mrs. Kennedy.

Outline of Message.

New York, Oct. 28.—The President's message is nearly finished and Mr. Roosevelt has informed the members of the cabinet that he will read it to them for criticism in the present week, in the presence of the Lord." In the evening the service was held in the M. P. Church and was the last of the Union Gospel Meetings. The church was full and a forceful sermon was preached by Dr. T. D. Hughes of the Baptist church.

By the plan of these Union Meetings, children's services are being held each afternoon at 3:30 for half an hour, and a public Gospel Meeting each evening at 7:30, in the Baptist church. Next week the meetings will be held in the Congregational church. All readers are cordially invited to attend any or all of these meetings.

Tot Causes Night Alarm.

"One night my brother's baby was taken with Croup," writes Mrs. J. C. Snider, of Crittenden, Ky., "it seemed it would strangle before we could get a doctor, so we gave it Dr. King's New Discovery, which gave quick relief and permanently cured it. We always keep it in the house to protect our children from Croup and Whooping Cough. It cured one of a chronic bronchial trouble, that no other medicine would relieve." Cold Yes and Tipple.

A wealthy German-American citizen, fond of fishing, is well known as a big, splendid proportions and admirable vigor reminding one of a Grand Duke. Professional carries along in his basket a pint flask filled with a fine brown liquid, which he sips at interval of half an hour through the day. As the German likes of such sociability on the water is the "Dutch treat," on one thought it strange that he never invited a friend to join him in a dram. The common opinion was that he preferred to enjoy his schnapps alone. The other day it was accidentally learned that the flask contained cold tea. "I never drink anything else on excursions like these," he explained. "Neither beer, whisky nor water. Cold tea is an excellent substitute for all. No matter how hot the day, you will never get thirsty if you take an occasional sip of cold tea. It is all the more refreshing because it is cold and sufficiently orating to please every one. I do not ask others to try it. It pleases me therefore I have used it twenty-five years and shall continue to use it as long as I am able to go fishing. It is unsweetened."—New York Press.

A Freethinks Daily on Sin.

Jake Quincy Adams seems to limit his sleep to four hours while occupying the president's chair. At a recent time in the morning, stripped to the skin, his clothes lying on the bank of the Potomac. This was his quietus to guard against the miasma of the White House.

The Answer of Afghanistan.

The answer of Afghanistan, Abdurhman Khan, was born about 1830. He has been a very strong man, and held his throne by the power of his sword. During the civil war of 1864 he took a leading part in support of his father's claim to the throne. He was successful for a time, and won the battle of Shakhabad and Khelat-i-Ghilzai.

A City of Dressmakers.

Paris leads the world in dressmaking; it is estimated that there are 50,000 persons employed in the dressmaking establishments of the city, and if one includes the workers who design and make the materials used by the dressmakers about 1,400,000 persons are engaged in the struggle to satisfy woman's love of clothing.

Where Opals Come From.

Formerly most opals came from Hungary, and more recently from Mexico. In 1889 an Australian hunter, while pursuing a wounded kangaroo, found an opal. Since that time Australia has yielded nearly $1,000,000 worth of opals.

Dieting, Maybe.

The suggestion is that the German government has no expectation of the adoption of the proposed tariff, but has brought it forward to please the Anti-Semites and at the same time to let them see how impossible their demands are.—New York Tribune.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor.

The attendance at the services shows some improvement. There is an excellent spirit prevading the entire church and reaches into all its departments

The Prayer Meetings have been well attended and interesting of late. Last Sunday morning the pastor preached on the subject "Time of Refreshing," the text being, "When the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord." In the evening the service was held in the M. P. Church and was the last of the Union Gospel Meetings. The church was full and a forceful sermon was preached by Dr. T. D. Hughes of the Baptist church.

SCHOOL COMM'R COLUMN.

Recitation is an important matter. All that expert teaching can do should be done in order to deepen and fix the pupil's interest in scholarship. In this letter we wish to address the pupil. When the topic is announced or the question is put and your name is called, step out at once. To be able to do this you must give your undivided attention to the class work. When you the avoid negligence, mind exact, unnecessarily place feet and hands in a graceful position, avoid every indication of carelessness or restlessness. Acquire through habit, ease of position, and self-conscious embarrassment will disappear and your power increase.

Hence your mind so that its keenest abilities may be called into action. A listless attitude of mind is dullness, for the time at least. By acquiring a brisk and earnest manner you prompt and promote your natural ability.

Pronounce each word correctly, construct each sentence so that the thought is clearly expressed, has force to arouse attention and has the merit of diction which makes the thought attractive to hearers. The use of a faulty form humiliates, discredits self, and the school, retards your progress and cramp the mind. Where you use poor attributes once in life, you will use its act of correct expression countless times, for you will never think a thing, read a thing, say a thing, or write a thing without using your knowledge of the dictionary, grammar, composition and rhetoric.

Avoid beginning your recitation with "Well," "it says," "The book says," "He says" or closing with such words as "That is all I know about it" etc.

Recite to the class and teacher, not to the teacher alone. Estimate your competency in this point by your success in securing and holding the attention of the class.

You must give positive evidence that, in your preparation of your work, you have penetrated the pith of the topic under consideration and have clearly thought it out. You will become skilled in this point by learning how to study.

Mrs. James S. Lewis of Petoskey died suddenly in Grand Rapids Saturday morning of heart disease supposed induced by an attack of pneumonia. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Cushman, Mrs. Lewis' sister had been to the exposition. Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Cushman stopped in Grand Rapids on their way home to visit some friends and Mr. Lewis returned home. Mrs. Lewis was taken down with pneumonia. Her sister had been taken sick Friday and at 9 o'clock next morning she died from heart failure. Mr. Lewis received a telegram Saturday containing information of Mrs. Lewis' serious condition and a half hour later just as he was taking the train was handed a second telegram announcing her death.

Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, was executed at Auburn early Tuesday morning. He was stolid to the last, and in the chair, while they were binding him, declared that he did not regret his crime.

A Floridian Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. P. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. Nothing helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at F. G. Hines & Co's drug store.

—The Sentinel job office has received and is receiving the finest line of job stock ever brought to Charlevoix. Note, letter, statement, bill and a big line of card goods. A large variety to select from.

—The Indians of the Charlevoix High School feel last team with pride. The Harbor Springs High School team at Horseshoe Park in this village, Saturday afternoon for the Northern Michigan championship. Admission 15 cents.

—Charlevoix people should encourage the high school before course by buying season tickets. The course embraces high class entertainments and the money will be well spent. The first of the course will occur at the M. E. church November 14th—Dougherty Swiss Bell Ringers and Concert Company.

—We presume there is not a farmer in Northern Michigan who does not wish he had planted more potatoes last spring, when he sets what he has for 50 cents per bushel. And that prompts us to remark again that farmers should plant large acreage to potatoes every spring. Of course there are bad years, but one good year like the present makes up for three bad ones. Our observation is that the average price of potatoes is 50 cents, one year with another, and when the farmer gets that price he is doing well. The fifty cent year comes at least one in three, and just think of 50 acres of potatoes at 50 cents per bushel! And the favorable features of it is that the potato crop in Northern Michigan is rarely ever a failure.

—School commencement week has been suffering for five weeks with influenza. He made a big foot about it notwithstanding the fact that he had but 20 of the big boots.

—Kewaunee parties have purchased the retired Harbor steamer Michigan, half a century old, and are fitting her out for a cargo of Christmas trees. The Caledonia was built at Sangeen, Canada, in 1861.

—A Manistee City special says that Rev. Gilbert W. Hulse, pastor of the M. E. church at that place, has taken out a deer license. He will spend a week or ten days hunting in the upper peninsula. Mr. Hulse is well known here.

—The log Martin took a party of hunters to the north shore Tuesday. The course was made by an Edwards, Archie Newland, Henry Marshall, Archie McDonald, Eugene Austin, Harry Jamieson, Hunter Allen, Frank Shawley, Rice Beamier, W. J. Winchman, Ben Cook.

—Perley Simard, editor Smith of the Charlevoix Sentinel, neither the church nor society ladies that while he will give them notices in his paper he will hereafter refuse to receive them over the telephone. Telephone orders are certainly bad enough, but it is worse to pay a cent "postage" to find a free notice or something or other. Such has been the case with the Sentinel several times lately.

—The long contested land case, involving the title to the Crosby property in the north village, containing Dr. Crosby's new residence and the field opposite, was settled in the Pinney division court, by a verdict of no cause for action. It was a case growing out of an Indian title, Dudt and Kirby of Harbor Springs suing on disposses claims on the ground that the discovery of the traditional Indian lot. The result practically clears up Dr. Crosby's title.

—The register of deeds at Grand Haven, has received deeds which have been forwarded by Chicago parties for registering. When the property described was looked up it was found to be located in Ionia Michigan. The power of land was in the hands of friend Hayes and another of the same name. It is understood that both parties to the transaction are Chicago attorneys. The deeds were returned to the unsophisticated purchaser with the statement that he would have to make a deed to get the land, and he did.

—The Michigan fish commission last Saturday afternoon and decided upon locations for the two new fish hatcheries authorized by the last legislature. The trout fishery will be on the east branch of the Au Sable river, near Grayling, in Crawford county, while the bass hatchery will be in Dayton Plains, Oakland county. The minimum output of the fish commission hatcheries so far for any one year has been 8,000,000 trout and 500,000 bass fry. With the new hatcheries the commission hopes to produce from 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 trout fry and 4,000,000 bass fry a year.

—Fire at what the Grand Rapids Torch says should read—"There is to be a fire—there ought to detach a portion of the eastern part of Charlevoix county and annex it to Emmet, as the people over there would prefer to have Petoskey for their county seat because it is larger." A Petoskey correspondent in Petoskey says the idea of Charlevoix county. That Emmet will take what she wants and give the rest to Antrim. Emmet is real good to us but we are afraid that Charlevoix county will be heard from before these Petoskey politicians get through with their Tassetel schemes. Nothing is said about the Emmet lands which now are part of Charlevoix county. Perhaps Emmet expects to buy them from some other source with them."

—The township board is wrestling with a road question that will fair to get into the courts. The street crossing the railroad track from over in the A. M. Ross district, crosses but a few rods from the state road running the first tunnel street, and bought a strip of land and deeded it to the township, by which the Ross road would intersect the state road on this side of the railroad track. The township commissioner condemned the old road and laid out the new, and now comes Messrs. Pattengill, Kunzelman, Mosher and others, represented by Mosher, appealing to the township board against the action of the commissioner. We know nothing about the merits of the case, but if it be taken to court we will probably sustain the commissioner, as it should.

—Traverse City was defeated by Cadillac at foot ball at Cadillac last Saturday. Come north, you Cadillac kids, and you will consider Traverse a juvenile team.

—The Petoskey Record uses the word "manard" in connection with the report that Emmet county is trying to disorganize Charlevoix county, and says, "It is undoubtedly true that the township of Bay, Melrose, Hudson, Chandler and Boyne Valley, the last four of which are cut off from their county seat by Pine and Walloon lakes would be better accommodated in all ways if attached to Emmet county with the county seat at Petoskey. Locomotive Emmet county would gladly receive them, but our neighbors over at Charlevoix (the beautiful) need not jump to the conclusion that we are scheming to dismember Charlevoix county. If any of the eastern townships of that county are ever attached to Emmet county it will be at the act of the people of Charlevoix county." The Democrat has the ear about it "Don't be so hasty with us, Brother Sentinel. Permit us to inform you that the information on which our special was based came from a Charlevoix county supervisor, and instead of the "fool correspondent" this man is one of the best men we have from Charlevoix county."

OLD CHARLEVOIX BUILDINGS.

In connection with the probability that three brick blocks will be erected in Charlevoix next summer, the old points counts the pioneer buildings that are yet in use.

Probably the oldest building on Bridge street that stands intact and is now in use is the "Chamberlain building," on the northwest corner of Bridge and Clinton, now occupied by Fowler's meat market. It was built in 1867, and has had many tenants. The upstairs was occupied as a lodge room.

The Mason home on the hill at the north end of Bridge street is one of the oldest residences having been built in 1869. The old Jackson Ingalls house on State street, owned by A. T. Burnett, was built in 1868, and the Ben Campbell home, next let west, was built in 1870. M. J. Stockman's house on Bridge was built in 1869. The Aldrich and Washburn residences on Main street, the latter has been recent and enlarged, were built in 1867 and 1868 respectively, and the Morgan building on State street, from the Baptist church was built in 1869.

Perhaps the oldest landmark is now hidden by a modern front. It is the building occupied by Mr. Cohen's store. It was the wing of the old Philo Rear's house, which was built in Antrim in 1865. The main portion of the building now stands on Main street, in the rear of Burnett's store. The Rear store building, now occupied by L. See, was built in 1866, and the ware-house in its rear at the same time.

An old relic, now in good shape, is the house occupied by A. B. Fleischer. It was built in 1870 by Capt. Clinton and W. C. Newman, now deceased, for a home.

The old Fox home, west of the Emmet City Hotel, was built in 1867, and the west wing of the old hotel was built the same year.

The wing of the Isaac Green residence was built in 1866, and the old Allaire home now the south wing of the Antrim building, was built as early in 1865, by a man named Van Riper, but the Baldwin residence, on the same street, was one of the first. The small wing of the M. E. parsonage, was built in 1865, and occupied by Rev. Mr. Ingalls as the pastor's home. The house of Geo. A. Wallace, now one of the most attractive places in town, was built early in the 70's.

The Hoak home, on the north side was built in 1867, and the old Dixon home, now in use as one of the inns, was erected in 1870.

The only pioneer buildings left to adorn the eye of the redeeming citizen, are the old "Dougherty and Cox" houses on Bridge street. They were built in 1866, and are now practically worthless incumbrances on valuable land.

Mrs. J. C. Emory has moved her millinery stock to the building Price occupies south of the central drug store.

ASSASSIN IS DEAD.

Czolgosz's Life Shocked Out in Auburn Prison.

PAYS FULL PENALTY.

Slayer of a President Dies in Ignominy for His Dastardly Crime.

End of the Cowardly Anarchist Who Martyrdom's Short Down the Nation's Court—His Worthless Life Taken to Manifest of the Law Which He disregarded—Quota Executed for the Entire Prison Ninety Thousand.

Leon F. Czolgosz, the murderer of President McKinley, was electrocuted at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning in Auburn prison. The execution of the man who shot down the president of America took place in the prison yard. Czolgosz was pronounced dead by Dr. Carlos F. Macdonald, Dr. Gerry and Dr. Spitzka. Most detailed accounts of the execution appear in other columns.

The execution was in every respect the same as that of any other man who has been executed in the prison. The condition of the prisoner was the same as that of any other man who has been executed. The only exceptions were the presence of the reporters and the crowd outside the prison.

Czolgosz walked to the chair without assistance. He was not pinioned. He sat down in the chair and the electrodes were adjusted to his right leg and his back. The current was turned on at 7:06 and was kept on for 1 minute. Dr. Macdonald, Dr. Gerry and Dr. Spitzka made a examination and the current was turned on again for 1 minute. The doctors then pronounced the man dead.

New Coast Line of the Southern Pacific Co.

California is known now all over the world as the growing, energetic state and its attractions have been growing in renown by the completion of the Southern Pacific Company's coast line to Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo and Los Angeles. Passing through but four small towns between San Francisco and Los Angeles, the new line covers a distance of 470 miles along the ocean shore, between the seat of life and Franciscan fathers, passes near the most picturesque of the California missions, and traverses a variety of scenes and scenery not included in any other railway in the world. Passing through Santa Cruz, Monterey and the great hotel of Del Monte, with the many great grounds surrounding it, are reached by this route. The great redwoods of the Santa Cruz mountains are on a very large outspan of the line, and famous all year resorts as Paso Robles Hot Springs, San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara are directly on the new line. The company has arranged to issue all tickets over this route, and to a traveler desiring to see the most of the best that this line is prepared, literally.

The World of Beauty.

The sweet influences of the heavenly world are sometimes brought to us in a long while was Mapleton, the village of Mr. Hardy, and the people of that place have a reputation for hospitality. Which the writer's experience was sufficiently pleasant to warrant the belief that the reputation is well deserved. Mr. Hardy, the village blacksmith, was a man of some prominence in the community, and his family was one of the most hospitable in the village. Mrs. Hardy was a woman of great energy and good sense, and her family was a model one in every respect. The writer was a guest at their hospitable board for a few days, and he was made to feel that he was at home in the fullest sense of the word. Mr. Hardy was a man of few words, but he was a good listener, and he was a man who was well informed on all the topics of the day. Mrs. Hardy was a woman who was well informed on all the topics of the day. Mrs. Hardy was a woman who was well informed on all the topics of the day. Mrs. Hardy was a woman

CURRENT TOPICS.

The imperial dead beat of Turkey is in trouble again. He owes France, after sending monthly statements for a year or more, with a bader eye, lay favor, has sent a fleet to Turkish waters. Abdul has decided to "pud up" rather than fight.

King Edward's brother-in-law, Frederick, of Germany, was only emperor 100 days, and was more crowned. Now there are more than fifteen who are here to be crowned. That he is ill is certain, and that one of the throat will be the cause of his death is the fear, although the government will not acknowledge it.

Greater Hayti has a reformed municipal government, and a democratic municipal council that enjoins anything of the kind on the rulers of Michigan. In Hayti, property, railroads and all wealth of corporation, combine with liquor and classes honest men to pass in the papers.

We heartily agree with the Petoskey Record in the following: "A great many things may be lacking in the make-up of Lake Shore social capital, but everyone has never until wintering out was in the great metropolis of Michigan. The greatest metropolis has medical large it from the effects of the venom given to stir up a mountain, salary freight has always well at at saloons, but he was no more resented to the side profile of the bards. Tom Mr. Brown was at Vicksburg, Shiloh or Petersburg, or Shooting at Five Forks. The white shakeroons seem pleasant, and we worthy the pale and distinguished officers, and the American people will be glad when the cost of dignity is a thing of the past."

Another recent Boer victory in south Africa, and England is beaten again. A second, several columns and a large number of soldiers were killed and many wounded.

The sober court of dignity is up in judges. At the convention was a Dowie. The opponents are backed, and admiral Dewey and the commander, judges and women with the commander, on a hand. The vindication of sober is certain.

George Kyes took out a hunting license this fall. He is 82 years old and declares he is growing younger. He feels more vigorous than for many years.—Arena.

Arrangements have been made whereby Hart & Hart, real estate dealers of Petoskey, will undertake the sale of the Nellieton addition to South Arm.

Presiding Elder Carrel, assisted by Revs. Eldred and Faulkner and others, laid the corner stone of a new Methodist church at Elk Rapids lately. The building is to be of brick, costing between four and five thousand dollars.

Central Lake Church. Uncle Luther Evans of Eastport, was in town last Friday after a seven weeks illness. He went to the G. A. R. encampment at Cleveland but was taken to and returned home while he has been confined to his bed since.

City Engineer Fred Williams and surveyor John Kiley expect to finish the survey of the railroad from Springvale to Wolverine this week. The road will be of standard gauge, steel rails, and work will begin at once by the owners, Cobb & Mitchell. It will be a continuation of the Boyne Falls and Springvale line, and it is hoped to have trains running through from Boyne Falls to Wolverine within one month.—Pioneer Independent.

Samuel Barlond, a prosperous farmer of Deer Creek township, living four miles east of Petoskey committed suicide Thursday morning by firing a shotgun into his mouth, death resulting instantly. He has complained for years of severe pains in the head, probably the result of a fall he sustained receiving on the occasion of the civil war. He was highly respected.

A syndicate of capitalists, represented by W. S. Shaw, of Boyne City, last week purchased 300 acres of land near Norway in the upper peninsula. The property adjoins the Aragon mine and contains a valuable deposit of iron ore. The track adjoins the Chicago & Northwestern right of way. It is the plan of the new company to erect at Boyne City, which is has an extensive charcoal plant, a smelter and iron furnace.

The annual meeting of the Northern Michigan schoolmasters' club is to be held at Cadillac during the Thanksgiving vacation, Friday and Saturday, Nov. 29 and 30. Superintendent of Public Instruction Dickman and President Albert Leonard of the State Normal School System are expected to be present, and the causes of many defects of the leading educators of the state are on the program. It is expected that the meeting will be one of the best of its kind ever held.

Lake Linden Enterprise: The new coaches for the Detroit & Charlevoix R. R. arrived Monday night from Chicago. They are of the well known Pullman make and entirely first class in appearance and appointments as good in fact as the day coaches on any trunk line in Michigan. One is a regular day coach and the other a combined smoker and baggage coach. They are heated with the Baker hot water system and the cleaers supplied with lavatories as well as the usual accommodations. Passengers will have no cause to complain of the accommodations on the road.

Grand Traverse Herald: Saturday was the usual busy day of the season for pickers in this city, the local banks paying out about $20,000 which went to potato growers alone. The Slade Bank had paid out $10,000 up to 5 o'clock and at 4 o'clock the amount paid out by the First National Bank was between $6,000 and $10,000. The market price was about 20 cents a bushel, but several loads brought more, one load going for 56 cents. As to quantity today's receipts of stock aggregated more than any other day this season. The quality of the stock is especially fine.

WOMAN A PENSION SWINDLER.

Mrs. Sarah J. Flynn, Prominent in South Dakota, Finds Guilty.

Mrs. Sarah J. Flynn, of Lake Preston, S. D., some time prominent in Women's Relief Corps circles, was convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary at South Dakota's capital last week for pension fraud. Her conviction was secured after a long trial, in which she was defended by the ex-Senator Pettigrew. Mrs. Flynn's husband died in the Grand Army of the Republic, and she was granted a pension. Later she married Mr. Flynn, and he died. Then she married Mr. Flynn, and he died. Then she married Mr. Flynn, and he died. Then

GLIMPSES OF TWO POETS.

Miss Louisa Courtenay Dined with Sentiment and Samuel Rogers.

Miss Louisa Courtenay, a delightful old English lady who is rapidly nearing her threescore years, had the pleasure in her early girlhood of attending a dinner-party—her first—at exclusive Wordsworth and Southey were among the guests. The fortunate "miss of fifteen" sat next Southey at table. "I was placed by him at dinner," she says, "and had a good opportunity of drinking of his noted kindness, for he never spoke a word. We had some rabbit mutton, and a dish of tarts (a very—should sweet meat, these were the days of side dishes and of silver epergnes with artificial flowers in them. My father was joked to be something of a gourmet, and I was my his daughter for anything, so after waiting a few moments to see if it would be handed round I helped myself to some of the lower from the dish before me. Then Southey spoke. Young lady, I am glad to see that you appreciate lower, give me some." I did so, and he relished tarts eldest which remained unknown till the end of the meal. Bird further back into the past another recollection of the fortunate Miss Courtenay notes in her diary a glimpse of a the greater poet, Rogers, "Lady Cunliffe, Rogers, the great old admirer Beauties, he dined with us with the aged and poor, Sadleir Rogers and at dinner his disinterested kindness to me. I had a great mind to quoted to Mr. Rogers the lines he had been fond of in a great who is quoted in Mr. Rogers's poem, Human Life. He had not it would have been possible, and he had a man-servant waiterman at Twickenham—who had Clan man him. Rogers had painted and Pope's villa to a friend who pointing the fairy. Upon this the ferryman remarked that it had been much altered since Mr. Alexander Pope's time. So there I fell into conversation and the man, in reply to Mr. Rogers's question whether he remembered Mr. Pope, said he remembered him well. Mr. Alexander Pope was a little fat man, Mr. Rogers said he remembered his face as well as my father. When the weather was bad he would be himself down in the sedan-chair, for he was a cripple, poor Thomas, poor man! and I would be put in the boat, and he sat in it while we crossed the lake and down. Dennis was an ill-tempered, a humoursome, ill-tempered gentleman, looking out from his chair to the ferryman Thomas as he took his military airing up and down."—Youth's Companion.

Gladstone Gotten.

The little story below is Lord Wolseley's tribute to the bravery of Lieutenant Gordon, of the Royal E. R. G. C. M. C. At the storming of the Taku forts Gordon, who was in China with Gordon, led the sappers whose duty it was to lay the pontoons across the wet ditch surrounding the great southern fort. While superintending this operation he was shot horseback and being without the only moment, officer present, Gordon only mark to the Chinese marksmen, who had already picked off dozen of his sappers. During the height of the operations, caught by the firing of the great guns and small arms, Lieut. Gordon, who was standing by Major Graham having some remark to make placed his hand on that officer's shoulder to draw his attention. "Stop! that, your hand there!" exclaimed Graham, shaking under the pain. "There's a Bingo-ball lodged in my leg!" It was the first notice we had taken of the wound.—Youth's Companion.

Antient London.

It has been fairly well proven that the condition of the dwellings has actually fall below the level of Roman, and still deeper than that is buried the earlier London of the Britons. In nearly all parts of the city there have been discovered tessellated pavements, Roman baths, trifles, vases, vandals, keys, ornaments, weapons, coins and statues of the ancient Roman gods. A little over a century ago when deep sections were made for the sewers of Lombard street, the lowest stratum consisted of tessellated pavements, and many ancient cities were buried in the same way. Even so, there was a little issue of wood ashes, as of the city, and of the ruins of public buildings. In building the sewerage the workmen came upon a level of the city of oyster shells, bottle bones, old sandals and shards of pottery. Two pavements were dug up under the Bishop's Church in Threadneedle street, and other pavements have been met through in several places on the city.

Region "Treasure Resort."

Hyde Park is no longer available for the use of defectation of self-respecting people. We have taking the pains to make a personal study of it, and as noon one day we counted thirty-two cases of disgraceful, sickening scenes and forty-five known cases, all of whom were lying upon the grass, some only partially dressed, some using fearful imprecations and obscene language of the foulest kind, while others were actually sleeping their drunkenness in broad daylight. The lowest type of "niggers" on the west coast of Africa would blush to act as they did, but London apparently must exhibit to both Americans and foreigners, the Metropolitan police on duty in Hyde Park have no power to interfere with the type of savage the Metropolitan and define the limits of "public open spaces."—London Saturday Review.

Cigars Popular in Germany.

In Germany, tobacco is grown in Baden, the Palatinate, Alsace, on the lower Rhine, in the Altmark of Hanover, and in some districts of Silesia. It is impossible for Germany to produce enough tobacco for her own consumption. As no other country is the cigar so popular. Chewing tobacco, except in the poorer cities, finds no market, snuff is still used to a very large extent among the working classes.

Weight of a Sheper Bee.

Chemist weighing it. It is said that an ordinary bee, not insect, weighs the five-thousandth part of a pound, so that it takes 5,000 bees to make a pound. But the matter is not so simple as it seems. Bees from the north, however, weighed much heavier than those from the south, sometimes three times more.

WHY RIGHT-HANDED?

Speculation as to the Cause of This Human Peculiarity.

Why are men as a rule, right-handed? Many theories are given in answer. Some suppose that right-handedness has become hereditary, that in course of long years of only manual employment the left hand has lost its cunning. Against this theory however it is pointed out that almost all infants are at first left-handed, and for a very simple reason. In the cradle, as a number of a mother, whose left-handed carried a baby with his hand against her left side, and with its right arm next her, consequently, rate out the left hand to grasp objects, and grows up left-handed with disadvantage of the right in subsequent education. How often does one hear a fond mother saying, 'Right hand, dear,' to a child who puts out a left in greeting or who prefers to use its left hand for holding a spoon or a knife. Many wise doctors now advise mothers to allow their children to use either hand without any preference.

Sir James Paxton, M. D. has probably hit upon the most plausible reason for the right-handedness of the human race. In those early days, his says, when there might take place and those might be, who would we were a fighting people, the people who fought back to back. Naturally in this kind of fighting, it is not convenient to wield a weapon which can be used by one hand only, leaving the other hand and arm free for protecting balance, for offensive concerns and for offensive purposes. Now the right hand would naturally be used in preference to the left for wielding a weapon, in order that the heart might be kept as far as possible from the assault of an adversary. Hence, right-handedness arose, and was passed on from father to son. Moreover, when men had fought together in companies, they must also have found that it was most convenient to handle their weapons which in a man who was fighting company were right-handed, and others were left-handed. Hence weapons would be continually clashing. Whether fighting or fighting the foes would need more space for wielding their weapons. If on the other hand, each man used his sword or his shaft with the same hand as his neighbor, confusion would be obviated and a symmetrical appearance would be given to the marching body. So it may be inferred that from the earliest times custom and convenience have had most to do with the preferential use of the right hand. I do assist to the left hand to argue that it suffers from any physical disability, because that nature gives most of his fine work to the right hand. This is shown by the fact that any one may train his left hand to be as clever as his right. In fact, in some instances the left hand is habitually given equal rights with the right, and occasionally it is even the preference to actually right-handed people. In knitting, a woman gives both hands an equal share of work, and is equally skilled with each. When riding on horseback a man gives his left hand the preference in the use of the reins and holding the reins.—Pearson's Magazine.

WHERE THE COIN WAS MADE.

Location of the Mint Can be Determined by Certain Marks.

Coins and "coinlets" look alike to most men, but it is easy to tell where any coin of twenty-five cents or over was made. There are four places of coinage in the country—Philadelphia, San Francisco, New Orleans and Carson City. The first mint was established at Philadelphia, and as the founding of other places of coinage was then unforeseen there was no necessity of putting a mark on coins which came from that city. But as the country grew in territory, population and wealth, and as the mints in the west were developed more and more each year, it became necessary to establish other mints, whereby the government could keep track of the output from each of these. Each, if an error should occur in the coinage, could at once be traced back from which the defective coin had come. All coins are supposed to weigh exactly the same as others of the same denomination. Silver coinage may be pretty well worn before it is liable to rejection, but that is not the case with gold pieces, and a slight decrease in weight necessitates recoinage. It was for these reasons that marks are put on coins made elsewhere than in the Quaker City. These marks are placed below the eagle or the bunch of arrows. If there be a letter in the place designated it will be either a small c, o, or the, one double letters. These bearing the letter c come from the mint at San Francisco. Others bearing the letter o are from New Orleans, while those bearing the letters cc are from Carson City. If you find any such letter on the coin at all, it is an indication that the coin came from Philadelphia.—Chicago Chronicle.

Fire Escape Instructions.

A descriptive article on Norway contains some striking instructions for the use of fire escapes taken from a local book, of which the following lines are part: "The pinfed ladder shall be found in every room. To increase the hurry, let down the body one by one until all shall do left. The cord shall put out the ground from the shoulder thereunder."

Where Vegetarians Should Live.

Parsley once sown in Unwell grows forever, apparently. Lima beans continue to grow and bear for over a year, and they have to be gathered every week after starting to bear. Cucumbers bear the entire year, and so do tomatoes, which, with proper attention, bear for years. Raspberries bear for six months.

Use of the Mahogany.

The Buddhist priests of both China and Japan have a musical instrument called mokongy, or wooden fish, a kind of drum. It is used by the priests when reciting Lotl prayers, one tap being given to every syllable.

Rate of the Pere Marquette.

The New York Commercial says: Pere Marquette stock is astounding all factions. Its advocates have been of a character to cause doubt concerning the sincerity of the explanations given by parties in a position to know what is going on, and who have said that the underlying cause is the prosperous condition of the property and the outlook for its future. The usual assumption is that the Vanderbilts want the road and will get it.

When the present Pere Marquette system was organized by the absorption of the Chicago & West Michigan and Detroit, Grand Haven & Western roads, the belief prevailed that it was solely in the interests of the Vanderbilts, and that there was a definite understanding that they should take the entire property. Not only was this a declared fact, but it was intimately stated that Vanderbilt cash was used, and that this made merger possible. Later it was denied that the Vanderbilts furnished money and it was emphatically stated that the road was not for sale, nor would be sold.

However, it is now declared that the road will soon pass to Vanderbilt control. It comes from a source entitled to credence that those who hold the controlling stock have reached an agreement for the transfer of the property to the Michigan Central. The object, it is stated, is to enable the Vanderbilt interests to penetrate territory occupied by the Flint & Pere Marquette, a section of Michigan from which they are practically barred until the Pere Marquette is acquired.

If this report is true, the first formal announcement of the change of ownership may be looked for any day.

MISSIONARY IN MOUNTAINS.

Experience of the Sullivan Conspirator All Religious Affairs.

Away back in the mountains of West Virginia a Presbyterian minister some time ago fell in with some people who seemed to be well fitted for the missionary efforts on which he was bent. He had been riding nearly all day, and he came to the afternoon came upon a cabin set in the midst of a woodland. Near the door was a space straight barred woman who glared at him out of the cabin. The minister spoke to her courteously and made some inquiries regarding the neighborhood. Her husband was a hunter, the woman said. "And is he a God-fearing man?" asked the preacher.

"I reckon so," came the sour reply, "cause he always takes his gun with him."

The visitor hastily changed the subject and inquired if there were any Presbyterians in the neighborhood.

"I dunno," said the woman simply. "But there's a lot of shes hanging up in the cavin, you can look at 'em and see if you can find any." A Sunday school organization in the same district had all sons and young lads in the same class. Wishing to test the knowledge of her scholars the teacher began by asking each one who made him. An old man at the end of the bench didn't know the next man didn't, and no one until a small boy declared he knew. "Who made you?" asked the teacher.

"Well," cried the old fellow just aroused to, "Taint built so very long since he was made."—Baltimore Sun.

Crowd Cheers the Wrong Man.

One day when returning to Rome from Postilipo in the company of his wife and Morelli, Dall's great painter, North the summer was extremely enjoyed when the people recognizing him, began to cheer. "I want to drive myself home," he said, hastily. "Morelli, just place yourself beside my wife." Then, jumping out of his carriage, he went on to the box of one near, thus, of course, escaping notice. Meanwhile Signora Verdi and Morelli pursued their way, and, as the latter were a large hat like that of the musician they were acclaimed everywhere. "Viva Verdi!" "Viva il maestro!" The artist, embarrassed, returned the salute, but every moment became more overcome, while his companion enjoyed the joke. On arriving at the hotel, they were met by Verdi, to whom his wife said: "You would have bowed to see Morelli bowing and smiling to the crowd as you could never have done. He has made your reputation for amiability." "I which the crowd shouted: "I really had you there. I knew what would happen!"

Lake Erie has also gone down almost half a foot in a year, but has gained over half a foot from the low stage of 1895. The figures show that the lake levels are slowly but surely falling. There are Houdans, with crested heads and beautiful plumage, the magnificent barred Plymouth Rock the Dunton White Wyandotte, as big as a turkey and twice as haughty, the Brown Leghorn, White Leghorns, the celebrated Buff Cochin Bantam, the Silver laced Wyandotte, as beautiful as an ear wire's fancy, the Silver spangled Hamburg, equally beautiful, and the White Cochins, that are as pretty as a picture. But the collection is worth traveling far to see.

It is not generally known in this day and generation that Mr. Miller's father, Mr. Miller, built the SENTINEL office in 1869, serving here 3 year years. As a partner of his father's in the Jaquet Lumber, he has been actively engaged in the mercantile enterprise of that firm for many years, and probably as much a Charlevoix boy as a wither acquaintance in the region. Intimacy to Charlevoix than he. He has gained for himself a reputation for business integrity that is worth more than money. The SENTINEL extends double congratulations—to the printer who worked the odd hand press a third of a century ago, to its successor, old friend Carpenter—than whom a more manly man never lived nor a truer friend ever took you in the eye. Mr. Carpenter will rest the balance of his days, which we absolutely hope will be many and happy.

As the party went through the town they were greeted with the utmost civility and courtesy at our coming, and at my request Dolores took off her mask. Upon one of the houses the tiling fell from before her, to within two inches of her head, and I believe she thinks to this day that the person who was hurling the tiles at me was trying to hit her. As there probably did prevail some amount of the old prejudice against the Indian, and as there was very little sympathy with the Indians, I thought it best to say nothing about the matter. At every provincial city, protestant missions are established, and I knew that there would be no difficulty in my leaving Dolores in safety at one of the missions.

A very pleasant one it was, for the ladies were kind enough to take her into their hearts, and they promised to take every care of her. Mr. Thompson and Mr. Harris, who had accompanied us to Mr. Thompson's house, were very much pleased at the reception I had met with, and they had a long talk with me about the future of Dolores. They thought it would be a very good thing if I could find a home for her in Buenos Ayres, and they promised to do what they could to find her a home. I was very much pleased at this, for I had felt a little doubtful as to what I should do with her, and I was very glad to find that I should be able to place her in such good hands.

CHAPTER III.

The course of the story now takes us back to Buenos Ayres. Mr. Thompson had a large house in the suburbs, which was surrounded by the usual large garden, in which there were many trees, some of them of considerable size. Mr. Thompson had a large family, and he was very hospitable to his friends. Among the young men who were his frequent guests was Mr. Harry Hood, who was a great favorite with the young ladies of the family. Mr. Hood was a young fellow of about twenty-five, and was a very good specimen of the young English gentleman who at that time was to be found in all the principal towns in South America. He was a good horseman, and was fond of all sports and athletic games. He was a good-tempered, good-hearted fellow, and was a great favorite with everybody. He was a good deal with the Thompsons, and was very fond of Dolores, and was very much pleased when he heard that she was to be placed in the care of the ladies of the family. Sunset on Snake.

Sunset is exceptionally attractive on Snake mountain, in spite of its name. Its summit is a mass of rocks, and the sunset rays, after passing through a gap in the mountain, fall upon a hundred or more of these rocks, which are of a pinkish color, and the effect is very pretty. It is said that the Indians have given it the name of Snake mountain because of the fancied resemblance of the rocks to snakes. Some people claim that the name was given to it because of the great number of snakes which are found on the mountain. Rutland Herald.

Consolation and Comfort.

Many is the time when we have felt that we could do no more than give up in despair, but we have found that a little encouragement from some friend has given us the courage to go on. It is the same with those who are suffering from the effects of a cold. We have found that the quickest way to get rid of a cold is to take Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. It stops the cough and gives the sufferer a good night's rest. Sold by all druggists.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Forty-two thousand dollars were paid by buyers through the Manistee State Bank for potatoes during the month of October.

It looks as though Antrim county would have to give up the idea for raising large pumpkins. The editor of the Munuh Sun claims to have one in his possession raised in Wexford county that weighed nine and three-quarter pounds after being cut for the ground three days.

East Jordan Enterprise: The station building of the T. & A. A. railroad, which is now rapidly nearing completion, is a good large, well designed and well finished building, an ornament to our village. It is the best and best looking station building between Charlevoix and Grand Rapids.

The Petoskey Independent-Democrat came out last week printed on paper made at the new pulp mill paper mill which started the first of the month, and the paper used by the Independent-Democrat was of the first that was made. This paper mill in Petoskey's largest industry and is a valuable addition to Northern Michigan. It represents an investment of $200,000, and will employ a good many hands.

A large black dog with small and green house was during the next moonlight night, thumping on the top of the high school building in Petoskey having been placed there during the night, supposedly by the make believe ancestor, who has been writing Freemasting notices. Mr. Olsen, of the Daily Tribune, who has been threatened with assassination the past week, also he turned serious big to the front door.

A deer that roams the woods at will but turns up every morning and night for food is owned by Frank White of Lake, a settlement near Calumet. When the animal was a fawn, early this year, it came in White's home and received food and protection. It soon became a great pet and was allowed to go and come at will. Now with a small herd around in each it wanders through the forest during the daytime, after having "breakfast," and puts in an appearance at nightfall.

The Hayes Falls Arena thinks that any one disinterested in politics who takes the trouble to study a copy of the three counties—Emmet, Antrim and Charlevoix from a standpoint of convenience to the people, would be scared just as well if the four northern townships of Charlevoix county were attached to Emmet county, with the county seat at Petoskey and the balance of the county attached to Antrim county with the county seat at Hillsboro, giving the Islands kingdom where they naturally belong.

Central Lake Torch: The carcasses for canning factory stock have been at work for a few days past among the farmers and are smiling with gratifying success. Over half of the stock required from the farm are has been taken and the Bay View district has not yet been visited. The Board of Trade executive committee took a turn around town a few days ago and collected sufficient funds of the business men to defray the primary expenses of canvassing etc. and as usual it came easy enough, for the business men are always ready to do their part to advance the interests of the community in every way. They never hesitate to pull their pocket books right out whenever called upon in such a cause and as yet they have never cause to regret it.

Traverse City Record: The shutting down of the Canfield & Wheeler saw mill and lumber business in Manistee, marks the end of one of the great industries which have been just fifty of Manistee in past years. It is practically the beginning of the end of the lumber industry in that city. The passing of this large concern should prompt the Manistee people to look up and doing. While there are several other mills of the same kind which contribute largely to the property of the Salt city, they too, will soon cut down and go out of business. The industry will be left to sustain the town. To be sure, there are many smaller manufacturing concerns which are growing, but they will not take the place of the big mills which have given employment to many hundreds in the city and surrounding timber lands for many years. The Canfield & Wheeler mill was one of the first to be established in Manistee. The business was started in 1848, when the town was only a small settlement, and since that time its overaccumulated not has been twelve million feet. This has gone work to a great many men and put into circulation a vast amount of money each year. It has been one of the elements in the growth of the city and one of several of the kind. The query is, will Manistee be able to replace these mills with permanent industries as fast as they are shut down? The city has a good port, fresh wealth and live business men, but to retain its prestigue, these must be added, else Time will see it be a Greater Manistee.

Printing Supervisor's Proceedings.

The Central Lake Torch: In connection with the letting of the printing of the proceedings of the board of supervisors has the following, to say: "Before adjournment last week the board of supervisors let the contract for printing the proceedings to the Sentinel of Boyne, that paper's bid being away below all the others in the county. They will print 1000 copies in pamphlet form and also run another in the paper for the sum of 50 cents per folio, which is very cheap. The Torch force is too busy to work for nothing, and the publisher told 50 cents per folio, for 20 years. The office was only said for the work demanded, and as good of it we suppose that the contract people have been blamed aware that their bid is too low, for they afford it, and have endeavored to get the county clerk to agree to allow them double price for the tabulated portion of the work, which of course he has right to do. It is another case of doing work for nothing just because this were asked for, and somebody was afraid somebody else would get the job. Antrim county's is not bad, up, and any old time the Torch office is caught working for the bear people in a bunch any cheaper than it does for them individually we want to know of it. This is not the only case in Northern Michigan of the kind either, for both Grand Traverse and Charlevoix county papers work for the county for about nothing at all.

In this connection we suggest that the plan of printing the proceedings of the board of supervisors in pamphlet instead of in the papers is about as useless a piece of business as we know of, for whoever sees those pamphlets after they are printed. They are distributed to the various supervisors with the understanding that anyone who wants one can go to his supervisor and ask for it. His money helps to pay for the job but not for the delivery. People who are intelligent enough to care for the actions of the county board usually read newspapers, and also prefer to get news fresh instead of getting it a month old and in a little paper book which comes like a farce. However, the chairman of the printing committee allows that the pamphlets are the best he can find to sustain the idea in that form, so we gracefully submit."

General Secretary Henry Harter, of the International Lough-vermen's association, an organization of oarsmen, women which now has a membership of close to 100,000 men, says the present season has been the busiest and most prosperous that lock workers and marine employes generally have ever had.

"In order to supply the demand for help this year," continued Mr. Harter, "we have been obliged to call on men in our organization who had taken steady jobs in other lines of business. A great number of marine firms, for instance, had taken jobs on shore during the dull times. But still

RULER IS KIDNAPED.

PRESIDENT OF COLOMBIA TAKEN PRISONER.

Dr. Manuel A. Sanclemente is Carried off in His Bathrobe to the Mountains—Revolution Imminent—Consul General Ewald Takes Flight.

Dr. Manuel A. Sanclemente, president of the Republic of Colombia, has been kidnaped by the revolutionary leaders. Intelligence to this effect was received here yesterday in a cable dispatch from the latter to Consul General Ewald, who is in charge of the department of Colombia. The news reached Mr. Ewald through the island of Curacao, which is under the Dutch flag, and was brought to Curacao by a Venezuelan refugee who had been sent to the mainland by the revolutionists. The refugee, who was a member of the president's cabinet, escaped from the capital with his life by the skin of his teeth. He was in his bathrobe when he was carried off by the revolutionists, and he had to make his escape in the clothes he had on. He was not even permitted to return to his residence for his hat. The refugee reached Curacao in a small boat, and he was in a very destitute condition when he reached the island. He was not even in his bathrobe when he left the mainland, but he had no hat, and he had no money with which to buy one. The refugee was very reticent about the details of the president's kidnaping, but he said that he was sent to the island by the revolutionists to inform Consul General Ewald that they had taken the president prisoner and had carried him into the mountains. The refugee said that the revolutionists had taken the president to a place of safety, and that they had no intention of harming him. The revolutionists, he said, had taken the president away from the capital because they had learned that a plot was on foot to rescue him from his captors. The refugee said that the revolution was imminent, and that it would be a fierce struggle. The revolutionists, he said, had been preparing for the revolution for months, and they had plenty of men and money. The refugee said that the revolution was being made in the interest of the Liberal party, and that it was directed against the Conservatives, who had been in power for many years. The refugee said that the revolutionists

FAKES FROM KANSAS.

Improbable Yarns Which Deceived and Interested the Public.

Beyond the question of a doubt more "fakes" have emanated from Kansas to discover the new, and startling wonder than have developed in any other equally circumscribed portion of the earth's surface, says the New York Press. Kansas people say that the first great fake was Dr. Henry E. Stanley who at one time while connected with the frontier was a correspondent for a St. Louis paper, the editorials of which he so closely resembled in his big yarns. But just as Stanley was making things hot for the readers of Montcalm Ledger was committed and he went back to Brighton. After that the article sell on having fed into obscurity for a time, though the paper migration and the steadfastness of the editor gave good footing. The first really big fake was the story of the finding of gold in Sumner county. It seemed all to a newspaper man in a space of 100 feet it was laid up in strata by the people, and so it found a place in twenty miles, actual stopped the train and went to digging.

To mention the interest and amount of its fake the newspaper from Sumner linked the company of a gang of men to have been hired in the problem of Mexico silver city, Sumner county, was actually the genuine that vacuum also sensible. The gold fever and probability popular in Pennsylvania, very like the pioneer interest of Sumner county. The discovery of the silver strata was of a character to take the country by storm. There was a great rush to the place, and the excitement had lasted several days when the news came that the real gold fever had broken out in Sumner county. The finds were unequaled, and gold was soon found up in every ditch and gulch. Not a single tailing has yet gone of the gulch every one has found the "mark" and the claim owner has had a claim, and hence everybody has the gold in sight. Thousands upon thousands were gathered, and everyone said the gulch was full of gold

"What is it, my boy?" asked the Lieutenant. "The Lord Mayor of London wants you to write a sonnet on the occasion of the visit of the Russian fleet, and you want to know the rhyme for Czar? Well, I don't think it is the proper time for poetry just now, but I should say that Czar rhymes with bar, and bar is a word that you will find very useful in a country like this. Now, we have had our breakfast, and we have a long day's work before us. Tell the men to saddle up."

Mr. Harry was just fond in her transformation of everything but the wan greatly enamored with the new fashion, which was very much more becoming than unfortunately this also gave rise to a misunderstanding.

"This is Miss Mannon, isn't it? Miss Ada, I mean?" he said to Harry, who shook her head in the negative. "May we ask, if it is not too much of a secret, who she really is?"

"Certainly, Miss Mannon," said Harry, "I am sure she would like to know. Her name is Ada Mannon, and she is the daughter of a friend of mine in Montevideo."

"Ah, I thought it was some name of that sort," said Mr. Harry, with a sigh of relief. "Of course, we knew that you had brought a lady with you, and we were all in a great fright lest she should be some Indian squaw, or half-breed, or something of that sort. We have had a great deal of trouble with the Indians, and we have had to be very careful indeed to keep them from stealing our cattle and our horses, and we have had a great deal of trouble with them

The Traverse City fire hose hall burned the Petoskey team Tuesday afternoon at Traverse City by a score of 10 to five.

Traverse City now has a case of smallpox, with 25 people exposed, 10 of whom were placed in quarantine the last of the week.

The Michigan crop report shows the extent of the potato crop in the state with comparative figures from various counties. Northern Michigan leads by a lonely percentage.

H. G. Gill of Northport stated that the potato shipments from that place this season have been very heavy. The total average thus far shipped aggregates about 15,000.

Thomas Freeman, a Chicago mechanical engineer, died in Petoskey, was discovered by cell a short time ago has taken up his residence in Boyne. It is understood that he contemplates the re-establishment of his business in the down-river district associated with prominent local capitalists.

Friday afternoon Pay Day was unlucky for the Boyne City Furniture Co. last week for one side. It broke the house in the lumber line of late shipments. But this was not all. On the same day by lumber either of a mysterious or partial loss. It is not wonder the people in everybody's young and bright in the actual that Manistee Head.

At a large city council meeting Monday evening, Mr. H. Wise Wood, on behalf of a proposition to furnish the village with electric lights, and will do so if given the proper encouragement. They agree to furnish arc lights at the same price as prevail in surrounding towns and also agree to furnish the city water free and 100 per light for a nine-night schedule.

O. D. Hamilton drove into the Lake on Sunday morning with 37 sacks of radish seed, 2700 averaged ten pounds to the bag and was able to an acre. Into the 10 acres put about 75 lbs. The potatoes was grown on Frances of land and the land also worth $250, considering one of the most valuable lands of farm produce ever landed in the market.

Indiana Independent: If anyone has any doubt as to whether the land of Indiana is fertile or not let him ride on a bicycle for a day or two. Let him start out on the north line of the county, go east to Three Oaks, then south and note the traffic which it throws and their doubts will quickly vanish. The treatment of the road this year very begrudging has generally by for what was expected and Indiana may congratulate herself on being in the front rank as regards roads to be more in detail.

Three people in Lexington county held equal elections Monday, to vote upon a bonding proposition to aid in building a road from Traverse City to Northport. Lexington town stuck voted in favor of issuing $11,000 for the purpose, Suttons Bay voted against the issue, of $7,000, and the question of issuing $10,000 was defeated in Bingham township. It is thought that the road will be built and there is talk of a car ferry from Northport to Manistique.

Traverse City Eagle: Hon. Perry Hannah is entitled to his emotions as a result of an accident which occurred last week. Perry and a friend were out on a drive, and the thing much was thought of at the time with a flat or big bump, an explanation was made and it was found that Mr. Hannah had broken a rib. The accident occurred in the Settlement, Mr. Hannah falling just as he emerged from the bath, slipping on the floor. He fell back into the tub which was still full of water and in was a minute or so before he got his breath sufficiently to get out again.

The large dock at Manistee Bay, owned by L. E. Bahle, general dealer, burned about two o'clock last Thursday morning together with the warehouse and its contents. The building contained 200 barrels of apples, 20 tons of hay, a dozen barrels of an 2,000 bags owned by Bahle, and 5,000 bushels of potatoes owned by James Flood of Chicago. The schooner Alice of Kenosha was lying at the dock loading potatoes when the rigging caught fire. Capt. Hansen removed the schooner from the pier and the dock and contents were beached near by. Her rigging, sail and bulwarks were destroyed. Bahle's loss is $10,000. Flood's loss is $5,000. No insurance. An Indian shot three early in the evening and is believed to have started the fire from his pipe.

MARINE NOTES.

The schooner Chas. Luling is in Chicago unloading to-day.

The tug Martin, returned from Glen Haven Sunday.

The schooner I. V. Jones loaded 12,000 bushels of potatoes at Harrison Bay this week.

The steamer Blackby went to Petoskey Tuesday after a load of kerosene oil for St. Jacob.

The schooner Ebenezer and her rubber cargo, will be sold here by the U. S. Marshal Nov. 29th.

Capt. Campbell, of the steamer Hackley, expects to run his Beaver Island trips up to 1892, as he did last year.

The schooner Alice was badly damaged by the Suttons Bay fire last week. Full particulars in our Northern Michigan column.

The U. S. steamer Dahlia was here Monday and unloaded buoys. She will be here several trips this month on the same errand.

The fog whistle presented to the harbor by the S. S. Manitou, has been placed on the water works building, and will hereafter guide the belegged mariner into port.

Milwaukee Wisconsin: Capt. Hermann Oertling, master and owner of the schooner C. H. Hackley, became seriously ill very suddenly on his vessel yesterday afternoon and was taken to his home for treatment.

The old steamer Lawrence, for many years in the Northern Michigan trade, is being rebuilt and lengthened 15 feet at Manitowoc, after which she will take her place on the line between St. Joseph and Chicago. S. S. Burke is yet her owner.

The schooner Maxwell, Capt. Anderson, owned chiefly by the first Jordan lumber co., was dismasted Friday in Chicago by a collision with a bridge. The schooner was in tow of a tug. The captain relied that he would lay up.

The steamer Emerald, from Alpena to Detroit, loaded with lumber and cedar, sprung a leak and became water-logged in the heavy gale off Point Aux Barques. The life saving crew rescued the crew of nine persons in a freezing condition. The men could not have held out much longer. The Emerald was in this port two weeks ago to stop a leak.

The steamboarge S. K. Martin, towing the large schooner Maxwell, on an aggregate shipment of over one million feet of lumber from Davis City to Buffalo, came down Thursday morning. The outfit laid here until early Monday morning windbound, when they went out. About five miles out a bandbox plate blew out of the boiler, and the Martin put inside out to get inside, a tug bringing in the tow. The engineer repaired and Monday afternoon they went out again, and were fourteen miles out the same thing happened again, and back they came for repairs. They left again Tuesday morning.

L. Marchand, superintendent of citizenship lines of the Pere Marquette, has recommended the adoption of the wireless telegraph system between Ludington and Manitowoc and the matter is now in the hands of the superintendent of telegraph lines. Marchand consider the system a fine will be exceptionally valuable, as between the two ports mentioned under present arrangements notice of the arrival and departure of boats at Manitowoc does not reach the offices of the company at Ludington until four hours later, in many instances. The Pere Marquette will use the grain elevators at Ludington and Manitowoc in place of the high steel towers otherwise needed.

Sailors of the great lakes will probably soon have a song harbor to which they may retire when age or infirmities force them to seek a haven of rest. Several thousand dollars have already been contributed toward the proposed home, and as soon as $10,000 is raised, the promoters of the benevolent enterprise will purchase the necessary land and begin the erection of suitable buildings. The Great Lakes Sailors' Song Harbor, as the society incorporated association is called, already has an option on a farm of 225 acres along the Illinois river three miles north of the town of Dwyden, near Chicago, which can be bought for $125 an acre, or a total of $31,875. It is expected that ultimately there will be accommodations for 800 diseased mariners, and as the farm is said to be suitable for market gardening it is thought the home can be maintained at a comparatively small expense.

A Silent Mamma.

The present of a dinner will generally keep a hungry man awake. But the mother of a quiet-disposed infant is often unable to distinguish between what is and what is not pain. This was the case with the man who went into a London restaurant, called for a newspaper and only when roused from his reading by a waiter offered coffee and a hot sandwich. The waiter executed the order and deposited with the humorist a large, punctuated check. The absent-minded one wasted no reading his paper. Some quarter of an hour after the waiter returned. "Anything more, sir?" he said. "Yes, snapped the man, and go on from sandwich. The one you brought me was as dry as a bone. The waiter looked down and gasped, "Lor!" he exclaimed, "here's the sandwich I thought! You've eaten the check!"

LORD KELVIN AS DAMOCLES.

The Great Scotch Scientist Absolute Faith in Figures.

Lord Kelvin on his friends say, used to make of himself a sort of Damocles. But it was a cannon ball instead of a sharp sword which was suspended over his head. How living scientists may as high a reputation as Lord Kelvin, and how have to their credit more useful inventions of valuable discoveries. Though now in his seventy-eighth year the old professor who for more than half a century occupied the chair of natural philosophy at Glasgow university, still maintains his reputation for being one of the most energetic men in Scotland. Those who know him are fond of telling of the terrific energy and almost scientific energy with which he attacks his work. When lecturing he used to become so absorbed and wrapped up in the experiments he was conducting that he could scarcely wait for the result. Hoodwinking the services of an assistant, he scurried about his lecture-room like a youth of 16. Indeed the students liked to say that they never saw him crack any laboratory except at a run. The real genius of Lord Kelvin, who is a member of half the learned societies of Europe, and who has been decorated by the emperor of Germany, the president of France and the king of Siam, is his absolute faith in figures, and it is this ruling passion which led to his experiments as a boundless. When he has once solved a problem in mathematics he is willing to stake upon its correctness not only his reputation, but, if necessary, his life. Taking an instrument heavy cannon ball, he calculated with the utmost accuracy the size of the smallest wire which would bear the weight of the load of iron, he then procured a length of wire of just the requisite strength, and, to prove the truth of his figures had the cannon ball suspended over his lecture platform at his side and where it would be most likely to strike and crush him should the wire give way, and it remained there for weeks.—London Mail.

SCARING A DEBTOR.

The Formidable Power Which Lay in a Lawyer's Business Card.

A good story is told of the way a Newark lawyer was tricked by a lower client the other day. The lawyer was sitting in his office when Mr. B., a friend, entered, and proceeded to tell him of the difficulty a Mr. C. was in through a loan he had made to Mr. C. was in great need of the money, but Mr. B. refused to return the loan, which was only a trifling one. "Why," said Mrs. B. to the lawyer, "that if you should take hold of the case you could collect the money." "All right," said the barrister, thinking of the neat little fee that would be his after he had succeeded in business Mr. B. to part with the sum claimed by Mr. C. "I'll give you one of my cards to hand to Mr. C. If he will step in and see me I'll handle the case for him." Shortly afterward the lawyer left the city for a few days' outing in the country. On his return he inquired of Mrs. B. what had become of Mr. C. and his claim against Mr. B. "Oh, that's all settled," replied the woman. "Mr. C. said he just went to Mr. B. showed him your card, and said he had retained you in the case. Mr. B. paid the money at once." Now the lawyer is wondering where his prospective fee is coming in. He believes he has a good case against Mr. C. for about 10 per cent of the amount of Mr. C's loan but has not decided whether to press the case or not.—Newark News.

Bandages and Hot Tags.

During the South African war Rudyard Kipling discovered, at Cape Town, a hospital without bandages, and in desperate need of them. This too, was in a city where lazarettos were for sale in many shops. He told an acquaintance that he was going to meet that want, and the gentleman at once offered to pay for the bandages that Mr. Kipling would buy and take to the hospital. A cart was quickly loaded and then the owner was informed that under army rules, the hospital either like could not receive supplies from a private individual. "Well," said he, "I will dump the packages on the pavement before the door, and then tell them to come out and clear up the litter. Perhaps they can get them to the building in that way without incurring any red tape. He drove off with the bandages, and the surgeon were somehow smuggled into the hospital.

DART & DART.

A MIRACLE EXPLAINED.

Why a Young Woman Uttered Strange Sentences in Dead Languages.

The vagaries of memory are some of the most interesting of those phenomena with the human mind and body. Why do we forget certain things and remember others? Mystery of these imaginations are as yet unexplained but, perhaps not even the cleverest metaphysician will ever account for them. Lamb's essay on "Imperfect Sympathies" reminds us how something which we have tried in vain to recall ever afterward when we have given up the attempt, "leaches into the mind," as Emerson says, so innocently as if it had never been surmounted. Again, bygone experiences will revive after years of oblivion, often as the result of some cerebral disease or accident. Such a case is the one quoted by Coleridge of a young woman in Germany who could neither read nor write, but who was said to be possessed of a devil because, in a fever, she was heard raving in Latin, Greek and in an obscure rabbinical dialect of Hebrew. Whole pages of her talk were written down, and were found to consist of sublime intelligible in themselves, but not having the slightest connection with one another. To say that she was possessed of a devil was the easiest way of accounting for the matter. At last the mystery was cleared up by a physician, who traced back the girl's history until he learned that at the age of nine she was taken to live at the house of an old pastor, a great Hebrew scholar, and that she remained there until the pastor's death. It was long for years the old man's custom to walk up and down a passage near the kitchen, and read to himself in a loud voice. His books were examined and among them many of the passages taken down at the young woman's bedside were identified. The theory of demoniacal possession was abandoned.—Youth's Companion.

Astonished, Four Fellows!

"When does the next train that stops at Montrose leave here?" asked a feasible stranger at the booking office in Leslie. "Fourth have to wait five hours, ma'am." "I don't think so." "Well, perhaps you know better than I do." "Yes, sir! And perhaps you know better than I do whether I am expecting to travel by that train my self, or whether I am inquiring for a relative that's visiting at my house? And maybe you think it's your business to stand behind them and try to impose people about things they know as well as you do, if not better, and perhaps you'll learn some day to give people civil answers when they ask you civil questions, young man; but my opinion is you won't!" "Yes, sir-ee!" gasped the booking clerk.—London Answers.

In the Ballroom.

She—Do you dance, Mr. Skiggins? He (modestly)—Well, my family said I did when I left the academy, but those below I have defeated with other express a different opinion.—Detroit Free Press.

HOW THE CURFEW STARTED.

Origin of the Custom Said to Be Lost in Obscurity.

The origin of the curfew is lost in obscurity. The word is, of course, derived from the French, "couvre feu," "cover fire." Rev. George S. Track writes in Detail of the theory generally held with William the Conqueror and says that the old story at one time universally accepted was that William "Lord Protector Janne" reminds us how something which we have tried in vain to recall ever afterward when we have given up the attempt, "leaches into the mind," as Emerson says, so innocently as if it had never been surmounted. Again, bygone experiences will revive after years of oblivion, often as the result of some cerebral disease or accident. Such a case is the one quoted by Coleridge of a young woman in Germany who could neither read nor write, but who was said to be possessed of a devil because, in a fever, she was heard raving in Latin, Greek and in an obscure rabbinical dialect of Hebrew. His books were examined and among them many of the passages taken down at the young woman's bedside were identified. The theory of demoniacal possession was abandoned.—Youth's Companion.

A Sticky Bribe.

Count Chaudy representative, who visited China during the campaign, received the Lama temple present to the Young-ho-kung at Pekin. "Needless" is a euphemistic way of stating the fact. It is the expression used by Japanese papers in describing the manner of the scripture's transfer. But the account originally transmitted were not of a character to suggest ordinary giving and taking. They spoke of the Japanese Buddhists as very anxious to remove the celebrated scripture, and, immediately upon the refusing to sanction the operation, Humpf then requisitioned the scripture in a sufficiently numerous and bulky to read twenty pack horses, so, by whatever process the scripture was carried, its transmission to Japan was on small undertaking.—Japan Daily Mail.

Mr. and Mrs. Shanahan will be at home in about two weeks in Mr. LaFever's residence on Main street. The Sentinel congratulates.

—Muskegon special of the 22nd—Early Sunday morning a bloody fight occurred in Dinty's hall during a dance. One young man named James Pappin was so badly pummelled that he may not survive his injuries. His face was literally battered with a packer. He was attacked while leaving the hall with a girl on his arm. Pappin's friends claim that he should may lose the sight of its left eye. No arrests have yet been made, but the police are making investigations, and it is expected several arrests will follow.

—A merchant who had two stores in small villages recently tried an experiment. He put a bargain counter in each store containing the same articles at exactly the same prices. In the newspaper of one village he did not advertise and sold goods amounting to $25. In the store the same month in the village where he did advertise he sold goods amounting to $1,792. In commenting on the result of his experiment, that merchant says "People who read the advertisement would pass in one of my stores and drive miles to the other for what they could have gotten at the same price in my store at their door."—Ex.

CHAPTER V.

Monday morning we were ready early, and the moment we had finished breakfast Mr. Hay, my brother, and myself, mounted our horses and rode off to the estancia, which was about two miles off. The house was built of adobe, and was only one story high, with a veranda in front, and a large yard in the rear, surrounded by a high wooden fence, which was necessary to keep the cattle from trampling down the vegetables and fruit trees. The yard was full of cattle, some being tied to the fence, and others being roped to pegs driven into the ground, while a number were being branded. There were three hundred and fifty calves to be branded, and the whole work was completed in about two hours. The cattle were then turned out, and we went into the house to breakfast. We had a capital breakfast, and I was very much amused at the manner in which Mr. Hay and his wife treated their servants. They addressed them as if they were children, and they seemed to be perfectly good-tempered, and to do their work very well. I should have thought that they would be very difficult to manage, but they seemed to be quite fond of their master and mistress, and to be very proud of their position in the family. We had a very good breakfast, consisting of a large dish of beef, a large dish of fowls, and a large dish of eggs, with a quantity of bread and butter, and coffee. The coffee was served in little cups, without milk, but with a large quantity of sugar. The meal was served on a long table in the veranda, and we all sat down together, the master and mistress being at the two ends of the table. The meal was served by a girl of about fifteen, who was very shy and awkward, and almost the whole of the conversation was carried on between the master and his wife and myself. The conversation was principally about the Indians, and I was very much surprised at the manner in which Mr. Hay and his wife spoke of them. They seemed to look upon them as a race of beings far inferior to themselves, and to be quite unable to understand why we should be so much afraid of them. They said that they had been living there for twenty years, and had never had any trouble with the Indians, and that they had always been on good terms with them. They had never had any of their cattle stolen, and they had always been able to buy any number of horses they required from them. They said that they had never had any trouble with them except when they had had a few drinks, and then they had been very troublesome, and had even fired at them with their guns. They said that they had never had any trouble with them since they had shot two of them, and had hung a number of them from the veranda rail by the neck. They said that they had never had any trouble with the Indians

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Sultana Bay is to have a new summer resort. Conrad Lasser has purchased a tract of land near Stony Point from H. Dessler and will build a dock and a few cottages next spring and a summer resort hotel in a few seasons.

William F. Considine, woods superintendent for the Doyle City Chemical Company, is in Cadillac for the purpose of engaging the services of one hundred or more woodchoppers to whom he will pay $1 per cord for cutting chemical wood.

Kent Bros. large general store at Northport had a narrow escape from being burned at 11 o'clock this morning. A gasoline lamp that was being filled on night lire and the flames went to the ceiling and about the sides of the room before they were checked. The loss will only be about $100, with insurance.

For the first time in the history of the Grand Rapids & Indiana railroad the westbound shipments of potatoes from northern Michigan points exceed those of number. Hardly a freight train runs north without eight or ten of the cars we landed wire potatoes and the totals recently had eighteen cars of the tubers.

A party consisting of Dr. Chase and his son George and wife, arrived at Alpena Wednesday after a five week's cruise in Chase's yacht Ina, from Charlevoix county. They are bound for Detroit and Toledo. They report improvement in fish everywhere on account also of the season being so cold. In Chase's opinion the fish are driven south and spend a good deal of time loitering and loafing.

The business and trade building owners and occupants in Petoskey, Frankfort, Bellaire, Elk Rapids and Alpena are generally pleased with the action of the Holton and Gerrish Wilkinson story, now completely pulled by the last week. Origin of the fire, which started in the Wilkinson office, is a mystery. Nobody knows. Fanny's stock was owned and, but to a complete loss from water.

A young man named from Five Mile Arm Watson's offices.

Harbor Springs is pretty sure of getting another mill to the near future. Chapman & Johnson, who have a mill located near Pleasant View Corner, have decided to move the plant to Harbor Springs, and in that end have turned a lease of a portion of be 10 for that purpose. They have enough piling ground on the land and will move the product for this winter to Harbor Springs, and in the early spring will move the mill there. They have a cut of about thirty million to make, and will undoubtedly add other machinery which will make a complete manufacturing plant.

Bellaire Independent: W. K. and Geo. J. Jackson of Buffalo, were in town from Saturday until Tuesday looking after business interests here, and it is given out as a positive fact that the firm of Tindle & Jackson will move their emporium plant to Pellston next season. The Tindle & Jackson company have been here since 1891, and they have built about one of the largest manufacturing establishments in this part of the state. They formed employment for a large number of men and made business for very many more. It is to be regretted that the supply of raw material here has been so far exhausted as to make it necessary for them to move.

General Lake Jones in 1896 the village invested $1,500 in a piece of land, the use of which was given to Lisken, Howard & Co for a stave factory site. The land is still there, but in a very weedy, neglected condition, and will be worth much more when the firm comes to use it than it was when purchased. Since this firm located here they have paid in personal tax to the township and village over $2600. We have it for our readers to say as to the value of the $1,500, investment. The village is asked to do more for the coming factory and perhaps they will pay less tax for the question arises as to our needs. Do we not need the coming factory now more than we ever needed mills or stave factories?

Petoskey Democrat: Work will be gib soon on the large new shoe manufactory to be erected at Detroit to the Thos. Freeman Co. Ltd. The officers of the new firm are, Thomas Freeman, president and general manager, L. C. Hunkey, treasurer, Conner Hamaly, secretary. These are the men of Petoskey gentlemen interested. Detroit capital has been interested to a satisfactory extent, and the new organization is financially strong institution. The plant will be located on an eleven acre site, recently purchased, on the River Rouge, near the Fort Street bridge in Woodmere. The factory to be erected will have a capacity of from ten to twelve million feet of footing annually, and will be equipped with the latest modern appliances pertaining to wood working. In addition to maple and oak flooring, other building materials will be manufactured.

SCHOOL COMMUNE COLUMN.

AN "UNHOLY ALLIANCE."

In view of the mistakes of Congressman Babcock to force the "unequal bill through the Committee on Ways and Means by the aid of the Democratic minority of that committee and to work for its passage the Kansas City Journal says:

"It may be that under existing arrangements this is possible for there are ten Republicans and seven Democrats on the committee. A change of two votes which is one in addition to his own, would enable the Democrats in the committee to report the bill. Speaker Henderson will be re-elected speaker, and there will be very few chances either in committee or employes, but the speaker should notice the number of Democrats on the Committee on Ways and Means. The Democratic caucus chief in this session they increased the Democratic membership of the committee the last time they had control of the House. If this committee had twelve Republicans and five democrats it would be more difficult to form an unholy alliance."

There is a much simpler and more direct way to prevent an "unholy alliance" between the Democratic Free-Traders and wavering Republicans of the Ways and Means Committee. This is for the speaker of the 57th session of the House to remember that committee on safe Republican lines by dropping off the wavers and filling their places with positive stock. The unholy side of the Ways and Means Committee is no place for waverers. Cut with them!

A CRUSHING INDICTMENT.

The Jackson Citizen-Patriot: "Last February has been so cold that we are near to the time when the whole of the hundred million dollars we paid to send abroad for sugar will go into the pockets of our own people. This nation consumes at least one-fourth of the world's entire product and of the world's greater two thirds are made from beets and only one-third from cane. If the consumer and the producing of American Free-Traders had been heeded we should now not grow a pound of sugar outside the state fields of Louisiana. Because the Protectionist principle was received and approved by the people we are about to become independent of outside sources for a necessity of existence and to keep huge profits at home. We made the machinery for the sugar mills from iron from our own furnaces, we have diverted from cotton for cereal production land and human labor to a more profitable occupation and we have moved this nation one huge step further toward industrial independence. It would be difficult to frame an indictment against the American Free-Trade propagandists after claiming them to quote their own declarations and arguments against the plain facts and the best sugar bounties.—The Manufacturer.

JOLLYING THE FARMERS.

The Louisville Courier-Journal says that the Protective Tariff has been used to "jolly" the farmer. That is exactly where the Courier-Journal is right. If the farmers of this country have ever had occasion to feel jolly, it is now, when under Hoadley's tariff legislation, money has come rolling in to pay off mortgages, to buy new equipment, including the latest and most improved brands of agricultural machinery, and to fill up the account at the savings bank. Yes the farmers of the country, as a general thing, feel pretty jolly just now, and it is the Protective Tariff which is responsible for it. There is no doubt about that. And the load of it is that the farmers are not the only people who are feeling jolly, but the jolly effects of Protection prosperity have been felt by people in all walks of life everywhere throughout the country. As a prodigal of jollity the Protective Tariff has few if any equals, and we are glad to see that the Louisville Courier-Journal is as fast beginning to recognize the fact.

Sense.

The Boston Herald speaks approvingly of the Portland Oregonian as "a Republican newspaper that has always had sound ideas upon the tariff, and then goes on to quote the Oregonian as saying that "enough has been done for the manufacturers and wholesome relief would consider the interests of the consumers, especially those of the Brooklyn class." It will now be in order for the Herald to note to Tom Paine as "a distinguished exponent of orthodox Christianity."

BEETROOT SUGAR FACTORY.

Charlevoix Sugar Company Duly Incorporated.

Articles of incorporation for the Charlevoix Beet Sugar Co., were filed with secretary of state last week, with capital stock of $250,000. Hon. Julius Nichols is president of the company.

This means that Charlevoix is promisingly certain to have a beet sugar factory. The plant is to cost $200,000, $100,000 of which is to be represented by bonds of the corporation. Two hundred thousand dollars is already subscribed by outside parties, and $100,000 is to be raised now. We mean by this that stock to the amount of $100 is subscribed. The contract for the erection of the buildings is let, subject to the subscription to stock to the amount of $100,000.

Another condition stipulated is the pledging by the farmers of 5,000 acres of beets, and farmers will be asked to subscribe from the first year from one to three shares (5 stock per acre.

This project differs from the factory for the best profit on their acreage that exists in the realm of agriculture. There are thirteen sugar factories in Michigan, and six a dollar of stock in them is for sale. It is known as the best paying of all stocks, and the best producer of agricultural prosperity.

Mr. A. L. Coulter has been employed by the company to visit the farmers of the section in its interest.

The beet sugar crop is far more remunerative than other beans, potatoes or wheat, even at their best. The area of wheat under favorable conditions will not net the farmer over $20, forty acres of potatoes, on the favorable conditions will not net the farmer over $500, forty acres of beans, under favorable conditions will not net the farmer over $500, while forty acres of beets will net the farmer over $2,000.

The average cost of producing an acre of beets and delivering the same to the factory is from $25 to $28. Under favorable conditions this cost has been reduced to $15, and under unfavorable conditions it has been known to run as high as $31. The average, however, will not be far from $25. The average tonnage per acre in the state is from twenty to fourteen. The average price paid for beets during the past season was $5.25. It will be seen, therefore, that the beet sugar crop is far more remunerative than any other crop grown in the state.

While the sugar beet is more remunerative than any other crop, it improverishes the land less. According to Dean Davenport, of the Illinois Agricultural College, the carbon, hydrogen and oxygen which form the sugar, are taken from the air. Theoretically therefore the fertility of the land would not be diminished if the pulp is returned.

Most farmers this season cannot show less than 50 per cent profit while many can show more.

Sugar beets have the advantage of all other crops in this sense, that the prices fixed by contract before the seed is sown, and the money is received earlier than the average receipts for wheat or corn.

The beet sugar refinery and the dairy interest go hand in hand. Beet pulp and tops and the refuse molasses of 60,000 tons of beets constitute an enormous food supply for all kinds of live stock.

It will therefore be seen that the sugar beet industry is the greatest agricultural industry the world has ever known.

MARINE NOTES.

The steamer Charlevoix was here Tuesday morning on her last trip.

The schooner Naiad arrived in Chicago Monday night.

The Milwaukee Train steamer M. O. Nell was here yesterday on her last trip.

The steamers John Sipes and Westwind left Tuesday morning for lower lake ports.

The steamer Hazel, of Harbor Springs, was here Tuesday, after a load of flour and feed for Cross Village.

The schooner Mazeppa, which was taking a cargo of stone from Alabaster for Chicago, arrived there Saturday morning, and is probably on her way here.

John O'Neil was the successful bidder at the U. S. Marshal sale of the schooner Ellenora Wednesday. The price was $215. The cargo of lumber was sold to T. Flanagan for $400.

The schooners Spooksteep and Hackley left Tuesday for Milwaukee, and will by up. The schooner Hatcher Boy left for Chicago and the Gaskin for Cleveland the same day. This probably closes up shipments by sailing vessels.

In addition to the damage done to shipping by the recent long continued northwest gale, the seas have rendered useless thousands of dollars worth of harbor improvements on the east shore of Lake Michigan by filling the harbor entrances with sand. Dangerous bars have been found in the months of all the rivers since the blow upland down and steamers again took up their routes. At St. Joseph, Holland, Grand Haven, Muskegon and Ludington, steamers are experiencing much difficulty in getting in and out with their boats, especially when a sea is running, and Holland harbor abandoned for the season by the Graham & Morton line. At the month of Muskegon harbor there is a bar with only thirteen feet of water, and another bar has formed at Grand Haven which is even worse.

THE FISH TRUST EXTENDS.

Detroit Journal. The legislature of 1897 at the demand of the fish trust passed a law making the closed season 30 days longer, which will extend from October 30 to December 15. The best legislation amended this law only at a point immaterial so far as the recent operations of Warden Brewster on Lake Michigan are concerned. The most legislature the latest, did not amend the law, so that the closed season stands as fixed in 1897.

In all these legislatures the so-called independent fishermen, as distinguished from the trust, fought the law. They pointed out at the time that a close season invariably advantages the poor of the poor, which was to the interest of the fish trust, to wit the Booth Packing Company.

It was also insinuated, if not openly declared, that the fish trust with its superior equipment and wealth and large influence, would probably be safe from interference by the officers of the law if it should make ducks and drakes of the close season, existing its nets without regard to the time of year.

The fish trust, on the other hand, called on high heaven to witness that it was the best friend the fish had. Science was called in by it to testify that as whitefish and trout were spawning from the 30th of October to the 15th of December, it was barbarous to catch them between those dates. Influence was brought to bear of lamentable by this righteous minded friend of nake fish, and precisely the law which the trust demanded was passed, though on a very narrow margin.

And now comes Warden Brewster and catches the trust red-handed in breaking the very law it worked so hard to secure. It then does not prove that the independent fishermen were right in their estimate of the sincerity of the trust when it remains for the latter to show the contrary in the courts. Perhaps it will prove that the wicked, independent fishermen made the logs, nets and employes of the trust and used them to bring the prosecution against before the people.

As for the new court, it is a good one to enforce so long as we have Brewsters enough to go around. It is at least as fair to the trusts as to the independent fishermen. The latter have decided it to be unnecessary to the preservation of the fish, and it is not unlikely that the trust itself will have a change of heart and appear before the next legislature demanding its repeal. Either that or the head of the mighty Brewster on a platter.

Last Monday morning about seven o'clock, the bridge tenders from their house, saw what appeared to be female apparel under the bridge approach in the trough that conducts the street drainage into the river. An inspection revealed the fact that the apparel was worn by a female. She was taken to the bridge house lastly stiffened by cold, and the marshal telephoned for, who took her to the jailor's rooms. The girl is about twenty years of age, and is the daughter of a man named Sullens, of Marion. Her home relations have caused some inquiry by the authorities before. The girl claims she has been abused and overworked at home. Wednesday Justice McCarney arranged for the girl being taken to the county poor house. Further inquiry will be made as to the cause of the poor simple minded girl being a castaway.

The corn crop in the upper portion of the Traverse region, namely Antrim, Charlevoix and Emmet counties, has been remarkable this year. When the editor of this paper came north in 1883, it was thought that the corn could not be grown to advantage in this northern country. At that time only Stowell corn, or Indian corn was planted. Since then only varieties of dent corn have been introduced—corn ripening in September—and now some of the very best corn in the State is being raised here. As a matter of demonstration fact, there is no crop of grain grown in southern Michigan, and no variety of fruit save perhaps peaches—which can not be grown to equal advantage in northern Michigan, save in respect of markets.—Petoskey News.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor

The congregations last Sunday were good, and there is a noticable increase in the average attendance within the average, as compared with a year ago is almost one third larger by actual count.

The spiritual life of the church is gradually registering higher marks for which we are glad. The pastor preached on "Love abounding according to knowledge and good sense," in the morning; and in the evening on "The fox's vineyard."

Next Sunday the pastor expects to preach in the morning on "Talent Trusts," Matt. 25:15; and in the evening on "Wings and what they teach."

The Men's Auxiliary expect to hold one of their banquets in the near future. Those who were present at the last one will want to attend the coming one, and those who were not, don't know what they missed.

The musical part of the services last Sunday was inspiring and much enjoyed. The additional instruments—cornet and violins, in the evening were a great help.

ARGENTINE NEWSPAPERS.

Progress of Printing There Since Jesuits Introduced it in 1780.

One feature of the progress of the South American States is the increase of the number of newspapers and magazines. A recent issue of the Deutsch-Amerikan Bulletin of the Argentine Republic gives some details of the development of printing and journalism in that country. The article calls attention to the fact that the first printing office in the region of the River Plate was established in 1596 by some Jesuit Fathers at their missions in Paraguay. They at first used engraved blocks of wood and later engraved wooden types. In 1701 they established the first printing office in the Argentine Republic proper. This was at Cordova. When the Fathers were driven out two years after that the printing office at Cordova was abandoned, but it was transferred soon after to Buenos Aires. There it was called the Printing Office of the Foundling, as its earnings were applied to the support of the foundling. It was continued until 1824. The first newspaper in Buenos Aires was the Mercurio Telegraph, which came out in 1801. At that time there was no freedom for the press, but the revolution of 1810 gave an impulse to the publication of newspapers and from that time on the number kept growing larger. There are now 739 periodicals published in the country. Of these about four are dailies and six weeklies, six of them are Spanish, but eleven are English, twenty-four Italian and seven French.

The Philadelphia as a Suburb.

Few people know that Philadelphia has quite a colony of business men who, while maintaining families in the Quaker City, make New York the field of their battle for fame and fortune. Not a small percentage of these, too, suffer the wear and tear of trains daily rather than be away from their hearth stones at night. Two-hour trips are shortened, of course, by conversation, card playing and the ravenous and rapidly growing American habit of newspaper reading. One exclusive set kills time on wheels with that reigning fad—bridge whist, while another, composed of men widely known socially and professionally, shortens the time more effectually than all the rest with the fascinating game of "draw." It's a pretty good traveling pace to keep, but manhood is a relentless task master, and so these modern Jabins must go on to the end. So long as they drop their dollars here it's all right.—Philadelphia Exchange.

Wool sweep the trust.

There being a greater supply the world over than is required for consumption any effort of the trust to crush the best sugar industry of this country by removing the tariff would be to bring in enormous plantities of beet sugar and cane, too. This would sweep the trust and kill the best industry at the same time.—San Francisco Examiner.

"The Best Place to Trade"

might be very confusing and misleading if people did not have a good test to apply—and that is judge a merchant NOT by what he says in his advertisements but by what he does in value giving. Tats just the basis upon which we ask you to judge this store. We like to have our advertisements read because they are our store news, but we do not ask people to take them as proof that we give best values. That proof awaits our customers at the store. We are showing new goods in every department which we should be glad to have you see.

We take the following, concerning one of this number, from the Boyne Citizen: "On Tuesday evening last an event took place in this village of the greatest interest among the Masonic fraternity. It was the occasion of Boyne City Lodge, No 361, F. & A. M., paying tribute to their oldest brother, George Keyes, of this village, who has graced the honored role of Masonry for a period almost extending over a period of more than half a century. The brothers from Boyne City and vicinity, accompanied by their wives, arrived by special train from that place at 7:00 p. m., and were escorted to the dears hall, where a reception was held, and a handsome upholstered arm chair of the modern type was presented to the venerable brother as a token of the high esteem in which the veteran Mason is held by the brethren. Worshipful Master Willis Hord, of Boyne City presided. Brother Wm. Mogg made the presentation speech in feeling remarks, incidentally remarking that Boyne Falls was proud to boast of the oldest Mason in the county, as well as one of the few remaining veterans of the Mexican war, in which Mr. Kyes served two years. Worshipful Master Hord expressed the appreciation of Brother Keyes by-gone, who, though 82 years of age, still often walked to Boyne City to attend lodge, returning in the same way after lodge.

"I hadn't seen my father for years before, and Rube, which was true enough, for we had been living with those Indians almost. It didn't only grieve my mother, but it made her real suspicious of strangers. You may be sure I was very careful to keep out of the way of all parties that came from Buenos Ayres.

"Rube, I reckon, knew another reason why I should be shy of strangers. He was a good deal more than half an Indian himself, and he knew that if I was seen by any of my friends I should be made to go back to my people. Well, I was very happy with my mother and Rube, and I reckon I should have been quite happy if it hadn't been for the thought that I was doing a very wrong thing in not letting my father know that I was living. I had lived with the Indians with my mother for more than two years, when one day I was out by myself a little way from the village I saw a party of white men coming along. I was very much surprised, for we never saw a white man except those who came to trade with us, and we had heard that there was a war going on between the Indians and the Buenos Ayres people, and we had heard that the Indians were getting the best of it. I was very much surprised, and I was very much pleased, for I was very fond of my father, and had never seen him since I was a little boy. I was very much afraid of my mother, and I was very much afraid of Rube, but I was very fond of my father. I was very much afraid that he would be very angry with me for not letting him know that I was living, and I was very much afraid that he would be very angry with me for not letting him know that I was living with the Indians

Season tickets for remainder of lecture course 75c.

The new building has been wired for electric lights.

Walter Sinclair tried the ice at Susan Lake last week. "I am in it," said he and sure he was in it up to his ears.

The enrollment of the High School is 140, the average attendance has much was of it. The total enrollment of the schools is 567.

The Teachers' and Patrons' Convention, Friday night, was the largest educational gathering ever held in Charlevoix county.

Misses McLachlan and Horgee of the Washington school held exercises in that building on Thursday in keeping with Thanksgiving.

The twelfth grade have heretofore been responsible for the writing of the school notes which duty has now devolved upon the members of the eleventh grade.

By vote of the board of education, this term has been made fifteen weeks in length instead of fourteen as this school will open after New Years instead of as announced. This term will close December 20th.

The fifth and sixth grades has special Thanksgiving exercises Wednesday morning. In the afternoon Miss Tracy and Miss McMillan conducted their exercises and the scholars did honor to themselves and their teachers.

The lecture on Modern Chivalry, in the Vassar High School Course was at the end order, for it gave to audience and daily lessons of life, popular interest through with learning, beauty of thought and diction, eloquence, wit and humor.

The lecture of Rev. A. B. Storrs, "Modern Chivalry" is the enlistment of splendid and virile powers—of thought and speech in the stimulation of valorous and noble spirited, everyday living. It is a high minded message which the youthful knights of America can receive lasting profit.

The eighth grade made the best record last month, the average number belonging is 35 and 32. The average attendance being 35 and 42, the per cent of attendance 99.07. Why number of half days absence 15. No tardiness. It is needless to say they received the banner.

Upon Lyceum this week and a good program has been prepared. Come out and see what the youngsters are doing. One of the principal features will be a debate between the Misses Cronkshank, Wilbur and Cook, and Messrs. Smith, Cameron and Stone. The question is, Resolved, that the destruction of the Spanish Armada was a greater historical event than the downfall of Napoleon. No admission fees.

The foot ball game between Petoskey and Charlevoix ended in victory for Charlevoix, by the score of 26 to 0. The playing of Frank Campbell at Full Back in the absence of Bert Hornett was a great success, as Mr. Campbell made two touch-downs and also made large kicks in the opposing goals, through which the Half Back made large gains. This game gives the C. H. S. team the championship of Northern Michigan as they have shown themselves far superior to their opponents.

The Seniors have been unusually fortunate in securing the best talent in town for their entertainment next Friday evening in the high school room. The proceeds are to help defray the usual class expenses and a good attendance is desired. This entertainment will be a record breaker in the list of Senior entertainments, and a more enjoyable way of spending the evening cannot be found.

Pere Marquette's Immense Business Demanded New Rolling Stock.

New rolling stock just ordered by the Pere Marquette railroad for delivery in April next, with what has been ordered since the consolidation into the Pere Marquette system, represents an outlay of about $3,000,000, covering fifty two engines, 2,000 freight cars and seventeen passenger coaches. The order just placed calls for ten Mallet locomotives for passenger service to be numbered 100 to 109, inclusive, and have electric headlights and great power and speed. 500 standard box cars, passenger coaches 200 standard to obtain coal cars and twenty caboose, which will be made by the American Car & Foundry Co. at Detroit. Within the past few days seven new locomotives have been received and are already in service. There is such a rush of business at present, the officials say, that it is impossible to move the freight promptly.

Saw Death Near.

"It often made my heart ache," writes L. C. Overstreet, of Elgin, Tenn. "So long my wife cough until it seemed her weak and sore lungs would collapse. Good doctors said she was so far gone with Consumption that no medicine of earthly help could save her, but a friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery and persistent use of this excellent medicine saved her life." It's all sweetly guaranteed for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma and all Throat and Lung diseases. 50c. and $1.00 at F. G. Dixon & Co. Trial bottles free.

LET THE FISH TRUST PAY.

Petoskey Record, 6th inst. Thursday Warden Brewster found and seized $10,000 worth of nets in Michigan waters belonging to the Booth Company, a corporation foreign to this state. The papers say that this company, rated at over a million dollars, proposes to use the state mines the fish warden surrenders them.

The Record sincerely hopes that the state authorities will stand pat in the endeavor to enforce the fishing laws our own Michigan corporation Law Book compiled to suffer, and if confiscated nets men whose only capital consisted of a boat and gang of gill nets could have a not one half so good a reason for letting off a millionaire trust like the Booth company who are fishing with big fleets of tugs for goods on stock, as the poor fellow who is fishing for a bare living for himself and family. The Booth company know what the Michigan law is, and if they see fit to violate that law by setting hundreds of miles of nets in Michigan water they should get the full penalty of the law.

The Beaver islanders, and shore fishermen from the Straits down to Manistee have been hauled over the coals by Brewster, and now that he has tackled the Chicago millionaire fish trust he should be backed by public sentiment and the courts on every point wherein he is clearly within the provisions of the state law. Another consideration is that the prevention of pirratical fishing by the big fleet of chicago tugs in the waters of the lake is in the interest of our shore fishermen in this region. The object of the law is to preserve the fish supply. If Illinois and Wisconsin would adopt and inforce against these big fish companies as good a law as Michigan has in five years there would be no abundant supply of whitefish and trout, for every sail boat fisherman on Lake Michigan.

The Pains of Kidney Disease
Warn You Against the Most Dreadfully Fatal of Disorders. You Can be Cured by Promptly Using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.
Pain is nature's signal whereby she warns of approaching danger. The diseases which are so dreadfully fatal in disorders of the kidneys and liver are accompanied by acute nerve pains and discomforts.
One of the most common symptoms of kidney disease is the shooting wrenching sensation when passing water which is here felt more frequently and at unseasonable times. Then there is the dull, heavy sensation in the small of the back and down the limbs. When these pains are accompanied by deposits in the urine also it has stood for years that these pains have been taken for what nature is trying to tell us, the warning of some serious disease. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.
Take one pill at a time and in a surprisingly little time you will be free from all pain in the kidneys. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are distinct and complete in their action and specialties in power and results. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are composed of those organic principles which are most active in the treatment of those diseases.

THE BELT KEEPS THE MILL GOING

FILIPINO MUSICAL TASTE.
Thus Philippe of Months since Native Playing is Magnificent.
The Filipinos are the finest ear musicians in the world. Not only do they have a musical sense, but they are delicately gifted with the power of appreciation and a sort of memory. The discovery of this new and wonderful musical value in man, came in addition to Admiral Dewey's victory in the Philippines. It appears that among the episodes of the dread disease in that country have been cases so stupefied as to be mistakenly discovered by soldiers that the man in pain sighs while was helping for the music, and these soldiers conceived a possibility. Then the cook and disarmed I assume, the Indian discovered itself and experiment made many sighs which in short, sounded and found dance, grief, drying candle. A few such cases, in some such way, drew attention to the fact that in from 200 to 300 years, and the intervening years between and the Indian surrender without a single musical instrument. The Indian has retained a long list of instruments which he uses in such the wilderness and the music was in other musical instruments, and the Indian has kept the music of the Aztecs, Mayas, Incas, Quichuas, Chibchas and Tolmecs, which he plays on instruments which the music and and when the conquerors of Mexico and Peru, the Indian musicians, the music of the Indian musicians, the music, and the Indian musicians, the music, and the Indian musicians, the music, and

MARINE NOTES.

The schooner Naomi has laid up at Manistique.

The schooner Maine arrived Saturday and is stripped.

The steamship Colorado is to leave Chicago today on one more trip.

The schooner Luting is about leaving Sutton's Bay for Chicago, lumber laden.

The tug Mary McLeane has laid up, leaving but one tug—the Taylor in commission.

Grand Haven light station now has a fog-horn that is operated by compressed air.

The schooner Ann Maria, coal-laden from Cleveland to Milwaukee, is ashore on Middle Island reef near Algonac.

Navigation may take probably closer last night. The Chrysler had some trouble in getting through the ice yesterday.

The schooner Caledonia having part of a load of potatoes bought on consignment from Chicago, and by way of Chicago, Ottawa, was totally wrecked near Frankfort one day last week. The crew took to the lake in a yawl and were picked up by the schooner Lizzie A. Burton and taken to Milwaukee.

The weather bureau has just completed a fine new steel signal tower at Big Ts. Sable similar to the one built last summer at Ludington. The service is both closer will commence with the opening of navigation next spring. The tower at Big Sable stands in plain view of passing vessels which invariably run close to shore at this point. The information they are service will be of unusual value to sailors. The weather bulletins will be communicated to the keeper of the Ft. Sable station by telephone from Ludington.

We stated in our last issue that Saturday would be "positively the last appearance" of sail vessels. We believe we are correct in saying, however, that this week will wind up sail vessel shipments, and to fact all shipments for this port. The schooners West Side and Maxwell and the steambarges Wilcox and Pine Lake left lumber laden Tuesday morning. The steambarge John Spry arrived from lower lake ports the same morning and went to Boyne City to lay up. The schooner Duval, of Harbor Beach came in Tuesday morning, and will take Charlevoix lumber home today or tomorrow.

The Charlevoix life saving station was closed at midnight Saturday. On the afternoon of that day Capt. Fountain and his men dismantled themselves by a rescue that adds to the distinguished history of that service. About three o'clock the lookout in the tower, by the aid of a glass, saw a vessel about ten miles out dying a flag union down. After getting word to a tug to follow him, Capt. Fountain ordered the life-boat launched, and out through a big south west one they went, followed by the tug, which soon took the boat in tow. It was found to be the small schooner Nettie Johnson, which left here that afternoon for St. James. The vessel had sprung a leak, and the water was gaining on the pumps so that she was settling by the bow. The life-savers manned the pumps, and the tug brought the whole outfit into port. Just to the life-saving crew, the boat would surely have been foundered. She was loaded with coal, peas and general winter supplies. About fifty bushels of the peas were wet. Capt. Johnson soon stopped the leak and again proceeded on his voyage.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor.

The Men's Auxiliary has decided to be responsible for the expense of shipping to Charlevoix the world-famed Edward Baxter Perry, pianist and lecturer. Mr Perry has created for himself this marvelously interesting and unique combination of Lecture Recital, whereby he makes the piano illustrate his lectures, and his lectures illustrate his recitals. This is the greatest musical event in the history of Charlevoix. At the Congregational church Thursday Dec 12. Don't miss it.

ALL THE LOUD TALK ABOUT

might be very confusing and misleading if people did not have a good test to apply—and that is judge a merchant NOT by what he says in his advertisements but by what he does in value giving. Take just the basis upon which we ask you to judge this store. We like to have our advertisements read because they are our store news, but we do not ask people to take them as proof that we give best values. That proof awaits our customers at the store. Wilson; 1st vice pres., Berth Clark; 2nd vice pres., Bishop; 3d vice pres., Lorena Johnson; 4th vice pres., Ida DeWitt; sec. Earl Clark; treas., E. A. Stuart. A special meeting of the new cabinet is called for Monday evening (tog. 16) in the Pastor's study. These is important business which requires immediate attention.

Manistee Herald: Charlevoix is on a big way to secure a sugar beet factory providing they can get farmers to contract to raise a sufficient acreage of beets to guarantee the mere a success and $100,000 of the $300,000 of stock is taken by local parties. The promoters hope to get the farmers to take $50,000 worth of stock, paying for it with the proceeds of eight fine crops of beets. All data indicate that this is one of the best locations in the state for the production of sugar beets. Andrew Anderson, county clerk, and other prominent citizens, are very hopeful that the proposition may be carried out.

—Prof. E. B. Hughes is organizing a short hand class which will meet twice a week during the winter evenings. The course will be thorough and complete, and students may have individual or class instruction just as they prefer. A knowledge of short hand will give one a valuable accomplishment, an enfeebling source of entertainment, an intellectual pleasure, and, best of all, a profitable profession. Mr. Hughes has practical stenography for fifteen years, has had considerable experience as court reporter, and has successfully taught his art to hundreds of students. As the class is necessarily limited, intending students should apply at once at 303 Antrim street.

The Process of Deer Sugar Making.

The boots are first described in the factory shelf, the floors of which slope to the center, through which extends a 4 shapped channel. Into this channel the boots are dumped into the factory to accumulate a stream of water. Here they are washed by machinery and dumped into a slicer which cuts them into round slices about the size and half the length of a half-pound "Peck" slices, called cassettes, are passed through an oscillating conveyor into a centrifugal basket 40 in round and 40 cylinders, called cells, holding from one to two and one half tons of raw sugar cane.

A stream of water 6 tuns forced through these cells which are connected. The water is 95 per cent of the juice released from the beet cells by slicing. No pressure is required the juice is in little boxes made cells and would be forced into the pulp by pressure. The pulp is then dumped and hauled away to feed stock. The liquid now contains the sugar of the beet with all its impurities. By mixing will lime and passing carbonic acid gas through this liquid, the impurities are rendered insoluble and are easily extracted by filtration. The process of mixing, carbonating and filtering is now repeated. The liquid is then purified and bleached with sulphur fumes and passed into vacuum pans and evaporated by a steam coil. The product is then passed into crystallizers where crystallization is completed. The entire, however, at this period is brown and mixture resembles that of brown sugar and molasses and is passed into a long basin over the centrifugals, usually about ten in number and making 1,000 revolutions per minute when at full speed. Here is probably the most beautiful, rapid and surprising transformation in the whole plant. In half a minute the molasses is thrown off through a fine wire gauze and the dark brown mass becomes as white and pure as the driven snow. The molasses is conveyed to a tank where it is stored for future use. The now refined sugar is conveyed to a dryer, dried, sifted and passed through a conveyor into barrels lined with paper and bags filled with cubes, and is ready for the market. such is the wonderful process of sugar making. The beet in the shed live morning by this sudden, interesting, rapid and remarkable transformation becomes standard granulated sugar for your breakfast cocoa or coffee to-morrow morning.

The Industry of the Future.

Industrial nature has lavished her manifest bounties on our State in exhaustible mines and resources.

Cabinet & Hewin, in the upper country, have been a verifable Indian.

The Michigan iron mines have made many men multi-millionaires.

Michigan farms have been converted into fabulous fortunes, almost rivaling the wealth of Croesus.

Health investigations show an extensive root best already partially developed and enriching thousands.

The Inland and Wyandotte mines are undestined by a salt rock of colossal proportions, sufficient to supply the whole world for thousands of years.

The discovery of incalculable deposits of shell marl suitable for the manufacture of portland cement, has proven to be one of nature's richest legacies to our great state. This shell marl, practically pure carbonate lime, has been filtered through the centuries, treasured continentally in nature's vaults and only awaits the application of the dredge and rotary kiln.

Last but not least is the discovery of the peculiar fitness and adaptability of Michigan's soil for sugar beet production. The product is then pure and universe-valiance where crystallization is completed. The Holy Cross church will give a very interesting Christmas entertainment this year. One special feature will be the presence of the Beaver Island string band comprising eight pieces. Much credit is due Rev. Fr. Zagelder and the sisters for organizing and improving the musical talent of our young Irishmen. A more detailed announcement of the program will appear later.

SCHOOL COMMUNICATIONS.

In our visits this fall, we have been asking the teachers, "What do you most be as familiar with the world as he is with his friend's face in order to become a good speller?" Dull until the word is known. We were very much pleased with a recitation in spelling by Miss Maria McIntyres school. As each grade was called the pupil stepped to the blackboard and wrote the words he had been studying. Occasionally in the lower grades a little prompting was necessary.

Mr. Geo. B. Aiton, State Inspector of High Schools for Minnesota, says: "Inasmuch as our vocabulary cannot be abridged and is not likely to be materially simplified, our schools make a specialty of spelling. The subject should or begin in the first primary and should be extended through the high school. Spelling must without disciplinary value in itself. It is of fundamental assistance to other subjects, part of the time spent on Latin grammar might be spent to better advantage on spelling, and that without dual loss to Latin.

Most of the effort now given to stumbling along in reading might be expended on spelling with final advantage in reading. Much of the failure to "sense".

Arithmetical problems may be traced to want of power to read and want of power to read may be traced again to poor spelling.

Illiteracy is the bottom of poor spelling. Power to grasp the central thought of a sentence is inseparable from a rapid discriminating eye. Rapid appropriations of printed thought is possible only to the owner of the searching and certain eye. Spelling for purpose of writing, for composition is a small part of its province. Pupils should learn to spell as a means of getting acquainted with words, as a means of ascertaining their own speech.

CHAIN HOLDS TRAIN.

NOT ALLOWED TO PROCEED UNTIL $78 IS PAID.

Discharged Employe Has Attachment Served and Makes Election Dangerous at Parkersburg, Ill.—Omaha Fire Causes Heavy Loss—News Notes.

The sensational character of some train wreks are added to the catalogue of Providence, the latest one, and the latest cause of judgment, $78 to the good. When the engineer pulled into the station the locomotive had an attachment served upon it in the form of a chain, which the sheriff had taken from a freight car. It appeared that a discharged employe had made complaint to a justice of the peace that the company owed him $78 for wages. The justice issued a writ of attachment and had both witnesses and the engine served with it. The engineer, knowing the importance of his charge, had left the station and was on his way to the next station when the sheriff boarded the train and ordered the engineer to stop. The engineer refused to do so, and the sheriff then ordered the train hands to throw the chain around the engine and prevent its moving. The engineer, knowing that the train was in charge of the sheriff, and being anxious to get to his destination, ordered the train hands to obey the sheriff's order, and they did so. The train was then held until the company could send the $78 to the justice of the peace to satisfy the claim, when the train was released and allowed to proceed. The incident has caused much comment among the people of Parkersburg, and it is said that the election next Tuesday will be quite lively.

MOVING CAUSES TURN UP.

Gustav Bonding, former assistant to Vanderbilt, has been in Omaha for some time, ostensibly looking for a position in the railroad business, but it is generally supposed that he was looking after the bonus which he had loaned Vanderbilt to induce the latter to build the Nickel Plate road. It is now known that Bonding returned to Mr. Vanderbilt the bonus, minus a few thousand dollars, which he had loaned Vanderbilt, and that Vanderbilt has now turned the bonus over to the Nickel Plate people, who will use it in the building of their road. It is said that Bonding returned to Vanderbilt $90,000 of the $100,000 he had loaned him, and that Vanderbilt has turned the entire $100,000 over to the Nickel Plate people. It is said that Bonding returned the $90,000 to Vanderbilt because he was unable to find a place for the money, and that he thought it was better for Vanderbilt to have the money than to let it lie idle. It is said that Bonding returned the $90,000 to Vanderbilt in a few days before being placed on the stand.

Train Robber Receives $12,500.

Deputy Sheriff Lathrop has returned to Nelhart, Mont., a man named Jack Gordon, who is believed to be Jack Hoskins, an associate of Harry Longbaugh, the Utah outlaw, and Butch Cassidy, the Montana desperado, who robbed the Great Northern train near Malta last June of $12,500. The robbery was one of the most daring of the kind.

The company carries no insurance, as it is a mutual concern, and the loss will be borne by the members. The company's stock was valued at $15,000. The cause of the fire is unknown. The building was a frame structure, and was valued at $5,000. The company's stock was nearly all destroyed. The company will rebuild.

Fatal Wreck in Mississippi.

A Stockman on Excursion Train Killed in a Tunnel.

A wreck in which one person was killed and another slightly injured occurred on the Illinois Central road Sunday. The train was a special excursion train from Canton to Water Valley, Miss., and was carrying a number of people who had been to the Canton Stock Show. The train was composed of the engine, one baggage car and the coaches, and was in charge of Conductor Cole and Engineer Hughes. The train was running at the rate of about 25 miles an hour when it struck a stalled car in a tunnel. The stalled car was a stock car, and was being shifted from the main track to a side track when the train came in sight. The engine was demolished, and the fireman, who was on the engine, was killed. The engineer was slightly injured. The baggage car was also demolished, and the coaches were badly damaged. The stalled car was not much damaged. The wreck was caused by the failure of the switchman to open the switch properly.

TELLS OF THE NEEDS OF ALASKA.

Gov. Brady, in Annual Report, Makes Several Important Recommendations.

The needs of Alaska, as summarized in the recommendations made by Gov. Brady in his annual report, are: Extension of the laws of the United States relating to the lands for homestead purposes; a delegate in Congress without national representation; a mail between Alaska and the United States at reasonable rates; a Louisiana Purchase Exposition in 1903; the establishment of a government in the territory, and enactment of a game law for the district. He says that over the mainland there is a territorial form of government, but that there is little work for those who have any property to care for. In the Nome and Rampart districts there is the exception of the laws in force in the most established form of government, however, has led to the retreat of many persons to Seattle, Dawson, Cape Nome and Fairbanks, which fact they mention as evidence of the fear of government.

WOUNDS TRAVELING SALESMAN.

Salt Lake Youth Shoots W. S. Hayner, Traveling Man.

W. S. Hayner, a Chicago traveling man, was shot and dangerously wounded in Salt Lake City by one Lorenzo Young, a young man of good family, and a student of the university of Utah. The shooting of Hayner occurred in the Young home, and was the result of a lover's quarrel. It is believed that Young became angry after meeting Hayner, who was paying his suit to a young woman to whom Knights himself was paying his addresses. Young, it is said, then changed his attitude and shot the young man in the back as he was leaving the house. The wounded man proceeded to a drug store and then went to a hospital. He will probably recover.

Dunlap then drew a revolver and fired at Day, who ran to the rear of the saloon and there was shot in the back. MARINE NOTES.

Pine Lake is yet open and the steamer Scotiac made a trip to Boyne City yesterday.

The steamship Illinois way in port early Saturday on her way to Chicago on her last trip.

The schooner Experiment has been sold to John Wilkins by V. H. Lindwig of St. Joseph, Mich.

The Michigan this fishing tugs belonging in this section are all back home again, Wednesday.

Capt. Geo. Weaver has shipped an image of the steambarge Wolverine which will run all winter between Two Rivers and Manitowoc.

The steamer Columbia left Suttons Bay last Thursday for Chicago towing the schooner Hattie Hunt, which has a cargo of potatoes on board.

The steamer Pine Lake arrived from Chicago and Milwaukee last night with a full cargo of grain for the cedar mills and beer for Bigbands.

It is getting to be an altogether too common thing for managers of transportation companies to talk of having steamers built after they become possessed of the knowledge that every available berth at the lake shipyards is engaged so far ahead that contracts for immediate construction are entirely out of the question. The Lake Superior and Lake Michigan Trans. Co. managers are the latest to indulge in such talk. They want, it is said, a steamer with stateroom accommodation for 100 passengers and 1500 tons freight capacity.

The steam barge Wolverine arrived here a week ago, for a load of East Jordan lumber, but came down and tied up, being unable to get through the ice in South Arm. The larger schooner Fletcher had left Chicago for East Jordan, and the Wolverine captain proposed to follow up the Fletcher. The latter steamer arrived Tuesday, but neither of the barges cared to try the ice. The large tug Mertes, bound from the Soo to Chicago, was in the harbor windbound, and she was engaged to go ahead and break the ice. As we go to press the steam barges have not arrived down yet.

The big steel barge Sonstine was floated off the beach at Rocky point, Lake Superior, one day last week, after Capt. James Reed, the eccentric wrecker, had pumped air into the water compartments for days. Have then from the tug Roscoebel. The tug, towing the Sonstine, started at once for Marquette. The successful outcome of Capt. Reed's experiment with compressed air will surprise most wreckers. He has had a lifetime of many years of raising sunken vessels with air bags and pontoons. His first big experiment was in raising the steamer Philip H. Ammour, which was sunk in ninety feet of water in the St. Clair river. His next big work was in trying to raise the Lehigh Valley Iron Cayuga in 110 feet of water, near Waugoshance light in the Straits of Mackinac, but, as is well known, in this instance he did not succeed. The position of the Sonstine was much more favorable for the use of air than any other big wreck he had attempted to float. Before going on the rocks the water compartments in the bottom of the steamer had been filled. The big boat bumped over the reef until she landed in seven feet of water. Capt. Reed put his air compressors at work and forced the air in to the compartments, thereby driving the water out through holes in the bottom or through pipes. After some 1500 tons of water had thus been forced out of the wreck the barge floated clear of the reef and was pulled into deep water. The Sonstine is owned by the steel trust and is valued at about $150,000. Our report had it that Capt. Reed took the contract of releasing her at 40 per cent of her value, which would give him $60,000 for three days work.

For the next thirty days I will offer my millinery stock at greatly reduced prices. Some below cost. Call and investigate before buying elsewhere.

Charlevoix Girl Creates Sensation in Chicago.

Chicago specials of the 11th states that Joan Jasper Howe, a private in the United States cavalry stationed at Jefferson Barracks, near St. Louis, deserted his regiment on account of love for Myrtle Kendall, his sweetheart, and was in turn deserted and betrayed to the police by the girl because of jealousy. He now occupies a cell at the Harrison street station. The girl and Howe met in Chicago at the home of a friend of the girl's at 499 Wabash avenue, Mrs. Maggie Phillips. Howe's attention to her caused the lovers to quarrel and separate. Howe will be returned to his regiment for court-martial.

Miss Kendall is the daughter of the late Pierce Kendall who was killed in the Iroquois disaster, and is a grandaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Vosburg, of Marion.

The girl fell love with Mrs. Maggie Phillips, wife of Al. Phillips, about two weeks ago.

—In the work of making the beet sugar factory a success—five months depends upon the farmers, and the success of the project means more to the farmer than it does to the stockholder who is not a farmer. It means a safe and certain market for a safe and certain crop, and that means prosperity to the farmer. These conditions exist wherever every one of the thirteen sugar factories in Michigan do least as well as it does here. It is experiment—it is established.

—The steamer Hackley was windbound at St. James last Friday, and Capt. Pete went rabbit hunting, in company with an island friend. A large number of rabbits were killed, and most of them brought over as a part of the Hackley's freight. Capt. Pete assevarates that he killed five of the number, which, of course, we are called upon to dispute. The people of Beaver Island are very fond of Capt. Pete, and they cast at his feet, as the crown of Saint Sidbi to Solomon, tokens of their love and regard, and it was rabbits that Capt. Pete got.

—While the new Harth boiler works building is not yet entirely completed, it is in use, and already presents the aspect of being a very busy place. Without doubt it is the largest and best building in Northern Michigan devoted to boiler construction and repair, and will soon be one of the best equipped—for Mr. Harth is rapidly putting in machinery, much of it new. The main building is 42x80 feet, with an additional room 16x20 for boiler and engine. Along one side of the main room, which is the entire height of the building, is a gallery, intended ultimately for a planer and other machinery, but now used for stock. The main shop will be supplied with four stationary and one traveling crane, capable of hoisting and moving the heaviest boiler. Below is a seven foot basement, which is also intended for a work shop. Mr. Harth has work ahead for seven men two months. The manner in which Mr. Harth has "arisen from the ashes" entitles him to much credit.

For Sale—A lot of 3 and 4 foot wood. Apply to B. W. Miller.

Inasmuch as the report is in circulation that Wellington R. Burt, of Saginaw, has withdrawn his subscription to sugar beet stock, we beg permission to print the following Owosso dispatch to a Detroit paper: "W. R. Burt, of Saginaw, was in the city this afternoon, and with his engineer went over two sites for the proposed beet sugar factory. He stated to night that the Owosso Sugar Company would be organized within a week, and that work on the factory would be started immediately after and be done by October 1, 1902.

—The Michigan Central began laying a side track yesterday through the Barron property, which is the site for the new Thos. Foreman, hardwood mills. This property lies on the River Range, about 220 feet south of Fort street, and comprises about 12 acres, on which a valuation of $2,000 to $2,500 an acre is placed by experts. Col. Hooker and other prominent Detroit capitalists are understood to be interested with Mr. Foreman, who went to Detroit after the burning of his Petoskey mill. Construction work for the new mill will be commenced at once, and when it is completed 300 or more hands will be employed.

BLACKSMITH—Wanted, first class blacksmith to take charge of shop in small town. Must be sober and industious; good wages. Address X, Sentinel office.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs. I. B. OLD-TIME STAGING.

When It Took Three Days Between New York and Philadelphia.

The remarkable coaching trip between New York and Philadelphia the other day and the fact that the Philadelphia ladies are talking about attempting to lower the time made by young Mr. Vanderbilt and his friends, recall the old days when the stage coach was the only means of transportation between the two cities. The first New York stage via Trenton and Perth Amboy was instituted by John Butler in 1766. The coach left the sign of the Death of the Fox, a well-known tavern in Brakeberry alley, and was scheduled to arrive in New York in three days. In 1785 a second line of stages to New York was started, and another competitor entered the field in 1776. This line was known as "The Flying Machine," and guaranteed to make the journey in two days. It started from Kim street, near Vine. The vehicles were advertised as "good stage wagons with seats set on springs, and the fare was 3 pence per mile or 20 shillings for the entire route. When the railroad between Camden and South Amboy was built stage travel between Philadelphia and New York ceased, except for a short time, when the stage lines attempted to compete with the railroad. This venture of transportation was finally abandoned in 1838. It is worthy of remark that all the force and energy as well as the capital were supplied by the Philadelphia end of the line, showing how, even in those early days, Philadelphia took the lead in coaching matters.—Philadelphia Record.

Odd Facts Affecting Calendars.

Those persons who have the double advantage of ancient family and certified forefathers, by turning up the calendars—unfortunately, they are not printed ones—for the twelfth century, by Solomon Jarchon, will find the days and dates conjoinded with the present century. Such persons can save the expense of buying for 100 years. Again those with a frugal mind who have preserved the almanacs of the fourteenth century will avoid an outlay for almanacs of the century commencing January 1, 2201, as the dates for the hundred years following will be coincident with those of the last century. But life is scarcely long enough for such economies.

Serum for Snake Bite.

Dr. Calmette of the Pasteur institute in London recently had to use his own serum for snake bite. His finger was bitten while he was examining the venom, and he attributes to the serum his escape with simple inflammation only.

Mowing Machine Is a Snake Killer.

It is a curious fact that there certain kinds of noises, which affrent reptiles. The whirr of the mowing machine is one and in six months as many as 120 cobras alone have been killed on a grass farm in India by putting in front of the advancing machine.

LEARNING THE GAME.

How Eastern Sports Taught Will Hill in Tiny Poker.

When that great plainsman, W. B. Hickok, better known as Wild Bill, came east on what he called a "real hot trail to learn something," he stopped one Saturday night at a hotel in Portland, Me. When he went to his room he was sore vex to find that the adjoining room was occupied by a company of fashionable and rich young sports of Portland whom it did not take him long to discover were playing an interesting game of poker for high stakes. In vain did he try to sleep. He could not do so, and after an hour, he arose, dressed himself and knocked at the door. Instantly all was silent, but he said politely that as they would not let him sleep would they not let him come in and watch the game? They did so and were taken by surprise at the appearance of the man, and asked if he would join them. "I will if you post me, but you know I'm a tenderfoot east," he replied. They were willing to "post" him, and, playing awkwardly, making blunders and asking questions, but seemingly greatly interested, he continued to play until daylight, when he put his winnings, some $1,500, in his pocket. "I thank you gentlemen," he said, according to the Detroit Free Press, "and I'm rather glad you would not let me sleep—I'll be late until tomorrow, so keep me awake some more." But the players did not appear again.

The Balmoral "Tree."

During the residence of the court at Balmoral the King and queen have attended service at Crathie church each Sunday morning, and, with Princess Victoria, have occupied the royal pew, from which the late queen's state chair has been removed. The pew behind is occupied by the suite, and then comes the seats of the royal servants. Under ordinary circumstances the morning "worship" in a Presbyterian church complies from an hour and a half to two hours, but when the Balmoral "tree" is present at Crathie the officiating minister follows the Balmoral "tree" and hymns, prayers, reading and sermon are all got through in an hour. This was the late queen's limit, and the sermon was never allowed to exceed twenty minutes at the most.—London Truth.

Wise Cats in Vermont.

There are wise cats as well as wise people in Vermont. A man living at Pomfret, in that state, possessed one little white tom, which he killed the other evening by its piteous wailings, and led him in a portion of a wood lot where a feline companion had been caught in a trap set for skunks.

—While certain alleged newspapers in this locality use stereotype—commonly called "boiler plate"—in their home printed columns, the SENTINEL, using some plate, has also about thirty columns stereotype matter printed in Chicago, in what constitutes our inside pages. Now in these boiler plate sheets, our aim is to give, as far as possible, when the bare subject of sugar consumption is considered, we want cheap to the consumer. But when the question of sugar production comes to the front, there is not a man within fifty miles of this town but would be glad to pay five cents per pound more for his sugar than he does now, if it could be made in his market town. The Chicago Newspaper Union, which prints the inside of the SENTINEL, did not know that there was any "trust" in sugar factory, and we forgot to tell the concern; hence, in a recent issue, there appeared an article that did not harmonize with what was printed locally. A certain paper in its usual dodecanonic and asinine manner editorialized, attempts to prejudice the public against the SENTINEL because of the article above referred to. We long since decided not to let money or sight degrade ourself by controversing with the paper in question, and we only mention it in this way to expose, for the hundredth time, the true motive—malice.

Half an hour's robber raiders brought them up to the Indians, who had stopped within a mile of their former halting place.

"The moon will be up in 1 o'clock, Inca, and then we must be moving where they are till then. We can see they have now taken up their quarters for the night, they are! No doubt there is a small scamper then.

Then when the Indians would be sound in their tents. They knew now that their numbers were only three to one, but they were quite certain, with surprise, which the Indians would be in their camp, and that they would be able to carry off a few score of their horses without any fighting, they had hitherto gone on on the main chance of finding the Indians off their guard, and of being able to carry off a few horses, if they found the Indians on the alert, and in force, they had intended to return home at once, but now they felt certain of success, and were in high spirits at the prospect of a fresh supply of horses, and of the excitement of the adventure.

Hitherto the Indians had had the advantage of the night. Mr. Harris had lost a few of his horses, and had had a good deal of trouble in recovering them, and had lost a good many of his men, and had had to pay a ransom for the rest. This was the first time that the Indians had had the advantage of the night, and they felt very confident that they would be able to recover the whole of the horses taken by the Indians, and to inflict a severe punishment on the Indians, and have the pleasure of driving them off with a few of their own horses.

Mr. Harris had had a good deal of trouble with his men, who had been very anxious to return home, and had had to promise them that they should be back in a fortnight at the latest, and they were now well on the second week, and they had had no fighting, and had been kept in the saddle all the time. Then we will have all this trouble for nothing, and we will be lucky if we get back in a month, and we have had no fighting, and we have had to pay a ransom for the rest, and we have had a good deal of trouble in recovering them, and we have had a good deal of trouble in recovering them, and we have had a good deal of trouble in recovering them

FARMERS' INSTITUTE

A Very Interesting and Profitable Gathering.

MORNING SESSION

The session of the State Farmers' Institute opened at the Court House on Monday morning with a good representation of farmers and business men present.

The morning topic, "The Requisite for Success in Fruit Growing," was introduced by A. H. Gray, of Acme.

First requisite is love for the work. It should be a life work and no one should enter the work without an enthusiastic interest in the work.

The speaker found the old idea of taking your time in the winter will not carry out in fruit culture.

Find your location, decide what region you wish to grow your fruit in, and locate in that region.

Charlevoix is a good location for fruit raising.

The long summer day is of great benefit to the coloring of fruit.

The Traverse region is as far north as fruit can be profitably raised for market. In this region the period of twilight helps out in the growing and coloring.

The state and county having been selected, the farm or location must be selected. A region comparatively free from frost is the better location. We must look out for atmospheric phenomena and guess the free region. It will receive the greatest amount of warm air. The peach and cherry, the tenderest fruit, should be on the higher lands; the apple can be planted lower and the plum on the lowest.

Hardy fruits are now being grown in the upper peninsula.

Cultivating is important. The "unscrewed" apple takes the eye of the market, "yellow peach" and "blossom." The ground must be thoroughly cultivated and fertilized.

Do not dig the holes for planting until the tree is ready to plant.

The test for "being a fruit man" because you can name all the varieties you see, is just. Varieties are changing and the knowledge of naming fruits is not so important.

Back color is the style that sums the sellers.

What shall I set for the orchard? Dutchess, Snow, Wealthy for early bearing. Wagener, Greene' Golden, Baldwin and Spy for winter. The market and keeping qualities should have an influence in selecting varieties.

A thirty-tree, not too old—a two-year old is best—plenty of root, top well trimmed, all branches shortened in, stem and set a little deeper than the tree grew in the nursery.

Is not cross the orchard too severely. The fertilizer must be kept up.

Keep the gathered fruit in good condition. See that the temper tube of the cellar is in proper condition.

In all things be honest, in marketing and in packing.

AFTERNOON SESSION

The afternoon session was opened by J. J. Ferguson of the Agricultural College, on "The Importance of Type of Breeding."

Mr. Ferguson finds conditions in this county the same as exists in the other Northern counties.

One man in fifty will not make a success in breeding thoroughbred stock. The farmer must handle the best type of animal for the product he can most rapidly.

Good special purpose beef animals are the Short Horn, Angus and Hereford. The special purpose dairy breeds are the Jersey, Guernsey and Holstein.

The farmer cannot profitably use the beef animal for dairy purposes. Mr. Ferguson found it difficult to purchase twenty typical steers for feeding purposes on the Agricultural grounds. To do so he hunted over several counties in the state.

Pick out the class of stock you are particularly in harmony with, and from that class form your herd.

Do not depend on thoroughbred stock and pedigree. A good bin of feed and plenty of hay helps materially to make good stock.

The thoroughbred must have the good care to which it has always been accustomed, and the farmer had better begin to feed the herd better than he already has.

The way to improve is by careful selection of male animals of the type used. It is necessary in order to keep the grade up. The average farmer cannot experiment with dealing in thoroughbred males. Where we feed on a small scale as farmers, we must select the kind of animal adapted to our use. The nearest type for the all-around purpose cattle is the Short Horn.

At the College, Jersey and Holstein gave as good returns in feeding as others. The short horns generally bring a better figure in the market for beef.

It is a fact that the medium well fed steer commands the best price in the market. The loss in cutting with the medium is not so great.

The Michigan College uses three premiums at the recent fat cattle show in Chicago, out of a possible twenty-five scores, which were open to the entire Union. Robert Reduck, in the discussion of this subject, cautioned the importance of uniformity in type in all classes of stock.

"The Ups and Downs of Cattle Feeding" was taken up by Alfred VanDusen, of Norwood. He emphasized the fact that feeding good stock was more profitable than feeding scrubs.

"Some Fruits and Small Fruits" by A. H. Gray, was the next topic considered.

A home, to be a home, must have a place to grow small fruit. He thinks asparagus should be classed along these lines. It comes early when the appetite relishes something "green," produces abundantly and sells readily.

The currant must not be omitted from the list. A few rows are easily grown.

The strawberry has been styled the "King of Fruits" and is the only fruit that is eaten from the vine every day of the year in the different parts of the world.

The red and black raspberry must not be omitted from the garden, from the fact it is so easily grown. The black variety should be kept through by pinning.

The grape is an excellent family fruit. He advocated the growing of several varieties. Be careful in pruning to cut back thoroughly, yet leave plenty of the last year's growth.

The blackberry is frequently injured from the fact that in a new locality the wild fruit is abundant.

He noted a row of blackberries that has yielded fruit for twenty years.

In stone fruits, the peach finds out there is no doubt that the fruit will be raised in this county.

Thinning fruit must be attended to. Never allow a tree to over bear.

The plum is the hardiest stone fruit to raise.

The cold winter of '96 did a great deal of damage to orchards, but generally withstand severe temperature.

The cherry is becoming the profitable fruit to raise and he finds a great demand for the fruit in the Chicago market.

The cottening of plums is common to Douglas growth and can be prevented by spraying with Bordeaux mixture at the blossoming season.

EVENING SESSION

Mr. Smith talked in the evening on the sugar beet question to an interested audience.

The beet sugar is confined to New York, Colorado, California, and portions of Wyoming, in fact to a limited portion of country outside of Michigan.

This county produces a beet rich in saccharine matter. Any land that will produce a good crop of potatoes will grow beets. Tough clay and sand is not suitable. Muck may or may not be suitable.

Mr. Smith illustrated the benefits accruing to merchants as well as farmers in the beet growing districts. Farmers of Alma, Ithica and St. Louis received $200,000 in cash this season for the beet crop. In fact where the factory is located the business man prospers as well as the farmer in figuring for profit. It is necessary to have sufficient where the expense is less than the proceeds.

A good tapering root is the ideal product.

Plow deep, in the fall, and prepare the seed bed thoroughly. If plowed in the spring, prepare the seed bed thoroughly. This is half the cultivation. Rows 15 to 16 inches apart. Fifteen pounds of seed to the acre.

When the plant shows the fourth leaf, hoed out by cutting through the row of plants and leaving blocks 8 inches apart. Commence thinning at an early stage, when the plant is about the size of a lead pencil.

The introduction of the sugar factory will bring the required help for the farmer in the thinning season.

The labor question need not frighten the farmer from raising beets. It requires labor to raise beets—and to hoe. So with all other crops. With beets, if properly cultivated, the profits are incomparable.

Shoal Pasty is taught as an Art.—was ably presented by Mrs. Emma Madgen.

"Profits in Poultry," by G. W. Cook, finished up the afternoon session. Mr. Cook gave an interesting talk from practical experience; and, by the way, George has a fine yard of fowls.

Officers for ensuing year: E. J. Walk, President; B. M. Pardon, Sec-Treas.; and one vice president for each township.

Sow Beets Now.

"It often grieves my heart sore," writes I. C. Overstreet, of Elgin, Tenn., "to hear my wife cough until it seems her weak and sore lungs would collapse. Good doctors said she was so far gone with Consumption that no medicine of earthly help could save her, but a friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery and persistent use of this excellent medicine saved her life." It's absolutely guaranteed for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Diseases. 50c. and $1.00 at F. G. Hitzen & Co. Trial bottles free.

LAKES CLAIM LIVES.

INLAND SEAS COVER 132 VICTIMS THIS YEAR.

Fatalities of the Season Break All Records—Iron Ships Said to Be the Growth of Merchant Marine Such as the Lakes Need.

Not since the introduction of iron ships on the lakes, so far as these now with a long record of life on the inland seas. This would be established definitely if it were not for the fact that there have been but few storms of blizzard proportions. The season of 1905 has up to the present date lost 132 persons and so compared with the years 1904, 1903, 1902, in 1899, 1898, in 1897 and all in 1896. In the year in which the loss of life has should be given understanding the improvements in the lines of navigation service, and the betterment in the seamen, officers and men. The exceptions in this generally satisfactory record are the disasters of the Lakes Erie and Ontario, in which the loss of life was in 1903. The cause in which the casualty was the loss of life in the fine steamship. In the year 1903 there were 90 lives lost in several more with large losses. Lower Lake Erie and Ontario have been the most well known. They are the lakes where the most of the lost ships have gone down. Twenty-five lives were lost in the wreck of the steamer Conemaugh in Lake Huron, one sailor was drowned beneath falling masts in Lake Michigan, and four lighthouse keepers at Skillagalee in Lake Superior met their death at their posts.

The fate of steamer Harvard and 21 of the crew is known to Capt. Tribute to Salt Law.

The following tribute was adopted by the faculties of Columbia: When the law prohibiting same-in-college in 1899 had 122 officers of instruction, divided among four schools, seven faculties and teaching 1,134 students. Today Columbia has 185 officers of instruction, divided among nine closely connected mutually helpful faculties and teaching 4,000 students. The library has increased from 90,000 volumes to 311,000. The university has removed from the most crowded quarters in Madison avenue, as beautiful and convenient a site as that of any institution of learning in the world, and is generally in a group of buildings worthy of the site.—Journal of Education.

Stages of Herat.

Herat has been besieged more times than any place in the world. If the sieges are accurately counted the result is fifty-two. It was the capital of Turkmenistan, and was fought for by the Mohammedans, by the Persians, by the armies of Kabul, and there was always an armed of Herat against to regain its patrimony. The years when Herat has not seen fighting have been rare, and Herat is a very old town. During the present century it has been twicecontinuously besieged in 1837 and 1839 by the Persians and taken by them in 1856, captured by Dost Mohammed, amoer of Kabul, in 1863; lost by him to the amoer of Herat, and taken from him in 1885 under the late amoer, Abdurrahman Khan.

Vast Stores of Gold.

Western Australia is one of the richest territories in the world, as mines go, and its wealth lies in that which mankind has been striving after ever since he made "a golden image of value—gold. There is gold in abundance in Western Australia, scattered in irregular patches all over the state. Some of these patches are one hundred miles in length by thirty or forty in breadth. Today it is said that the total area of the gold fields of western Australia is over 300,000 square miles, or one-twelfth of the area of the colony itself.

Curtain or Dramatic.

"How unreal!" said the casual critics of the drama when an intercepted marriage scene in a church was featured in a recent stage success. "How dramatic!" cried everybody, when the papers told the story yesterday of a girl wife who stopped the remarriage of her husband at the very altar in a New York church.—New York World.

—All sorts of business men's associations are formed or being formed. One small town not a hundred miles from here has a "board of trade." Traverse City has a development association. What has Charlevoix?

—We suggest to the council that a man be employed during the winter months to care for the town. Recent experience indicates that a few dollars appropriated for this purpose may be profitably expended. A fire, a gale, and frozen hose is a bad combination.

—Prof. Coulter has accepted a responsible position with the National Education Co., and will leave for Colorado early in January. Mr. Coulter will have charge of a force of men who will canvass the school districts of that state for the sale of language charts. Mr. Coulter will not take his family there for the present.

—Patronize home institutions, and help the town in which you live, especially the goods manufactured in Charlevoix. Use Charlevoix flour. A Charlevoix lady last week said to the writer, if I have used Minnehaha, Traverse City and Elk Rapids flour, and I find "Rose Dale" better than any of them." This is the testimony of many more Charlevoix ladies. This is not a paid local. It is written in commemoration of a Charlevoix industry, and, therefore, in the interest of Charlevoix. Let your bread be made of Charlevoix flour.

The Petoskey Democrat states that Leroy Lang died at his home in that city last Thursday. He had not enjoyed that he was feeling badly but a sudden attack of the heart caused his death within a few hours. Leroy Lang was born in the state of New York in 1830, and had therefore reached the age of 66 years. He had been a resident of Emmet county for many years, and has been identified with various interests in the city. He has recently been practically retired from active business except to give some time to his stone quarry and marl bed at Mud Lake, east of Kegomic. A wife, and one son, Charles, are left to mourn his death. Mr. Lang was formerly a resident of Charlevoix, having come in the county of St. Joseph's at a date.

—Bob Shrier has been appointed to a good position in the treasury department at Washington.

—Home from college—Will Bellinger, Dave Burke, Flora Caldwell, Nellie Hornett and Mattie Bedford.

—Frank Sullivan, of Traverse City, and his mother, Mrs. Amelia Sullivan, of Grand Rapids, are visiting S. Baker. Mrs. Sullivan is a sister of Mr. Baker.

—J. W. Harris and wife, who have been stopping with Mr. and Mrs. Hitchcock, near Ironton, will move to Charlevoix soon, and make this their future home.

—Will Caldwell, son of H. M. Caldwell, is here for a few days, on his way from the West to Washington, D. C., where he is assigned in civil engineer work on the trans-continental survey.

—Next Sunday evening's Epworth League topic will be "Numbering Our Days." Dr. Wicks will conduct the service. Also a summary of the year's work will be given by the vice presidents of the several departments.

—A New Year's greeting will be held in M. E. church on Jan. 1st, afternoon and evening. A 15 cent supper will be served from 4:30 to 7:00 o'clock, followed by a social time and short entertainment. Ice cream and opera sale from 8 to 10 p. m. Come all, come young, come all.

—There is no portion of the three counties that would be more thickly populated by a beet sugar factory in Charlevoix than Beaver Island. The soil is as well adapted to beet culture as any in the million, and transportation is easy. We have no doubt that the islanders will take hold of the project when they get an opportunity, which we hope will be given them this winter, even if it becomes necessary to send a man over on the ice.

—Married to-day, at the home of the bride, by the bride's father, Rev. W. H. McCartney, Miss Cloe Edith McCartney to Mr. Herman J. Van, of Boyne City. The cards say "at home at Boyne City after Jan. 15th." The congratulations of many friends of the bride are here. The groom, who is a foreman in the employ of W. H. White & Co., is a very excellent young man. May long life and happiness remain with Mr. and Mrs. Fox.

—There is a case beside the grievance committee of the S. S. B. Capt. Pete Campbell invited Capt. Billy Finnegan to take a trip to Beaver Island with him, and Capt. Billy declined, whereupon Capt. Pete called Capt. Billy a "summer sailor," and made various other reflections on his courage. Capt. Billy threatens to prefer charges against Capt. Pete, and Capt. Jimmy Wilbur is having his hands full to keep the two apart. The matter comes up at the next meeting.

—At the regular communication of Charlevoix Lodge, No. 385, F. & A. M., last Tuesday evening, the following officers were elected: W. M., John Aikett; S. W., E. H. Brooks; J. W., S. M. See; Secretary, W. H. McCartney; Treasurer, M. Cram; S. D. Art Alcock; J. D., H. J. McMillan; Stewards, John Allen, Fred Butler, Geo. Eaglston. Installation will occur on the evening of the Festival of St. John the Evangelist, Dec. 27th.

Mrs. Flavia Mossingson will sew in Gaillico by the day from Jan. 1st to April 1st.

Notice.

The Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Co., of Charlevoix, Emmet and Cheboygan counties, will hold their annual meeting at the office of said company, in the city of Petoskey, on the 11th day of January 1902, at 10 o'clock a. m. sharp.

The cotton crop had arrived a month, the bold hard-as-iron bolls opened with native plenty, which had lower than twelve bright pickers showed, and had been sold at a fair price, and the cotton had been ginned, the seed sold, the crop had been looked upon as first fair, or thought had proved the best we had ever made. To weight had rather, as said Mr. Hardy's anticipation. The presence of chickens the cotton from the ants and insects had caused a loss in undoubtedly opinion, and had taken an unknown time. Jemmy, he to prepare that day at first dark, with a, then early hour in attempt at every thousand, left to practice they income more blood. Well it was found to be good when during the hot weather day, at times appeared to be a little, and the cotton was ginned, the seed sold, and the cotton packed in bales of half bale, and the cotton was ginned, and a couple of bales of bacon would be carried to the market, and the cotton was ginned, before more than a quarter of one actually made, and the cotton was ginned, and the cotton was ginned, and the cotton was ginned

FORM A COMBINE

Hardwood Men Will Have Furniture Manufacturers at Their Mercy.

All the Mills in State Are in the Octopus, in which Northern Michigan Contests.

A big combine of hardwood lumbermen was effected at Grand Rapids the 19th, making the most important step ever taken in Michigan in these interests. It means the incorporation of a $2,000,000 company to absolutely control the hardwood lumber market in this state and all the mills on the Michigan side of the great lakes.

The prime movers in the organization of the combine are Henry W. Carey, of the Peter Sarl & Lumber Co., of East Lake; W. T. Colvert, with Junius S. Stearns, of Ludington, and Wm. H. White, of the Wm. H. White & Co., of Bayne City. They are members of the committee on plans (organization, which submitted the arrangement today). Such big concerns as Ullemacher & Johnson, of Algoma, H. M. Loud & Son, of Acme, Barker Bros. & Douglas and the Hustars Salt & Lumber Co., are going into the combine.

At the meeting there were present besides the committeemen: Herman Hesser, of Algoma; Henry M. Loud, Edward Buckley, Jr., Magnus Jensen, Louis Sands, of Manistee; M. L. Hustars, for Hustars Salt & Lumber Co., of Ludington; J. T. Ullemacher, of the Ullemacher Co., of Traverse City; W. P. Porter, of the East Jordan Lum. Co., of East Jordan; Harry Nicholas, of the Charlevoix Lumber Co., of Charlevoix, and H. Von Platten, of Bayne City; J. N. Harris, of Bayne City, the attorney who is engineering the deal and who represents a large share of the interests, took an active part in an explanation of the general plans and scope of the new company. The men who attended the meeting are by in stock holders in a state company, which will control the output of all their mills. An agreement will be made as to the amount of money each mill shall receive for its output, and then the state company will sell for what it is able on the open market; the profits to be divided among the stockholders who are owners of the mills.

All the mills interested are like mills. They buy the logs and manufacture lumber for the furniture factories of Grand Rapids and other cities and for flooring manufacturers, and all other manufacturers using hardwood in any of their products. The raw material will be bought and the finished lumber produced and by the new organization. The saving will be effected in the advantage secured through buying in bulk, in requiring a smaller force of selling agents and a reduction of freight charges.

Used by the ladies of fashion all over the world. Its without doubt the greatest beautifier ever offered the American women. 50c. Made only by Madison Medicine Co. M V Cook & Co.

CURRENT TOPICS.

A telegram from Constantinople to the Turkish embassy at Washington gives assurance that Miss Stone will be liberated before the end of the month.

Secretary Cage announces that he told the President that he would like to retire from the cabinet within two months, or by early spring, at the latest. The president is trying to induce him to remain.

Gen. R. A. Alger, of Detroit, is hovering between life and death at his home. A surgical operation last Monday for gall stones, was a last resort, and the chances are against him, although he was slightly improved Wednesday.

The Philippine tariff bill which was passed Thursday, places the Philippines on practically the same footing as foreign countries so far as exports are concerned. The tariffs of the Philippine commission will remain in force and all duties collected will be used in the islands.

Teddy Roosevelt takes in someone. While out walking with some friends last Thursday, a man approached him, placed his hand on the president's shoulder and began to shout something. About that time Teddy's good right arm sent him a twang in the jaw, and Teddy and his friends passed on, leaving the "entic clower" on the ground.

The friends of the Charlevoix colony in Florida, having suffered great loss by their orange groves several years ago, have this winter been congratulating themselves on beating frost again. But last Thursday the thermometer was 17 above zero early in the morning and 15 to 20 above in south Florida. No reports are in as yet from the citrus belt. Orange trees can stand 18 above without danger, and ripe fruit 23 above.

Secretary Long has disposed finally of the Schley case so far as the navy department is concerned, by acting upon the findings and conclusions of the court of inquiry. He approves the findings of fact and the opinion of the court, he approved the majority opinion where there is a difference in the court, he holds that the court could not have entered into a consideration of the question of command at the battle of Santiago and finally accepts the recommendation that no further proceedings shall be had.

And now Lieut. General Miles, for of the police body-hand, having a few minutes to spare between appointments at the photograph gallery, has unloaded his Quixotic mind of an opinion in the Schley case. The people will rejoice when this old nuisance shall have reached the age limit and retired. The people care very little about Miles' opinion on any subject. The law makes him senior general of line of the army, and his symmetrical figure and beautiful mustache make a good dummy upon which to display the special uniform which he has built for himself.

"It often made my heart ache," writes L. C. Overstreet, of Eagle, Tenn., "to hear my wife cough until it seemed her weak and sore lungs would collapse. Good doctors said she was so far gone with Consumption that no medicine of earthly help could save her, but a friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery and persistent use of this excellent medicine saved her life." It absolutely guaranteed for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Diseases. 50c and $1.00 at F. G. Hines & Co. Trial bottles free.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The Wardrop store at Eastport is being closed out and the proprietors will go to Wallace to engage in general trade.

The Detroit & Charlevoix railroad has commenced the construction of a telephone line along their track. It will soon be in operation between Frederick and Onward and will be completed to East Jordan in the spring.

Since the raise in telephone rates by the Michigan company at Petoskey, the local grocers have gotten together and decided to throw all the Bell instruments out of their stores and residences, and use only the independent company's lines.

Rumors have been started again that the Detroit & Mackinac Railroad intends to extend its line from the present terminus northward to Cheboygan, a distance of eighteen miles, and that trains will be running into Cheboygan by June next.

The village council of Central Lake has issued a call for a special election to be held Monday, December 29, for the purpose of voting on a proposition to bond the village for a sum not exceeding $5,500 to be used in the purchasing of a site for and the erection of a building for use as a public hall.

Small-pox has been reported at White's lumber camp No. 5 and that camp has been quarantined, a gentleman has been built near the patients are carefully guarded. One case is also quarantined at Elmira in the village. No apprehension is felt that the epidemic will become prevalent as the cases are guarded so carefully.—Acme.

Four miles of steel rails arrived last week for the extension of the R. F. & N. E. to Wolverine. The work of the extension is planned for early spring and these rails are wanted on hand so there will be no delay, the balance will arrive in the spring. The work of rebuilding all the bridges will commence the first of next month under the supervision of Geo. Stephenson, who is a bridge builder of many years experience on the G. R. & I.—Alpena.

Land Commissioner Wildey has received from the supervisor of St. James township, Charlevoix county, a letter asking that the taxes in that township upon which the taxes have not been paid for a period of more than five years be deeded to the State and become subject to homestead entry. St. James township is in the Beaver Islands, which are attached to Charlevoix county, and there are 220 descriptions, containing about 8,000 acres of land which may be deeded to the State and become subject to homestead entry.

Traverse City Eagle: C. E. Murray is in correspondence with the Columbia club, which purchased Bassett's Island some time ago, it interested in having a regatta here the coming season, and will do what he can to secure it. The Columbia club will hold a regatta in the early summer at Manistee Park, and it is hoped to have them come on to Traverse Bay.

Petoskey Herald: Charlevoix will positively succeed in the matter of securing that beet sugar factory. The conditions are, that farmers will contract to plant a sufficient acreage to supply the factory for a series of years, and that $100,000 of stock is taken by local parties. The factory will cost $300,000, when in running order. At last advices the amount of bond contracted for was very encouraging. Our big advantage a sugar factory will have, is that they can get the lime rock they must have, of Mr. Tuels, between Charlevoix and Petoskey. He has a ledge of the limestone needed, and there are only two other places in Michigan where it can be procured. We sincerely hope our neighbors will meet the conditions and that the factory will be built. There is no land on earth which will produce better beets than Antrim, Charlevoix and Emmet counties, and the three counties could well sustain two or more sugar factories.

Traverse City Enterprise: A farmer near Traverse City this season raised some sugar beets, which he sent to the chemical department of the state Agricultural College for analysis, and the report showed over 15 per cent. of saccharine content or greater by fifty per cent. than the average in best sugar growing sections, thus clearly demonstrating once again the natural adaptability of this region for the successful growing of the sugar beet. Thus we have here pre-eminently one of the best sections in the world for successful growing of sugar beets. But to make this advantage available a market for the beets must be supplied, and that means the building up of a beet sugar factory. Of course we would prefer that such a factory should, when built, be located at East Jordan, believing that there are more substantial advantages here than can be found at any other point in the whole Traverse region, yet, if another point be selected, as Charlevoix or Traverse City even, we can heartily favor it as we would still be within reach of the market which it will afford. It is also reported that the beet sugar factory at Boston Harbor is looking for a new home, because the farmers there find it more profitable to raise fruit and vegetables for the Chicago and Milwaukee markets than in growing beets for the factory. That company can find no more advantageous place than this to locate their plant.

HEROISM OF A WOMAN

BADLY FROZEN WHILE SAVING HUSBAND ANC CHILDREN.

Carried Water to Keep Town Pumps When Temperature Was Thirty Below Zero—Successful Prevents a Man Falling to Death Frozen.

The heroism of Mrs. Frederick Hinder will cost her her feet, but she saved from death her husband and children. In her home, and but with only a thin night gown on, she walked out into thirty degrees below zero, she carried water in a bucket from her neighbor's house to her own home, she carried water in a can downstairs to the cellar in which the members of the family were sleeping, she carried water in a can to the compressed air tank from which the pumps of the town get their supply of water. The house was frozen up in the ground. The Hinders have lived in the house of Mrs. Hinder's father, Frederick Hinder, at the Dominion Tube.

SCHLEY IS BLAMED.

Dewey, However, Gives Him Credit for Great Victory.

NAVAL COURT REPORT

Censure Is for Vacillation, Dilatoriness, and Lack of Enterprise

Formal Finding in Inquiry Is Against the Rear Admiral on Practically Every Point—Certain Must Be Stressed by the Man on the Bench, According to Declaration of Commander of Seattle—Neither Is Given to Sampson.

The findings of the Schley court of inquiry were made public at the Navy Department in Washington Friday evening. Rear Admiral Schley comes out of the affair convicted on almost every count of the general in a majority of the court, but coupled with this sweeping condemnation is a remarkable and unlimited eulogy to Admiral George Dewey, in which the hero of Manila declares that Schley was in sole command at Santiago and that he is entitled to the glory of that splendid victory.

Admiral Dewey, however, coincides with the court in the belief that in many things before the battle Schley was blameless, but he differs with the court in a number of points.

Technically speaking, Schley is officially condemned by a court of his superior officers, but Commodore Dewey, second only to Schley in the time which has elapsed since he should be as further proceedings in the matter. There is no appeal from the finding of the court, and Rear Admiral Schley must be content to be the hero of Santiago, but not the hero of Manila in the eyes of the Navy Department is concerned.

Although the court finds Schley culpable in various Schley, his friends raise the question that the court has been exceeded in its jurisdiction, and that the proceedings are subject to appeal.

Commodore Dewey's statement leaves no doubt that the admiral of the Philippines is in sympathy with the contention that the court has exceeded its jurisdiction.

Commodore Dewey's statement leaves no doubt that the admiral of the Philippines is in sympathy with the contention that the court has exceeded its jurisdiction.

EIGHT DIE IN WRECK.

Trains in Freight Yard Crash Near Woodward, Ill.—Flames Add to Horror.

Eight persons were killed and among injured in a frightful collision on the Illinois Central Railroad near Woodward, Ill. Five broke out almost instantly and consumed the wreckage so soon that no one of them was recovered, the injured who escaped being roasted to death and some fortunate survivors suffered long exposure to the weather. The temperature was 20 degrees below zero, with a wind blowing, and all hats and wraps had been lost in the wreck.

The two trains which collided were the regular freight from Dubuque and a shorter freight coming from Chicago. The passenger consisted of a baggage and express car, a smoker, coach, parlor car and dining car. It was running in high speed, being over three hours late on account of bad weather. The freight was also moving at high speed in an effort to reach Bradford and the two trains came together without warning, there being a light center of the curve.

The trains met in a slight bend in the track and the force of the shock was terrific. The roof of one car was hurled high in the air and the other was piled a curious wabbling half a ton was thrown 100 feet. The engine, express and baggage cars were piled on the locomotives, and in the middle of the wreck was partly three of the half-dozen in that car escaped. The others, it was believed killed, were roasted to death and their bodies, along with those of the crew, were entirely consumed.

All efforts of the survivors to reach the victims were unavailing. The flames shown from the wreck early in the morning of Friday and the work of rescuing the dead was not completed until the following day.

SIGNALS ACROSS SEAS.

Marconi Achieves Feat of Transatlantic Communication Without Wires.

Mr. Marconi has accomplished the last of sending electrical signals across the Atlantic without wires. Telegraphic messages transmitted from the station recently erected at Poldhu, near the Lizard, on the coast of England, have been received at St. Johns, N. F., after having traversed the intervening space.

The signals from across the sea Mr. Marconi, with his assistants, received on Friday and Saturday afternoons. He had arranged with the station at Poldhu that it should be signalled at 12 o'clock noon, Greenwich time, which is 8:30 o'clock at St. Johns, and the signals were to be repeated from time to time, as needed by means of a blue electrical wire, which was to be kept up for a period of two hours.

The first signal received was a letter "S" and the second was a letter "A" and the third was a letter "T" and the fourth was a letter "H" and the fifth was a letter "E" and the sixth was a letter "R" and the seventh was a letter "S" and the eighth was a letter "T" and the ninth was a letter "A" and the tenth was a letter "R" and the eleventh was a letter "T" and the twelfth was a letter "H" and the thirteenth was a letter "E" and the fourteenth was a letter "R" and the fifteenth was a letter "S" and the sixteenth was a letter "T" and the seventh was a letter "A" and the eighth was a letter "R" and the ninth was a letter "T" and the tenth was a letter "H" and the eleventh was a letter "E" and the twelfth was a letter "R" and the thirteenth was a letter "S" and the fourteenth was a letter "T" and the fifteenth was a letter "A" and the sixteenth was a letter "R" and the seventh was a letter "T" and the eighth was a letter "H" and the ninth was a letter "E" and the tenth was a letter "R" and the eleventh was a letter "S" and the twelfth was a letter "T" and the thirteenth was a letter "A" and the fourteenth was a letter "R" and the fifteenth was a letter "T" and the sixteenth was a letter "H" and the seventh was a letter "E" and the eighth was a letter "R" and the ninth was a letter "S" and the tenth was a letter "T" and the eleventh was a letter "A" and the twelfth was a letter "R" and the thirteenth was a letter "T" and the fourteenth was a letter "H" and the fifteenth was a letter "E" and the sixteen

MARINE NOTES.

The schooner Maine is shipping a new mizen-mast, and will have a new quarter deck.

The rebuild of the tug Minnie Warren has materially increased her tonnage—the deck having been raised nine inches.

The steamer Hackley still makes her Beaver Island trips, and has good freights both ways, considering. She will probably run up to January 31st.

The amount of ice that has accumulated in Lake Michigan since the advent of cold weather is unprecedented. The steamers plying regularly between Chicago and Milwaukee encounter open water only in narrow streaks or seams.

An effort will be made during the present Congress by Senator McMillan and Congressman Bishop to pass a bill authorizing the construction of a submarine cable between Glen Haven and South Manitou island—something that is greatly needed.

The Houghton Mining Gazette says local parties have secured assurance that the Northern Steamship Company, which owns the large and palatial steamers North West and North Land, will put those steamers back on the Lake Superior route again next spring, and will then take in Houghton and Hancock. Consider also correspondence with General Manager Farrington has been carried on with encouraging results.

The Detroit Tribune announces that the wrecker Favorite has been sold by A. A. and B. W. Parker of that city to the Great Lakes Towing Company. The Favorite while well along in years is in good condition and has always had the best of care. She was built at Port Howard, Wis., in 1891, has a keel length of 140 feet and measures 519 gross tons. She has been for years stationed at Cheboygan, Mich., in charge of Capt. Martin Smith, and is classed as the best wrecking tug on the great lakes.

Ashland—Wisconsin: The cod snap is working more havoc with the local fishing firms than did Deputy Fish Warden Brewster during his recent crusade. The fish law expired last Monday and fishing is now allowed. The eight fishing tugs here have been unable to get out and lift their nets on account of the floating fields of ice. This is generally the season for the cream of the fishing to all fish being fabulous prices. Much concern over the situation is felt by the fishermen, who have upwards of $100,000 tied up in the business.

A Grand Fire.

Charlevoix had a narrow escape from a disastrous conflagration Christmas night about five o'clock. The building used for the Fountain City House on the east, owned and occupied by J. W. Campbell, took fire in the rear, and when the alarm was taken at the water works the flames were coming through the roof. There was very little wind, and what there was blew from the north-west, which allayed the first fears for the Fountain City House, but twelve feet west of the burning building. Both fire companies were on the ground promptly, but after the last plug of hose were attached to the hydrant it was discovered that a section of hose was frozen. This caused a delay of ten minutes, and the fire was making rapid headway, the entire roof being ablaze. But when the engine came from the two nozzles, darkness came inside the building in the space of time taken to write this, while demonstrates the fact that with unfrozen hose the fire department can extinguish anything in the shape of a blaze. But the inside of the structure was completely gutted. Most of the household effects were saved. Damage covered by insurance. We shudder when we contemplate the possible result of a heavy wind and frozen hose, and we are constrained to criticise the ones responsible for it. We are individual to acquit the fire department, when we recognize the fact that in no town in Michigan, of the size of Charlevoix, does a fire department receive as little official recognition as here. The fire department is "taken for granted." They are paid an insignificant stipend for risk to health and spoiled clothes, at fires, and who can be expected to give their time for such pay? We hope this will not be permitted to occur again.

Death of C. Y. Cook.

The sorrowful tiding reached here by telegraph Tuesday evening, of the death, at Fort Orange Florida, on the day, of Clark Y. Cook, of this place.

Mr. Cook had been failing in health all summer, and, with his wife went to Florida, in early winter, hoping that change of climate would prove beneficial.

Deceased was about 65 years of age. He came here with his family about fifteen years ago, from Reading, Mich., and, with the exception of three winters in the south, has been one of our most respected citizens.

Clark Y. Cook had no enemies and had many warm friends. No evil word could be truthfully spoken of him.

He was a member of the first Baptist church of Charlevoix, and of Charlevoix Lodge F. & A. M. and Charlevoix Chapter, R. A. M.

The remains are on their way here in charge of M. J. Stockman, and are expected tonight (Friday).

We are unable, at this writing, to announce funeral arrangements.

Atwood.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Bert Johnson, Dec. 20th, a 9½-pound boy.

A 12½ pound boy arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Shelton on Dec. 24th.

Bert Ingalls is the proud possessor of a 9-pound baby girl, which arrived one day last week.

Sixteen of our boys have concluded that we ought to have a brass band, and instruments are expected soon.

It is now certain that Atwood will have another store in the spring of 1902. The parties interested will run a general store. More particulars later.

When the Grange takes hold of anything it generally goes. They are now working for rural free delivery, making fourth position a distributing office. It is estimated that the value of land along rural delivery routes has increased from $5 to $5 an acre. Then too, there is an educational value in the rural free delivery, in that thousands more magazines and periodicals are finding their way into the homes.

Norwood Notes.

The Sunday school had their annual exercises at the church on Christmas eve.

Six degrees above zero is the coldest weather so far at Norwood this winter.

Another boy born last week at the office of Alden Stafford, treasurer of the town of Norwood.

Mrs. Ida Gagnier, who died in Charlevoix at the home of her parents, was brought here for burial last Friday afternoon.

Silas Clark, a former resident of Norwood, who was found dead at his home near Ellsworth, was buried here last week.

Thomas Stafford, son of E. L. Stafford, who left here about four years ago, and had not been heard from for two years, was buried to death in a coke oven, at Trinidad, Colo., last week. This makes four Norwood people who died within the last 10 days, and all away from home.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor.

The pastor finished his series of three Sunday morning sermons on "Divine Parentage" and he has good reason for believing that they were helpful in deepening love for God, the Father, and in awakening a truer filial spirit.

The Xmas season is passing quickly, but it has left its accustomed measure of joy and pleasure for young and old.

The Sunday school had their usual good and happy time on Christmas eve. The scholars delighted their parents, friends and visitors with their songs and recitations. Pretty little rewards were given to those who had been regular in their attendance.

The Christmas morning service elicited the sympathy of a number who enjoyed the sacred hour of worship in commemoration of the great event in sacred and secular history.

Subjects for Sunday sermons are as follows morning, "What think ye of Christ?" evening, "Spiritual Finance."

Meeting of the Men's Auxiliary at the close of evening service.

SCHOOL COMM'R COLUMN.
A. W. CROW, CONDUCT.

The statutes designate the following holidays "The first day of January, commonly called New Year's Day; the twenty-second day of February, commonly called Washington's Birthday; the thirteenth day of May, commonly called Decoration Day; the fourth day of July; the first Monday in September, commonly called Labor Day; the Twenty-fifth day of December, commonly called Christmas; every Saturday from 12 o'clock noon until 12 o'clock at night, which is hereby designated a half holiday; and any day appointed or recommended by the Governor of this state or the President of the United States as a day of fasting and prayer or Thanksgiving, shall, for all purposes whatever as regards the presenting for payment or acceptance, and of the protesting and giving notice of the dishonor of bills of exchange, bank checks, and promissory notes, made after this act shall take effect,  be treated and considered as the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, and as public holidays or half holidays."

Whenever any of the above designated day fall upon Sunday the next Monday following shall be deemed a public holiday for all or any of the purposes aforesaid.

The use of the words "any day" instead of "the day" shows that the intent of the legislature was not to limit the holidays to the general Thanksgiving day, but to all days designated as days of "fasting and prayer or Thanksgiving." The Supreme Court further has said: "A teacher's wages are not subject to any deductions on account of vacations occasioned by the observance of these legal holidays."

"School management should always conform to those decent usages which recognize the propriety of omitting to hold public exercises on recognized holidays."

The teacher can make these holiday seasons impressive upon the minds of her pupils by conducting appropriate exercises upon or near the holiday.

The teacher has no authority for making up lost time by teaching on a holiday, neither has the school board any legal right to make such concessions to the teacher.

This year, the school year began on Labor Day and so it will every year. The school year begins the first Monday in September, and the first Monday in September is designated as a public holiday.

This year the date was Sept. 2. The school boards contracting with their teachers to begin the term of school on Sept. 2, are under obligations to pay the teacher from Sept. 2, although school did not commence until Sept. 9. We think the only way to avoid paying for this holiday is contract for school to begin on Tuesday.

A teacher cannot teach on Labor Day and take a day off from the end of the term, of her own free will and accord.

Arbor Day although designated by the Governor of the State, is not set apart as a day of holiday, like "Fast and Thanksgiving" and is therefore not a legal holiday.

AN AMERICAN FOG.

Britain's Metropolis Not In the Same Class with Long Island.

"I have not a great many lies in my time," said Peter Jack Jones, the other day. "But John Lundy, a Rockaway oysterman, is far and away king of them all. It doesn't make any difference how hard I tell John in the way of a fairy tale, he will always go you one better. You can depend upon him, for he never fails. Two or three weeks ago I met John in a saloon in Long Island City. We got to talking about fogs, and I tried to impress him with the thickness of the fogs in London. I told him how people, standing on a street corner in London, could not see the lighted lamp on the post beside them; how people, after leaving their own doorsteps, could not find their way back home until the fog had lifted, and a dozen other stories all greatly embellished. But it was no use—I could not even faze him. This was the return I got.

"'Bosny, fogs may be pretty thick in that town, but they ain't half as bad as I've seen them right here on Long Island. I remember once, 'bout ten years ago, when I was shingling the upright part of my house, a fog rolled in from the east fit to put a man's eyes out. I didn't take much notice of it at first, but kept on nailin' down shingles as' by an' by it lighted up some and what do you think I've been doin' every? I was half a mile away from the house, and the shingles was lyin' on the hold all the way back. That blessed fog was so thick I'd been nailin' shingles on it and didn't know it. And that ain't the worse fog I've seen, neither.'—New York Times.

Consolation of Scholarship.

A famous English scholar, whose hobby was the derivation of words, had occasion to store his furniture while proceeding to the continent in quest of the origin of the term "Jugaus." During his remarks upon Berlin he received from the warehouse company the following letter: "Sir: We have the honor to inform you that the mattress you sent to our store had the moth in it. Since the epidemic would expose the goods of other clients to injury, we have caused your mattress to be destroyed." The scholar replied: "Dear Sir—My mattress may, as you say, have had moth in it, but I am confident that it had an 'e' in it also."

They Cordially Agreed.

"Yes, sir, the newspapers of this country by their extended publication of sensational crimes and accidents are doing an incalculable amount of injury." "Darn right. The people shouldn't be permitted to read such details. The less they know about crimes and criminals the better." "I entirely agree with you. May I ask the name of your business?" "I am a great goods man." "And I am a dealer in gold bricks. Shake"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Good God! thinks the poor man, and shrinks from the gaze of the terrible eyes of his captors, who, with a shout, seize him and drag him to the fire, where they throw him down on the ground beside the other two.

"Now, what shall I do with them?" said the Magic Man to his companions, who had been busy while he was talking, and who had now built a large fire and had placed a large kettle of water upon it. "Shall I cut their throats, and have them for supper? I am very hungry, and I feel like a good meal of human flesh. Or shall I let them go? I feel in a good humour, and I have had a good meal of human flesh not long ago. Which shall it be, and what do you think of it?"

"Let them go, let them go!" said the chiefs, in a chorus.

"Well, I think I will let them go, too, I think I will let them go, too. Why should I not? I have had my supper, and I feel in a good humour. Let them go, too. Let them go, too. Let them go, too

NEGROES SHOT DEAD.

WHITE BOY IS QUICK AT REVOLVER PRACTICE

Two Men Had Started to to Build a Town, but Were Stopped by a Young Youth Hundreds of Miles Away.

Wrecked by Fire.

WHITE HORSE, Dakota.—Two men were killed in a shootingscrape at Ogilvie, about 60 miles from this place, Wednesday morning. The victims were Jim Lynch and Dan Scott. Lynch was shot through the heart and Scott received a bullet in the left side. Lynch died instantly and Scott died in a few minutes. The men had been drinking and had started out to build a town at Ogilvie, when they were stopped by a young man who ordered them to leave the place. They refused to do so and the young man shot them down in their tracks. The young man is a son of a well-known family in Ontario, Canada, and is a cousin of a prominent Canadian author. The young man is 18 years of age and is a quiet, unassuming lad, but is said to be a crack shot with a revolver. The young man was not molested by the friends of the murdered scoundrels, who, it is said, were a pair of desperadoes who had been in trouble before. The young man is now in the city of Dawson, where he is awaiting the action of the Canadian authorities.

MURDERED BY A BURGLAR.

Harriet Murphy, Known in Church and Social Circles, Shot.

Harriet E. Murphy, prominent in church and society circles and treasurer of the Memphis Home fund, was murdered in her home in Pittsburg by a burglar. The murderer made his escape. Miss Murphy was 50 years old. She, with her brother and sister, lived together in the home. Miss Murphy slept on the second floor. She was in company with a relative, having promised her many years to spend the evening, and her servants had a great order under her jurisdiction within reach. About 3 o'clock a bell bracket was awakened in the house by the knock, and hearing a footsteps coming, footed her head on the foot board of the bed. The door of the bedroom was a parlor door. The visitor was a powerful fellow. He visited the bedroom, and stepped up because of Miss Murphy's entry by knocking the door open. The intruder made his escape. Miss Murphy was awakened by her sister, who was in the room, and screamed for help. Miss Murphy died in the hospital. Her sister was a cripple

Death of S. M. Moore.

Yesterday Isaac Mills, warden of the Chicago club, received a telegram announcing the death, in Pasadena, Cal., on that day, of Silas M. Moore.

There are very few who knew Mr. Moore and saw him last season expected to ever see him here again. He had been steadily failing, and, owing to his enforced idle time, was very good-natured for the time being.

Mr. Moore was the founder of the Chicago club, and has been its president since its establishment, nearly twenty years. It may be said that he was the father of the club entirely. In a sense, Mr. Moore was considered a resident of Charlevoix. Indeed he had every expectation in the world, his ill health only prevented his return home, except during the cold winter months, when he should return home.

He always took a keen interest in Charlevoix and affairs the good of Charlevoix. The press was always open when he was called upon to assist in the promotion of its interests. We find gleaned out of the letters that Mr. Moore was a Christian. He was one of us.

He was a kind and generous soul, and his death grieving will unquestionably will be sadly missed both

GARDENER'S OPINION.

Very Interesting Letter From A Philippine Soldier Governor.

Colonel Gardener Don't Consider the Filipinos as Bad as They Are Often Painted.

Hon. Wilson's Answer Satisfactory Made Him Smile.

You very kind letter of congratulations is at hand, for which accept my thanks.

There is a great work for us to do here in Americanizing the Filipinos and a kindly people who have for centuries suffered much cruelty at Spanish hands. It is to be hoped that we, as their minders, will do better.

They are by kindness not as easily as children. When any one says other wise, he does not speak the truth. They need but knowledge and encouraging to make them hard-working, cheerful people.

Last Sunday was a good day at the Congregational church. The attendances were good.

The "week of prayer" will be observed with service each evening next week except Saturday. Let there be large attendances. It is a good thing to begin the year by attending these meetings.

Antonio Bonifacio has gone, and in more respects it has been "Amoas Mirabilis" in the world. Among Hom. in 1902 has dawned upon me. May it prove to be, in every true sense, a "year of the Lord."

In the evening there will be one an "Order of Worship for the New Year" the whole service being an pamphlet form, containing responsive readings, collects, prayers, hymns, chants and anthems, with short sermon by the pastor on "The Good Old Year and The Happy New Year."

And what is going to be our motto for the New Year? Let it be the one which has never deserted us when come close to us, because it finds us readier to receive it, making us better, stronger, purer, nobler, more spiritual, more manly, more fit for life and service God knows we may more, but remember we, with new opportunities, are more ready to receive him into our lives?—Phillips Brooks.

Hunt, a farmer of Fremont township, Isabella county, brought suit against the township of Lincoln, same county, for $10,000 for injuries received because of a defective road. After an all night session the jury in the circuit court brought in a verdict of $2,000. The April term was drawing quite to a close and when a wheel of his wagon fell into a rut, breaking a leg and injuring him otherwise. He will always be lame from the effects of the fracture. Negleence on the part of the township to keep the roads in good order was proven.

The day was spent in the social greeting and hand shaking of friend with friend, which sent each one into the New Year unanimously with higher hearts. —Manistee Herald: The high price of wood in this section causes many to think of burning soft coal, as is now being done in cities and towns a little farther north. The rapidity with which our forests are being denuded of timber indicates that it is only a question of time before wood for fuel will be entirely supperseded by coal even in this wooded country. The timber close to town is already about gone, and wood is now a perquisite to buy good, dry stove-wood short of $1.50 per cord. Hence we quote a number here in Manistee that will be burning soft coal next winter.

The farmers of this section never had an opportunity like the present one to benefit themselves and make their future prosperity certain. The success of the beet sugar project depends solely upon the necessary beet acreage—the question of money is settled when that is settled. Let the farmers all put their shoulders to the wheel and make the thing a certainty. It is up to the farmers. When contracts are secured for the required acreage ground will be broken. Time is precious.—come to the front, farmers.

Bellaire Bill's Indian Deal

Ex-Congressman John Pinnerty tells the following good story of Bellaire Bill. Years ago, in an Indian scrape in which I took a part, Buffalo Bill and Yellow Hand, the noted chief of the Cheyennes, had an all but hand-to-hand fight, and it was one of the finest things I ever witnessed. Yellow Hand was one of the best leaders of Indians and was possessed of a magnificent physique. In his war paint he was superb. When Yellow Hand was for an Indian fight was and is I'm a Mormonite. The two were about as fine specimens of the red and white race as could be found. They were mounted and made a stand set for each other. When some 20 paces apart they opened a simultaneous fire, with the result that both horses fell dead in their tracks. Neither of such expressed horsemen, however, was to be caught by a falling animal, and both alighted on their feet. Both often again came to shoulder with machine-like precision, and again the two shots were as one. This time Yellow Hand missed by a hair's breadth but it was not so with Buffalo Bill, the Indian's ball crashed through the Indian chief's brain. To this day Cody preserves among his trophies Yellow Hand's bonnet."

G. A. R. Men 100 Years Old.

John A. Reed said his marched proudly with his comrades in the late G. A. R. parade in Cleveland. He fought in Dunbar, Ill. He is a little more than twice the age of the youngest veteran of the civil war.

Fine Bilsen as an Entering Wedge.

The Boston Commercial Bulletin says that "the organization of the Filipino League means that the non-exercise duty of 15 per cent on imported sugar is to be vigorously attacked at the next session of congress." To an even this recommendable contribution to the cost of South American bides the Free Trade League and the Commercial Bulletin would repeal the whole question of tariff revision and impair our entire tariff policy. And the free trade people are only typical of other selfish interests that are now at work, some of them shooting for reciprocity which very many persons understand to mean a reduction in the protective duties on other peoples goods

The Philadelphia Ledger for October 19 bluntly admits that the free trade advocates want the Dingley tariff to be revised. It says: "Some serious protests at a gathering of shareholders and bankers men from various parts of the land met up for West at Milwaukee, which it is believed, will lead to a vigorous demand for the abolition of the present tariff on bides and which will, if it is thought, throw open the entire schedule of tariff revision for the consideration of congress at its session in December."—Philadelphia Iron and Steel Bulletin.

Mutual Reciprocity.

The late President's supposedly idea of mutual reciprocity with his well-known protection sentiment, by which he has stood during his entire public life, and which he lived to see fully vindicated in "our wonderful industrial development," "benefits trade arrangements" the late President says "—can free trade but that (which will not interrupt our home production." and that in McKinley protection and McKinley reciprocity. Anything else would be a surrender of our industries to ruinous foreign competition and a return of the days and experiences of the Cleveland administration and the Wilson tariff bill "our wonderful industrial development" would be suspended not by breaking down the laws which have made it possible, but, as McKinley says, "benefits trade arrangements which will not interrupt our home production." Back of that sentiment stands the whole Republican party and the industrial interests of the country, and back of that sentiment stands the nation's new head and President McKinley's successor, President Theodore Roosevelt.—York (Pa.) Dispatch.

Europe Gets Her Share.

Why should the nations of Europe worry about our exports to their shores? Most of the goods go over in their ships. The more goods we sell them the more farms will go into the treasuries of the Rothschilds' lords, for, of course, this may not always continue, but it has been a rich plan for the British, the Germans, the Dutch, the French, and even smaller maritime nations, and now they are trying to undo one another in building new fleets of bigger and finer boats.

Not only that, but lots of the money they send to pay back rents in the form of railroad fares, all over Europe, hotel bills, food and tips innumerable and all the lavish expenditure of a host of rich travelers. The balance of trade is in our favor, but we are not mean about spending the money, and Europe will thank every time before she turns our picture to the wall.

Wind-Falling Mules.

Mr. S. A. Harris a grower of Charlotte, has lost a mule and the better part of a delivery wagon. The wagon body was made of poplar. The mule was made of just simple ordinary every-day mule. Tuesday night the mule got out of the stable and set about a task of eating up the delivery wagon. He ate the frame even to the floor and might have finished the floor if he hadn't suspected long enough to die. Mr. Cass King one of the original Two Orphans was at the old Courthouse when he overheard Sunny Maxwell telling an illustrative reporter about the death of Sam Harris mule. "I believe every word of it," spoke up King, "and I will tell you why Mules will eat wood when they are wanting forage and can't get it—meaning no reflection on Sam. A: Staunton Va., during the war, I was in charge of the commissary wagon. We had plenty of corn for our mules, but for days they had no forage whatever. Well, one night my mule ate out two spokes from a wagon wheel to which they had been tied. That morning I got a load of chestnut rails to feed my mules on and they ate every one of them. Just a mule died. When I heard the death of Mr. Harris' mule I can say but I do know that my army mules were great wood eaters."—Charlotte Daily Observer.

Forgetting Street Car Fare.

"It's a very frequent occurrence," says a street car conductor. "for persons to get on board a car and then discover themselves penniless. Sometimes they have given me their cards, with a promise to pay, and I must say the promises were always kept—and again they have stood me off with postage stamps."

An Essential "If."

Oklahoma will ask for statehood next winter. If Nevada could be kicked out and Oklahoma taken into the union the change would be a good one.—Cleveland Leader.

I bet no doubt that it a perfectly honest man in the world somewhere, but I will travel ten miles to see him and give 10 dollars for the sight after I get there.

WHY BABCOCK SHOULD GO SLOW.

Trusts are the outgrowth of capital satisfying the cheapest manner of methods of production. They are international and cosmopolitan. Where of them would favor free trade in their particular commodity as an effectual means of enhancing local monopoly. The sugar trust, for example, openly favors that policy. But the time is certainly not opportune for tinkering with the tariff. When a country is as prosperous as we are it is an unmistakes thing to let well enough alone. The introduction of a new tariff act with any substantial support would open up the whole tariff question. If the hosts, by the application of its stringent rules could confine discussion to the items named in the bill nothing could prevent the events from so extending the bill that the original author would not recognize that he had ever seen it and then it would come back to the house. Meanwhile for months the business of the country would be unsettled. Production would fall off in the commodities threatened, and importations and revenue would fall off with them. And we cannot spare revenue. Reciprocity tariffs, such as Congressman Babcock proposes will not support the government. They never did. For the six years preceding the enactment of the Wilson tariff our average receipts from customs were $212,153,780. For the four succeeding years the average was $155,156,054, a falling off of $57,097,524 per annum. It was that falling off which almost wrecked the finances of the country, and it was the accompanying destruction of domestic industries which brought ruin to private means. The country wants no repetition of this or any threat of it. A rural country should dread the fire it is a time to let tariff tinkering alone.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Bills Wife and Himself.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—Maddened by the report that his wife, from whom he had separated, was going to secure a divorce and marry again, James Kennedy killed her and then ended his life by sending a bullet into his left temple. The tragedy occurred at the residence of Mrs. Annie Barrett, mother of Mrs. Kennedy.

Out on the Pampas

By O. A. HENTY

"No, pass, Hubert. Capital! Capital! Now, I too remember we left the best horse in each team, then we both, on parting, shot another in order to feed and stop up the ranch with what we keep all the winter."

"Of course we did, Hubert. I remember it quite as well as you do. Well, then, we had only to shoot two more, and we should be all right. Now, then, we have only one more to do. I am going to send another light wagon out to-morrow, where I saw the horses and directly I get back I will send a party out after the animals ordered us yesterday. I can as easily take two as one, but we have plenty of time, and the flight they will get when they hear our shots will be much greater than that of one."

In a minute Hubert was back with the remaining two mules from which he had drawn the wagon. Two hours later the wagon was loaded, and the party had taken their seats for the night, when Hubert, who had been busy for some time past, came up to the wagon and said, "I have found a place for the cattle, I think, that you have had enough exposure to-day, and I shall be quite ready to go on with the work alone. The place I have found is a small valley, with a stream of water in it, and there is a good piece of ground for them to graze on. I shall have no difficulty in driving them there, and I shall be back in a few minutes."

The young Hardys had for some time given up doing any serious work, and were necessarily occupied in the stockade and in the outside. A week previously Mr. Hardy had, at one of his visits to Buenos Ayres, purchased a piano using nothing of which he had done upon his farm, and the delight of the girls and their mother, when the instrument arrived, was great. It was unpacked from the cart into the area inclosed among the wagons, and the Hardys spent the rest of the day in turn playing and singing to the accompaniment of the piano. The young men had, of course, been informed of the purchase, and had taken other seats for their night.

At the house were footmen. Of these there were two, and they were dressed in the livery of some great house, which, from the quantity of gold lace with which it was covered, and the height of the girls and their mother, some one instinctively set down as the residence of a duke, or at least of a marquis. The footmen had, of course, been left behind, and had taken up their quarters in the servants' hall of the house.

The party of young men, now in the field, numbered, as we mentioned, twenty-five, and they had, in the course of the day, been joined by a Mr. Hardy, who was a cousin of the young men, and was the manager of the estate, and who had been left in charge of the place when the young men had gone off to the north.

Although the young men had been with their sisters for some time, they had not been able to give them any account of their adventures, for they had been too busy with the work of the farm, and had, moreover, been anxious to keep the story of their adventures from the ears of the young girls, who had, of course, been informed by their mother of the fact that their brothers had gone off to the north to fight the Indians.

At the time when the young men had left home, the Indians had been quiet for some time, and there had been no fear of their making a raid into the settlements, which were now, for the first time, thickly inhabited. The news of the massacre of the Rio Negro had, however, been received with great consternation, and had caused the young men to hurry off to the north, in the hope that they might be in time to assist in the defense of the settlements, and to prevent the Indians from carrying off the cattle, which, if they succeeded in doing, would be a ruinous blow to the prosperity of the district.

The news came to them while they were at work, and they had ridden home at once to make preparations for their journey. It was turned over to the management of Mr. Hardy, who was a cousin of the young men, and who had been left in charge of the place when they had gone off to the north to fight the Indians. The news had, of course, been carried to the house by the men, and had caused great consternation among the women folk, who had, of course, been informed by their brothers that they had gone off to the north to fight the Indians, and had, of course, been in great anxiety at the news that the Indians were now in force in the district, and that their brothers had gone off to join the force that was being collected to drive them back.

The young men had, of course, been asked to tell their sisters the story of their adventures, but they had, from the first, been determined that they should not do so, for they had seen that the story of the massacre had caused their sisters great anxiety, and they had, moreover, been anxious that the story of their own adventures should not be told to the young girls, who had been living in peace and quietness at home, and who had, of course, been informed by their mother that their brothers had gone off to join the force that was being collected to drive the Indians back, and who had, of course, been anxious at the news that the Indians were in force in the district, and that their brothers had gone off to join the force that was being collected to drive them back.

The young men had, of course, been asked to tell their sisters the story of their adventures, but they had, from the first, been determined that they should not do so, for they had seen that the story of the massacre had caused their sisters great anxiety, and they had, moreover, been anxious that the story of their own adventures should not be told to the young girls, who had been living in peace and quietness at home, and who had, of course, been informed by their mother that their brothers had gone off to join the force that was being collected to drive the Indians back, and who had, of course, been anxious at the news that the Indians were in force in the district, and that their brothers had gone off to join the force that was being collected to drive them back.

CONGRESS IS AGAIN AT WORK

Both Houses Assemble and Adjourn in Memory of Senator Sewell.

SENATE IS MOVING SLOWLY.

Not Expected to Get Down to Actual Business for Some Time—Tariff Bill Introduced in House.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Congress reassembled this morning after a recess of nine days in either house. The Senate spent almost the entire session as a mark of respect to the late Senator Sewell of New Jersey and the House took almost equal time in the consideration of a like case. In the Senate no mention of other matters was made in eulogies, and it is understood that body will go on with its work in regular order and efficiently. It will be a month or two before the Senate gets down to its real business. Meanwhile there will be a good deal of debate. The Panama canal question will again be the trade in debate upon the floor, but it has been a substantial fact that the Senate seems very reluctant to enter upon the consideration of the Panama question. It is a delicate matter, it is a matter of long standing and it is a matter which has aroused much feeling. Nevertheless it is the question which is to come to the front sooner or later. It is the question which is to be the most important one for the Senate to consider during the present session. It is the question which is to be the most hard and most grand in the opposition.

The ecclesiastical authorities divide the history of man into six ages: (1) From Adam to Noah, (2) from Noah to Abraham, (3) from Abraham to David, (4) from David to the Babylonish captivity, (5) from the captivity of Babylon to the birth of Christ, (6) from the birth of Christ to the end of the world.

Careful observations have been made in order to find out which colors the uniforms present the best marks in the enemy's shot, and it has been found that the most fatal color is sky blue, closely followed by brown, while American bluish gray is the best.

SAYS CASTRO IS AN ENEMY.

Andrade Declares Venezuela Desires West War with Colombia.

Colon (Colombia), Jan. 7.—Don Antonio Andrade, former president of Venezuela, who arrived here from Caracas yesterday, said in an interview on board a train bound for Panama: "It is not Venezuela but Castro who is the enemy of Colombia. The Venezuelan people are absolutely innocent of the war with Colombia. Venezuela and Colombia (Zulia) are strongly joined by ancient commercial ties, while no such sympathy bound the Andean and those in Zulia have always regarded Caracas as a foreign capital. Castro's methods, therefore, are those of a foreign foe."

SENATE IS MOVING SLOWLY.

Not Expected to Get Down to Actual Business Until the Tariff Bill Comes—No Anti-Anarchist Bill Introduced in House.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Congress reassembled, but nothing of importance was done in either house. The Senate adjourned immediately out of respect to the late Senator Sewell of New Jersey and the House did similarly within after the introduction of a few bills. In the Senate no progress of value had yet been made in Congress, and it is quite clear that only routine business will be done for some days. It will be a month or so before the President sends mail to the Senate Indian Commissioner Jones and Minister Wu, of China, and Secretary Root will not be ready for a long talk on the Philippines. Senator Hoar is expected to have a few words on the subject of the Philippines, but it will be a week or two before he will have to do so. But no opposition from representatives of the Philippines is expected, the Filipinos are not the Nicaraguan rebel, and that is why they are not in disrepute in the question whether or not it is wise to allow them to build railroads to make a march. In which he will show up the weakness of the Nicaragua rebel. He proposes to treat Philippine bills in a manner quite different from the Cuban bill,

REVEALS SECRET OF A KING.

Manuscript at Gallipolis, Ohio, Tells Further of Aaron the Algerinesian.

The discovery of a manuscript in a safe that contains a set of clock in Gallipolis Ohio, reveals a secret of the French crisis and shows the reason the vault in the clock on 1788 of the Duke of Orleans, afterwards Louis Philippe, King of the French, from which the Duke of Wall Street, Duke of Orleans, Duke of Orleans, French clock that had been stolen from the same place. Twenty years ago the Duke of Orleans, and a house keeper, or a man who pretended to be a house keeper, or a man who pretended to be a house keeper, stole the clock from the Duke of Orleans, and carried it to Gallipolis, Ohio, where it remained until the discovery of the manuscript and document the day before yesterday and announced that they had found it in a safe in the Legion, a French society in the Ohio Land Company's office in Gallipolis. The document is written in the French language and is addressed to the Duke of Orleans, and signed by the Duke of Orleans, Aaron the Algerinesian, and Aaron the Algerinesian, and Aaron the Algerinesian, and

The New Village Finance System.

Mr. George A. Horner, the expert accountant, who has established the new system of municipal book keeping here, left Monday. With this system intelligently and carefully kept, the chance for error or confusion in village accounts is reduced to a minimum.

One book, in printed form, will accompanie the village for the entire expense of installing our system. Each page of this book is devoted to the proceedings of council meetings exclusively one week.

It is a comprehensive exhibit of the financial condition of the village following each council meeting. In turn this checks with all other books, and they must tally, or the error stands out in bold relief until the figures that have gone out on a "bust" are brought in and backed up.

There is a book for the electric lighting system, also a printed form arranged by sheets, there is a book for the water works, both so comprehensive that the wayfaring man, though a fool, may not err.

The system of collection also, has undergone a radical change. The water and light bills are now issued, and receive a new system of payment. They will hereafter be mailed, and must be paid at the Treasurer's office. Each bill has a stub which the treasurer keeps, returning the receipted bill, which have previously been broken, as above described.

The entire system is one of "finer-looking" accuracy, providing a check on every officer so that every cent of increment or expenditure is apparent at a glance.

Mr. Horner's work embraced the municipal business from March 1st to Dec. 1st last. During that period the water works have gained $1,000 above interest on its bonds and running expenses. The electric lighting plant, during the same period, has netted $1,300 above its own running expenses, and $2,300 paid for extensions of the system.

This is a very satisfactory showing and clearly demonstrates the probability that this earning power must increase, and that the two plants will ultimately liquidate their own bonds.

Citizens who are complaining of high taxes this year should be encouraged by the above showing. We have no more bridges or school houses to build and equip, and the reasonable assurance of an income over and above expenses.

Death of Morgan Bates.

The death, last Sunday, of Morgan Bates, at Traverse City, awakens the memory and stirs the emotion of the editor of this paper as the death of but few could.

Thirty-four years ago Morgan Bates was foreman of the Grand Traverse Herald office, and the writer of this was a compositor under him. Of about the same age the two became warm friends, and many an evening was spent by us in Mr. Bates room at the Campbell boarding house reading Shakespeare.

It was Morgan Bates who recommended W. A. Smith to Hon. H. M. Leach as a suitable person to publish a paper at Charlevoix, and the first suggestion to me of the matter came from him. When W. A. Smith came to "Pine River," Morgan Bates likewise entered the path which destiny had marked out for him, and when he died his name was inscribed well up in the hall of literary fame.

He was a personal friend of Eugene Field, as well as a companion of the most renowned literary celebrities of the West. Mr. Bates was the author of "Martin Brook," and at the time of his death was under contract with the Harpers for five colonial stories.

Twelve or fourteen years ago in collaboration with Hwyn A. Barron, he brought out the play "A Moral Crime." It was produced at the old Columbia theatre in Chicago, and was considered a great success. But owing to references to the confessional in the play, religious antagonism developed and it was finally taken from the stage. His wife, Clara Doty Bates, also a writer of considerable fame, died in 1895. Her juvenile stories are still highly valued.

After an active and useful life one old friend preserved to the home of his boyhood and noble young manhood to "wind the drapery of his couch about him and lie down to pleasant dreams."

He was a brother of T. T. Bates, editor of the Herald, at whose home he died.

Notice is hereby given that from Jan. 1st to May 1st, 1902, the price of milk will be six cents per quart.

S. M. MOORE.

A More Detailed Story of the Life of the Late Venerable Patriarch of Charlevoix.

Following is a review of the life of the late Silas M. Moore, from the Chicago Herald Herald:

"Silas M. Moore, a pioneer insurance and real estate man of this city, is dead in Pasadena, Cal., whither he went in search of health. Word was received here yesterday that he expired on New Year's day. The end was unexpected even to his family, as Mr. Moore's condition had caused grave apprehension for some time.

During his last illness he was attended by his daughter, Mrs. C. F. Gates, and by husband, who accompanied Mr. Moore to California. Two of his grand children also were with him.

For nearly half a century Mr. Moore had been actively identified with the business life of Chicago. He was one of the charter members of the real estate board and recently served as first president of that organization. He also was one of the organizers of the Union League club, served at one time as president of the Young Men's Christian Association, and established the Chicago Herald Club, at Charlevoix, Mich. Several years ago he became a member of the real estate firm of E. A. Cummings & Co., and continued his connection with the concern up to the time of his death.

Mr. Moore was born in Windham, N. Y., seventy-one years ago. His early education was obtained in the common schools, and he afterward studied medicine at the old Pembroke Academy becoming, after its graduation, principal of the Chester Academy in New Hampshire. In 1856 he moved to Mendota, Ill., and engaged in the real estate business. Four years later, after his marriage to Miss Elizabeth Davidson, he came to Chicago to live.

He accepted a position with the insurance firm of L. D. Ormond & Co., and upon the death of Mr. Ormond became a partner in the concern. After the great fire Mr. Moore became actively engaged in the real estate business. He withdrew from Ormond & Co. in 1876 and formed the firm of Moore & Sturas, afterward Moore & Jones. Later he became identified with the firm of E. A. Cummings & Co.

Mr. Moore was widely known for his charitable and philanthropic work which he did. One of his most important undertakings was the establishment of the American Armenian Relief Society. It was through his daughter, Mrs. C. F. Gates, that he became interested in this work. Mrs. Gates' husband was a missionary in Harpoot, Turkey, and they both were there during one of the Armenian massacres.

The society which Mr. Moore organized sought to find homes and employment for the Armenian refugees who reached this country. A colony was established in Georgia, where many families of the refugees still live.

After the death of his wife in 1884 Mr. Moore lived with one of his daughters, Mrs. Edward N. Wiley, Kimbark avenue and Forty-eighth street. Until within the last two years he had always enjoyed robust health. The climate of California had been recommended for him, and he went there only a few weeks ago in the hope of recovering from the carelessness which had fallen upon him.

Mr. Moore is survived by his two daughters, Mrs. Gates and Mrs. Wiley and four grandchildren."

To all our departing friends for South and West we simply say "Fare Ye Well and haste ye back again."

Next Sunday the pastor will preach in the morning on "The Philosophy of Noble Living," and in the evening on "The Valley of Dry Bones."

The congregations last Sunday were large both morning and evening, and at the morning service four received the right hand of fellowship and one received baptism. Over 60 partook of the communion. The responsive and musical service of the evening was much enjoyed. The choir received many congratulations on their fine rendering of the Chant, "Blessed be thou Lord God of our Fathers." Some more of these evening services will soon be held.

SCHOOL NOTES.

DeWitt Miller, Jan. 21, 1902.

Election of officers in Lyceum this week.

Anna Peterson, Venia Hughson, Olin Reynolds and Will Peterson entered high school Monday.

Two of the seniors of last year re-entered school Monday: Mary Traver for Algebra and Physics, Will Bellinger for German and Latin.

Rev. T. H. Hinge conducted the devotional exercises in the high school Monday morning and gave the pupils a very interesting talk on New Year's resolutions.

Walter small former captain and "Hight Half" of the Civitevers football team left Monday for Chicago where a position is awaiting him. The vacancy as captain of foot ball team is ably filled by Hollis Lewis the famous "Hight End."

People's faces actually ached from ninety minutes continuous laughing, excepting when the people melted with the speaker's pathos. It is the height of art to conceal art. How naturally they seemed to toss from his lips—sarcastic, incisive penetration into men's motives and foibles, wit without hidden sting, denunciation of common meanness, and eloquent appeal which stirred the best elements of human nature.—Buffalo Commercial.

Another year has begun, a year frighted with responsibilities and opportunities. For our success of the past we rejoice, in the failures we now many lessons to be learned. That the coming year should be better than any preceding, is expected not only from renewal effort but from the added facilities of our new high school building. May some big good records be made there. GRACE PATTERSON.

SCHOOL COMMUNICATION.

U. S. LAKE CORN'R.

When a naval officer was detailed to command the Saratoga on the opening of the Pennsylvania Nautical School, he declared after a month's experience, that not a boy who had entered the school had apparently ever before obeyed an order in his life.

The terrible disaster on a railroad recently as the impact unwound the facts and causes, proved to be due to a stuck habit of not observing sharply and automatically the orders and rules of the road, and what was worse, a habit all around of letting men take time to obey instructions and risking much by breaking, stretching or evading rules.

American life is full of this slack habit. Every business man knows that it is almost impossible to get a boy who will do what he is told. This year, as a great host of boys also girls begin their first wage earning work, they will repeat the experience on the deck of the Saratoga. Their employes will discover that neither boy nor girl has ever learned what prompt obedience to an order means.

Our whole social system is seamed with this. Laws are broken, regulations are disregarded, public notices are set at naught. Rules are everywhere violated. All through, discipline and obedience are lacking and where our disaster plow up its dead and wounded from this cause, thousands of lives are injured, embittered and ruined by countless assaults and collisions, and simply to the failure to obey orders strictly and promptly, and to follow rules without challenge or question.

The Pingree hotel at Traverse City was partially destroyed by fire Monday night. The building was one of the old landmarks of the city, having been built fifty years ago by the Hannah Lay & Co. The fire was incendiary and was the third or fourth attempt to burn the building within the last two years. The building was owned by Perry Hannah.

George F. Beardsley, of Boyne City, who has been connected with the Grand Rapids & Indiana land department for the last twenty-years, has lately purchased all of the company's unsold land in the entire land grant. The sale includes about 7,000 acres, and is the wind up of the balance of one million acres granted by the United States to the company in 1856. Part of these lands are well timbered and a part valuable for agricultural purposes. They are located in several counties in the limits of the original grant. Mr. Beardsley will continue to offer the lands for sale, as well as other tracts of valuable lands he already had.

The East Jordan Herald gives the following particulars of the recent destruction of the Bush mill. "The mill, built two years ago, was one of the best hardwood mills in northern Michigan and was owned by Mr. P. Moreland of Orchard Lake, whose loss is estimated at $20,000 with $10,000 insurance. Bush & Co's office which was several rods away from the other buildings, was saved by hard work. A strong northwest wind was blowing at the time and carried large cinders a considerable distance jeopardizing other property. The loss of the mill is a serious blow to the industrial welfare of East Jordan and South Arm, just when every prospect seemed most bright and it is keenly felt by the laboring men and in all branches of business.

Thousands Sent Into Exile.

Every year a large number of poor sufferers whose lungs are sore and racked with coughs are urged to go to another climate. But this is costly and not always sure. The Colonel dropped in for a brief respite, while awaiting orders for future work. He has been out several times with the "local sports" for hunting. —The state railroad commissioner, Chas. S. Osborne, has issued a new railroad map of Michigan which is superior to any other map of the state issued heretofore. The map is complete and comprehensive in detail and in addition to the map there are numerous statistics relative to the state of Michigan which are of considerable value for reference. The map is worthy of a place in every office of every county in the state and will not be out of place in any business office or library.

—We have just received a handsome calendar from the Michigan Agricultural College. It gives some very college views, and photos of the leading members of the faculty. If not, let us stay in our holes until some one digs us out in the spring.

—Recently the D. M. Ferry & Co., of Charlevoix, Michigan, commenced action against the Plant Seed Co., of Detroit, to recover a certain lot of contract peas that had been sold to the Plant Seed Co. by one of the Hayes farmers. The suit established the fact that under the D. M. Ferry & Co's contracts, the entire crop of peas belonged to the company until it is released by them, and can be recovered wherever found. This being so a person who disposes of contract peas becomes liable, otherwise than in a civil action.

—Lieut. Antauch, of the Salvation Army, who has charge of the work of the army at Petoskey, was here Monday with a bundle of the "War Cry," and the happy smile of a Salvation Army lass. Lieut. Antauch came to look over the field with a view of devoting one day of the week here. We are sure the people of Charlevoix will welcome her and her helpers. Time was when the Salvation Army was hooted and hustled on the streets. That time has passed, and to-day, all over the world the Salvation Army is respected by the best people. Its work speaks for itself—in the arrest of the drunk, where unfortunate ones are fed, and led into paths of righteousness. Now, no good man or woman will insist on the division of Christian work—Lt. Lieut. Antauch comes to Charlevoix the SENTINEL will do all in its power to aid her.

—Central Lake Torch: William A. Smith, the veteran editor of the Charlevoix Sentinel, made the Torch office a friendly call on Monday. While on a short visit to Central Lake, Mr. Smith has been in the editorial harness in Northern Michigan about as long as any of them, having started the Sentinel 32 years ago. At the time he went to Charlevoix by stage from Traverse City and had to walk up all the hills to help out the team which was drawing a heavily load. He settled down and took a power in the development of Northern Michigan generally, and of Charlevoix in particular. In his modesty he no question but that Charlevoix will secure the best sugar factory that money can give when his faith in his little city is unbounded.

Out on the Pampas

By G. A. HENTY

"We will, Cousins, we will, we agree," Mr. Hardy said earnestly, "your honored Monarch is of the thought. I trust you will and honor to the king, though you know I shall do so I know not. He can give me no more than my life, and I have lived long enough for my country. Tell your Monarch, Inca, that I am his obedient servant."

Two days later a curious cavalcade left the city of Cuzco. Mr. Hardy and his two sons, Mr. Mayne and Mr. Hardy, rode on mules, and the second was burdened with a light litter, in which Mr. Hardy was borne, for he was still too feeble to walk far. Behind them came a mule with a litter for Ella, and then came a long train of Indians, some on mules and some on foot, for the news had spread that the Inca was about to leave Cuzco, and all who could had come to see the last of the white men who had been the guests of the Monarch.

Ella was very happy at the prospect of leaving Cuzco, for she had been very anxious about her father, who had not rallied as she had hoped he would from the effects of the blow he had received in the battle with the Chiquitos. Her father was very silent, but he was not unhappy, for he was thinking of his wife and children, and was glad that he was able to be of service to them in his last days. Ella was very happy, for she was sure that her father would now recover, and she was looking forward with pleasure to the prospect of a long ride through the picturesque country between Cuzco and the coast, and to the pleasure of being with her father and her brothers for a long time. Her brothers had been very good to her, but she had felt that her place was by her father, and she was very happy at being with him now.

The journey was a long one, for the litters could not be carried at more than a very slow pace, and they had to halt for a few days at the town of Arequipa, where Mr. Hardy was carried into a room in the house of the governor, who was a relation of the Inca, and was ordered to remain there for a week, for he was so exhausted by the journey that he was in great danger of a relapse. At the end of that time he was able to bear the journey well, and they went on their way, the governor and his family accompanying them for a day's journey on their road, and then they had a long ride through the picturesque country between Arequipa and the coast, and at last they came in sight of the sea, and a few miles further they came down to the little town of Ilo, where they had to wait for a week for a vessel to carry them to Lima. They were very happy there, with a room in the house of the English consul, who was very kind to them. It is at Lima, now, that we have left them, for the news of their return to their friends in the little town of Ilo had spread rapidly, and the English residents had hired a large house and furnished it for them, and had sent down to Ilo for them, and had brought them up in state to their new home.

It was a very happy party that sat down to the table and amusing themselves with the fare they had studied last except cheese. There, for five minutes, they conversed without moving, somewhat in the reading element around them, and then they started with the cheese.

Then Mr. Hardy spoke: "It is over now, we can look up."

There was a general expression of assent. The boys looked up from their plates and their sweethearts, and the open countenance of Ella showed the effects of the blood-stained cheese. "Which was the best, Ella, the cheese or the bullets?" Harry asked. The smile of the young girl at the question was sufficient to show that the effects of the blood-stained cheese had passed away.

"Also owing to divers quarrels arising from butchers' dogs, occasioned in the 1677, by the keepers that if any butcher's dog be found in the road, ambulating or lying, or lion-any one or the rest or dog-of any stranger, the owner of the dog so offending pay 40s.

"Also it is ordained by the said Grievances that the butchers any day in the week shall search for corrupt victuals in any shop within the town and who that blackguards or lets the said searchers go during shall forfeit for every time 3s. 4d."

There is an institution for shoes of three old musicians, says the London Express, which shows that in municipal matters we have good examples in the past.

A daybreak they were seen in the streets and on their way. They had many an hour's ride before they came upon the road. They followed it all that day. Twenty miles's ride of the morning found Mr. Hardy that he knew that, at a short distance further in the west there was a spring of water much used by the Indians. Floating than it was but four days last an hour's ride, Mr. Hardy, after a brief consultation, determined to go over there to water the horses and breakfast, before retiring their four strong across the burned prairie.

In a little over the time named they came to a small pool of, Frightened water from which a little stream could run, running gently down northward, the plain. After leaving horses threadlines, and filling the water skins and kettle the horses were allowed to drink, and then plunged in with the greatest delight, emerging with his usual bright chestnut color, whereas he had gone from the water perfectly black.

After he had come out and shake himself, he commenced hunting about, and long we observed that Hubert's attention was attracted. Presently the dog ran forward a few paces and gave a sharp bark of pleasure, and Hubert, throwing down, gave an yell a cry that, as the party rode up.

"Hooray cried out shortly. "Those hot" found it the ground, and pointing were was an Indian arrow, and round the head was wrapped a piece of yellow with little little spots upon it, which Mr. Hardy instantly recognized as a piece of the dress Ella had worn when she left Cuzco.

"Ella, poor, poor," cried Harry, "is this your dress?"

"Know the arrow?" he repeated.

"Yes, I recognize it, Harry, it is Ella's dress, poor, poor, poor Ella." Harry was vexed at the question, and was ready to cry, for he was a very affectionate boy, and was very fond of his sister. "Where is the poor girl?"

"Where is the poor girl?" he repeated, a little sharply, for the question was a very natural one, and he was very fond of his sister, and was very much with Mr. Mayne, who was also very fond of his sister. Mr. Mayne was a very good fellow, and was very fond of his sister, and was very much with Mr. Hardy, who was also very fond of his sister. Mr. Hardy was also very fond of his sister. Mr. Hardy was also very fond of his sister. Mr. Hardy

MARINE NOTES.

Very little ice has accumulated in the eastern waters of Lake Michigan thus far the present winter.

Ali Monkoph (Philip C Schoenthal) and Capt. William Morse have sold the schooner Sale-Lyons to Niels C. Jacobsen and Oscar Hendersen.

The steamer Hankey went to Beaver Island Monday, returning the same evening. This is the latest the Hankey ever made the Beaver Island trip.

The engine and boiler have been removed from the steamer Lakeside of Manitowoc preparatory to cutting her in two and increasing her length thirty six feet. The engine is to be steeple compounded at the Lodge works in Detroit. When replaced with engine and boiler will be moved about ten or twelve feet.

Negotiations are still advanced for placing the steamers Badger State and Empire State, now being rebuilt at Manitowoc, in an opposition line to run between Detroit and Cleveland. The boats are owned by Harry Rose, now operating a line between Chicago and Milwaukee. Favorable offers have been made to Rose to operate the coming season between Detroit and Cleveland. It is probable that a new line will be established.

The members of the navy bill prepared for submission to Congress a bill providing for the establishment of a naval training station on the great lakes. A bill before the House provides for the creation of such a station at Milwaukee, but the department little knows the location to be used by a board of naval officers. The station is projected on lines like the station at Yerba Buena Island, in San Francisco harbor.

Capt. John Mackenzie, of St. Ignace has sold the small steamer Columbia to Peter Anderson & Sons, Marquette fishermen, who will convert her into a tug for sinking purposes. The Columbia was built at Grand Haven in 1892, is a length of 85 feet, 17 feet beam and 7 feet 6 inches depth. Her gross measurement is 17.26 tons. She was built for passenger carrying and freighting in the Straits of Mackinac and vicinity.

C. A. Macdonald, president of the Ship Owners' Dry Dock Company of Chicago, John Rowlands, assistant agent of the Wisconsin Central Railroad, and Edward Gilden of Racine have been in Manitowoc investigating the feasibility of erecting a big dry dock and shipyard at that point, to be operated by the ship owners' dry dock Company. It is said the plans include the erection of a steel ship yard in connection with the dry dock, where ships of the largest size now on the lakes can be constructed. It is not stated positively that such a shipyard would be located on Lake Michigan, even if a suitable site could not be secured at this port. Other sites are to be looked for, but it is believed that Manitowoc has a better chance to be selected than Sheboygan or any other competitor.

It is rumored in Manistee that the Northern Michigan Transportation Co. has purchased the big steel steam barge Harlem, which is a sister ship to the steamer Hudson, both owned by the N. Y. L. Dry Co., plying the lake from Buffalo. It is said that the Harlem is seventy feet longer than the Illinois and that her tonnage is much greater. The same rumor says the vessel will be entirely refitted and especially arranged for passenger service as well as freight. If this steamer is added to the transportation company's equipment she will be one of two of the very finest and largest vessels on the lakes. The company has continually increasing its equipment for some time, which has become necessary owing to the heavy increase of business during the past two years.

It is reported in Duluth transportation circle that the Northern Steamship Company will adopt an altogether different policy in the lake passenger business this coming season as compared with last, says the News-Tribune. Information under to be reliable is to the effect that a superbly appointed steamer will ply between Duluth and Buffalo, making weekly trips. Last season the Miami ran between Buffalo and Mackinac Island, making two trips a week, connecting with the white steamers out of Chicago. This proposition, however, was not satisfactory either to the steamship company or the public. The Miami and the white steamers frequently failed to make connections at Mackinac, and the former did not pretend to make connections with the railroads at the end of the route. It is expected that the Northern Steamship passenger boat to run to Duluth will come from the Atlantic, and if she runs weekly and keeps to schedule time, between Duluth and Buffalo, the result may be more satisfactory than two round trips a week between here and Mackinac and no connection beyond.

Beaver Island Brevities.

The boys out in the camps are doing nicely in getting out their product.

Miss Lizzie Gillespie, who has been shipping with her sister, Mrs. H. Martin, at the point, is at present very sick at her sister's home.

The weather for this month so far has been all that could be desired, sleighing has been perfect and the harbor is still entirely free from ice.

Frank Vincent was over from Garden Island Wednesday (Jan 8th) in his sail boat and said the trip was as pleasant as any he ever made in the summer.

St. Jacques, our hustling shoemaker and harness repairer, took advantage of the opportunity and made the trip to Charlevoix with the tug Elliott, returning with supplies for his rapidly increasing business.

Beaver Island lost one of its oldest and most respected citizens last Thursday night in the death of Mr. Cornell McAuley. Mr. McAuley was born in Donegall County, Ireland, on Nov. 15, 1826, where he passed his early boy and manhood. His occupation was sailing and falling till 1857 when he emigrated to Canada. The same year he was married to Mary Lieffagher and with several others of his countrymen came to Beaver Island, which he has since made his home. Mr McAuley has been well and favorably known among the business men and fishermen of Northern Michigan for many years where he has been noted for and sear for his geniality and good will. As wife and agent children survive him. The five sons are as follows: Frank and Hudson, both of Escanaba, James of Cheboygan, Patrick, made on a sailing vessel, and Owen keeper of the Squaw Island light. The two daughters are Mrs. Fridley, of Manitoque, and Mrs. Gaskill, of Beaver Island. The funeral occurred Saturday morning at ten o'clock at Holy Cross Church, of which he was a faithful member.

It is needless to say that our public schools this year are far in advance of any previous period in their history. The one great drawback at present is the limited room for the accommodation of pupils. This need is felt and is being prepared for in the shape of plans for a new building in St. James Harbor (St. Jos.), where the need is particularly great. There are sixty-five pupils enrolled in the above district, while none of the larger pupils are coming in for the winter session. It is found necessary to crowd in three children into a seat built for two, besides a half dozen or more on the platform where there should be nothing but recitation seats. The board recognize and appreciate the necessities of the case and are planning accordingly. The monthly reports issued at the end of the month to each individual pupil shows the child's standing in each branch taken. The report for December shows a perceptible increase in interest and application of the children which reflects great credit upon the Sisters who are so unselfishly devoting their lives to the advancement of our children along moral and educational lines. Margaret Gibson and Nora Passage stand at the head of the roll of honor for this month and were appropriately rewarded for good work faithfully performed by Father Zugelder who awards prizes to the two or three with highest marks each month.

Decline of the White Lawn Tie.

An interesting chapter might be written of the decline of the white lawn tie in congress. The Virginia congressman never did affect it in any great extent, and only occasionally was it visible around the neck of a North Carolinian. Farther south, however, the white tie and statesmanship used to go hand-in-hand from the shall and column Catchings of Mississippi, was a victim of the habit, but nowadays the custom is dying out.

Pioneer of Western Australia.

Alfred Edward Morgans, the new premier of western Australia, is a Welshman by birth and close upon 60 years of age. He spent many years mining in Mexico, where he was a personal friend of President Diaz. When the gold discoveries in western Australia began to attract the attention of the mining world he went there and settled at Coolgardie, for which constituency he was returned to the legislative assembly in 1897.

Cranks Hatch National Capital.

There are probably more cranks in Washington than in any other city in the world. Most of them are harmless and are never molested by the police, but they are often a nuisance to strangers. One of them is an old man from the south who believes that the late Jefferson Davis was the greatest man that ever lived. He haunts the corridors of the capitol looking for reporters and correspondents, to whom he declares he tell stories about Dav!

Unlucky Bounty on Wolves.

In the province of Buenos Ayres a bounty of $10 is paid for each wolf killed. The procedure to be followed in making application for the bounty is to go to a notary of the district and there make an affidavit setting forth the facts of your claim, the number of wolves killed, the time and place of killing. You get a certificate from the justice of the peace stating that the certificate is the treasurer of the county, the bounty will be paid.

Took the Lead in England.

There is a little story about Prince Edward of Wales in the petite Weekly. He said the other day, on a lady who was visiting him, "Mamma, I'm children in their nursery. "Do you think that Christ's resurrection is quite happy in heaven?" "Yes, dear," replied the lady, "why do you think so?" "Because I am not quite sure," answered he. "You see, she will have to walk behind the angels' chairs, and how she always walked in front."

Is the Lobster Doomed?

The agents of the Massachusetts fish and game commission are doing their part in enforcing the short-lobster law, and when the lobster eventually "passes," as many think he will, there will be quite a falling off in the state revenues. One Town man was recently "soaked" to the tune of $175, over fifty "short" lobsters having been found in his possession, and many other fines of from $10 upward have been assessed. A scattering man who is familiar with the entire coast and the lobster fishing and packing industry from Cape Cod to New Foundland, expressed the opinion that the lobster is surely doomed. "If I had my way," said he, "I would repeal all the short-lobster laws and let the fishermen make a grand scramble for every lobster in sight. They have got to go anyway, and you might as well cut the cake at once as to go through the farce of trying to keep people from catching them."—Boston Globe.

Tantalizing a Heater.

Representative Riley of Minnesota, was telling the president about the abundance of moose in Canada just across the Minnesota line. "Come up with me," said the enthusiastic Riley, "and we'll have the greatest big game hunt ever heard of. The great moose are snarled. I wish I could," said Roosevelt, "I'd tell you what you do, you get up a party of hunters and come down on over this Minnesota line, and I'll go up and help you get one of them."—Washington Letter in New York World.

The East and Past Cure.

Senator Hale does not believe in taking medicine. When he is sick he doctors himself. Medicine is to him a abomination. Recently he seemed to be threatened with a spell of illness. Instead of hastening to a doctor and doing himself up with drugs, began a period of fasting and abstinence. As he knew he could not be constant himself with the plainest food and indulged in a little exercise. The result was that his illness was averted. "I had been in the hands of the doctors," he said, "I would be in bed now instead of in the senate."

Indian commissioner Jones of two Indians, one of the Sioux nation there are 5th members, chosen by the tribes, who the senate does not contain a dozen members varying from 200 to 1,000 Indians scattered over the country by the king and hold office for life. There is no law for any of the national legislators and all they get in recognition of their office is free transportation on the railroads.

Mortality Among Settlers.

Under favorable conditions of peace the mortality among settlers is proverbially the least known, with a death-rate of only five in every 1,000. Compared with a soldier's life the pleasant days of a clergyman are full of danger, for his death rate is 11 in 1,000 or more than twice as great as that of his military brother.

Population Multiplying in Algeria.

The French census just taken in Algeria reveal the fact that in less than fifty years the native population of the Mediterranean land, which was 2,307,000 in 1856, to 4,671,000 at the present time.

Arab Harem in Mexico City.

A curious Arab harem has come to light in this city, or rather in the suburbs of the metropolis, through the complaint of a young Mexican girl who when a few days ago was presented upon her arrival in Mexico, says the Mexican Herald. The fact of the harem was an Arab known as El Jemen, who came here with a number of his tribe, and finally set up housekeeping with their comely damsels of the tribe on Calleson de la Hiere. The Mexican girl whose name was Soledad Gonzalez, was taken there against her will, and under strange rites were performed, and she was arrayed in Arab costume. She was much discomforted at dwelling there since four wives already, but says she finally became resigned to the life. Her lord and master gave her a seven string, however, and making her escape she applied to the police for protection. The harem was promptly raided, but the only Arab had got wind of the effair and in the traditional manner fled to the Mexican Arab, leaving his wives and "scarcely."

Tobacco Smoking Epitaph.

A gravestone in Mt. Gilgal, Ind. contains the lines of an aged smoking man who died at the age of 80 years:

In Decline, Fretful
In Death, Happy

Wolves and Bounty Frauds.

We are accustomed to claims of Finns as a massive every lock of which is curled and oiled. The old Finnish wolf bounty claim, which one would think would be dead and buried, is being revived in the northwestern part of the state. The Finns are coming to claim the bounty for the destruction of the bounty disappeared from the state. Wolves have been made rarer than the average circus, corresponding to the decrease of the Indian, in the local interpretation of it I mean.

AFTER THIRTY YEARS

COUPLE REMARRY AFTER LONG SEPARATION.

Man's Lost Fortune Is Restored by Loss of Memory—Husband Reconciled with His Former Spouse—A Known Farmer Wife Female Lunatic.

HUNTINGTON, Ind.—Married in early life, a lost fortune restored by loss of memory, separated for 30 years, reconciled and reunited with his former spouse—A known farmer's wife female lunatic.

These are the facts in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Wise, of Mount Etna, Huntington county, Indiana. Forty years ago Jacob Wise married Miss Mary Jane Hoover, and they lived happily together for a few years, when he became involved in business troubles and lost his fortune. Then he left home and family and went to parts unknown. He was thought to be dead by his family, and they had given him up for dead, when he came back to his native county and settled on a farm near Mount Etna. He was known by his neighbors as a hermit, living a lonely life on his farm. He became very poor, and was thought to be insane. He was taken to the county asylum, where he remained for several years, when he was released and went back to his farm. He was still known as a hermit, living a lonely life, and was thought to be insane

A SURE THING.

The Sugar Factory Positively Assured, On Conditions.

These Conditions Now Easily Met If We Do Our Duty.

The SENTINEL is able to state, from evidence that is indisputable, that the Charlevoix Sugar Company's plant will be built next summer, contingent entirely upon conditions that should be covered by the people of Charlevoix within the next twenty days.

The question of acreage is practically a third. More is needed to fill the requirements of the project, but the officers of the company have no long or any doubt on that score.

Within the last week good big figures have been added to the stock, big ones and subscriptions to the stock continued to come in. The point at which the manner of victory has to be placed, however, has not yet quite been reached, but the bill can be, and will be closed, if our people unite in an energetic movement to that direction.

This is not a gift enterprise, this some others may be, especially in recent years, it is a business proposition, involving the earnings of a few months investment, as well as the lasting benefits to our town and its contiguous territory. It means very much to us.

There is no reason why every impressment should not be met, and they will be.

The sugar factory will be built.

In a recent issue of this paper it was stated that Miss Myrtle Kendall, a daughter of Mrs. J. J. Hover, of Marion, had been killed in a street car accident in Chicago.

The statement was based on a telegram received by Mrs. Howe, stating that Myrtle "was dying; street car accident," and signed by Mrs. Murphy, and acquaintance of the Kendalls and Howes.

Immediately on receipt of the message, grief-stricken, and in almost a state of collapse, Mrs. Howe started for Chicago. On reaching Chicago, disappointment and joy of Mrs. Howe can be imagined. At the station, in company with the Mrs. Murphy whose name was signed to the telegram, was her daughter Myrtle Kendall waiting to greet her, looking seen approved of her coming.

Myrtle was unhurt, and had been in no street car accident. Mrs. Murphy indignantly denied that she had sent any such message.

The sisters here were advised of the situation, and they are of the opinion that they simply wished to see their mother bad yet lived for some time, sent the message, in a spirit of mischief, signing Mrs. Murphy's name to it.

NEW BEAVER BOAT.

Capt. P. D. Campbell Buys the Steamer Opal Agitator.

Yesterday Capt. P. D Campbell, of the steamer Ella L. Hackley, of Gill port, bought the steamer Opal Agitator, of Cosmos, of Harbor Springs, and, as we write, the Hackley has gone there to now her here. The new owners are P. D. Campbell, C. P. Wilmer and James McCann.

The Agitator is tonight to go on the Charlevoix St. James route, in place of the Hackley, to meet the increased demand of the route.

The Agitator will fill the needs of the route to perfection. She was built in 1882 at Grand Haven, is 104 feet long, 19½ feet beam, and 8½ feet depth of hold. Her engine is of 150 horse power, and her speed is about 15 miles per hour. During the summer of 1899 the Agitator ran on the Beaver Island route a short time and proved her ability to make the run in 2½ hours. The Hackley's time is 3½ hours. She is a staunch well built boat, and can beat out anything that blows.

The Agitator has, probably, double the freight capacity of the Hackley, and has excellent cabin accommodations. She can carry twenty-five teams, and fifty people can travel on her with comfort.

It is the purpose of Capt. Campbell to work up a passenger travel on the Beaver Island route, a thing that is quite possible, in view of the increased hotel accommodations at St. James.

The Agitator is just the boat to do this with.

The shorter time on the run will give people at least an hour more time on the island, if returning the same day, and the weather will have to be something terrorous when the Agitator misses a trip.

The people at both ends of the route will be glad of the change, although the Hackley has done good service.

Kirby's "Royal Court" is the best 5 cent cigar in town, and it is made at home.

SCHOOL NOTES.

January 21—De Witt Miller.

There were two visitors in the high school Monday afternoon. Miss Hodge a senior of last year, and Miss Moulton.

The banner this month was given to the sixth grade for the best percentage in attendance for the month ending January 19.

The Chemistry class has discontinued laboratory work until the new high school building is ready for occupancy.

The first of the literarian programs prepared for the next three meetings of the Lyceums will be given by the pupils.

The new high school building has been delayed because of the lack of material. Owing to the delay it will not be ready to occupy before February, otherwise we should have entered it at the beginning of next week.

The Physics class finished the subject of "Heat" today, completing the work by a test on the entire subject. The subject of Electricity and Magnetism will be taken up now.

A very interesting program is being prepared for the next meeting of the Extemporaneous class. Each member gives a toast, while Ethel Smith plays the office of toast master.

The following pupils are completing the high school course in three years: Of the senior class Gertrude Shapton; juniors, Merle Chase; sophomores, Mr. Nathan Smith; freshmen, Venie Norton, John Kendle, Bert Wilmer, Will Myers.

But time in last Lyceum, anyone desiring to know the outcome of the election can easily find out by noting the shape of the senior faces—they are long. Lest any should fail to learn the real results, we give the names of the officers elected: President, Thad Smith; Vice President, Nathan Smith; Secretary, Flossie Crowell; Treasurer, May Smith; Librarian, John Kendle; Sergeant at Arms, Professor Thos. Executive Committee, Rosa O'Neill, Mable Cains, Forrest Wood and Will Bellinger; Reporter, Stewart Stevenson.

—As a matter of fact, Cuban tariff tinkering will not materially affect beet sugar interests. Less than one-fourth of the sugar consumed in this country comes from Cuba. There is no occasion for any scare on that score. But, the matter of national policy is quite another thing. Cuba has been howling for independence. She is to get it. Why should she not take what comes with it—tariff reciprocity. There is just as good reason for reducing the tariff on German sugar as Cuban, and more, for is not the daughter of our President engaging the Kaiser's yacht? Let the dod-gasted Caribean half breeds pay the duty on sugar, if they want to, with one public, or two, as they choose.

HERE IS A WAY.

Put it on If It Fits—No Charge Made for the Wearing.

"Who sympathized with you when your little girl was sick? Was it a home consultant or was it Sears & Roebuck?

"Who carried your account last winter when you were out of a job and had no money? Was it Montgomery, Ward & Co. or was it your home merchant?

"When you want to raise money for the church or some needy person in town do you write to the Fair Store in Chicago or do you go to your home merchants?

"How much do Siegel, Cooper & Co. give toward keeping up the sidewalks of this town or pay the minister's salary?

"When your loved one was buried was it the home merchant who dropped the tear of sympathy and uttered the cheering word, or was it the Cash Buyers' Union?"

So says an exchange with much right and reason and while it is very true that citizens who do not patronize their own people can never be as prosperous as those who do, and home merchants have the right to make a howl about people who send out of town for their goods, what shall we say of the home dealer who sends abroad for his printing, and thereby helps lessen the employment of labor at home. The loss to the town is just as serious when the family of a printer leaves the city as when any other mechanic goes. There are men in this city who are not merchants, who should put this coal on instead of that bought last month traveler whose goods and work, at least three tailors in this city stand ready to duplicate with a free per rent discount on C. O. D. prices.—Herald Appeal.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The people of Mackinac Island will make an effort to have the island incorporated into a separate county at the next session of the legislature. The claim is made that the island is compelled to bear an entirely disproportionate share of the taxes of the county, the little village of 700 inhabitants being taxed for fully one-third of the county valuation. The courts have been asked for redress.

Secretary and Treasurer of the Elk Rapids Portland Cement Co. F. H. Moore, accompanied by M. H. Long left yesterday for Chicago and other points with a view to inspecting coal burners and other necessary machinery to start up the large plant. It is hoped to have the new machinery in and all repairs made to enable the plant to commence operations in the early spring.

By order of Court the timber holdings of the estate of David Ward are being appraised by a competent man and the results are like the hold bags—large. On one tract, that of pine on the head waters of Sandstone river the stumpage value of the Pine is put at $4,200,000 the average value per acre of pine is about $150.00. But in addition to this is the immense holdings of hemlock and hardwood which are doubtlessly worth more than the pine by a considerable margin.

"—is now generally conceded that the Pennsylvania Railway Company's interest in the Marquette & Southwestern railroad. When the connecting link between Traverse City and Northport and monster car ferries ordered are completed, you'll see ore shipped to the eastern furnaces via Manistique. The Pennsylvania system will then have a direct line from the mines to Pittsburg and Cleveland and with the new eight-car ears monster locomotives the road will be enabled to compete with the ore carriers of the lakes. The open harbor will permit of ore transportation every month in the year."

The legal rate of interest in Michigan, says the Petoskey Record, is six per cent. Money loaned by a Michigan man or women on mortgage security is based on average of 5 per cent and therefore Michigan capital being unable to realize more than 5 per cent, is not being loaned on mortgage security. With money more plenty than ever before it is harder to borrow money on real estate security, and what money is to be had is coming to them from Pennsylvania and other eastern states, for their mortgages are not taxable, in other words the foreign lender can realize 2 per cent more on his Michigan loans than a Michigan man can, and the latter is forced out of the business. Governor Hiles did a very good thing for his state when he vetoed the bill intended to prevent this discrimination against Michigan capital.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor.

The Men's Auxiliary will hold their Annual banquet shortly.

The Ladies' Aid Society is planning for a "sample sale" in the near future.

The subject of sermon for Sunday morning will be "To This Man Will I Look;" and in the evening, "Sowing Wind and Reaping Whirlwind."

The Annual church meeting was held on Tuesday evening with an excellent attendance, the last in many years. Reports were presented from all the departments of the church work, and all showed a good year's work done, and considerably ahead of previous years in some respects. The financial condition of the church is good, having raised nearly $1,800 for current expenses, besides $200 for alterations on the building. The trustees consider the church in good condition financially. The church has enjoyed a year of harmony, prosperity and blessing, the outlook, all agree, was never better. Three trustees were elected, two deacons, four deaconesses, clerk, treasurer, Sunday school superintendent, chorister and organist. At the close of the business session a delightful social hour was enjoyed and at 10 o'clock all joined in singing the doxology and retired, feeling that church meetings can be, and ought always to be, social and spiritual association.

A Battle of Majuba Hill.

A remarkable story is current with regard to General Sir Ian Hamilton's spectacles. It appears that the gallant officer, then a subaltern, lost a pair of spectacles in the battle of Majuba hill. They were apparently picked up by a Boer whom they aided, and who kept them for twenty years. In the early part of the present year the spectacles were found on the body of a dead Boer. There could be no doubt as to their identity, for the case had on it the monogram of Sir Ian on it, and —Lumbermen who make a practice of allowing the taxes on their timber lands to go unpaid until they have cut all the timber, and "can abandon them and lend themselves up against it" if they try that scheme this year, provided the township and county treasurer do their duty. —If you have but ten dollars to invest, put it into the sugar factory. If you are interested in the prosperity of Charlevoix, it will be the best investment you ever made. If you have but one share, it will be the easiest selling property in the market. It is a well known fact that not one share of sugar factory stock of the 15 factories in Michigan is for sale. —Joe Sparks, a fisherman of the north side, is in trouble. He has lately acquired the habit of running aswark, burning his wife's clothing, smashing furniture and pounding the jammer of his pays. Saturday night he was stirring things up when a neighbor telephoned for the Marshal. That officer arrived there just in time to save Mrs. Sparks's life. Joe had his wife down, and was bagodidding her knife over her, threatening to kill her. The officer took Sparks before Justice Mountney. Joe fell on his knees before the justice, and, in his own tongue, begged for mercy, promising, through an interpreter, that he would be good if released. The court, however, ordered him locked up until such time as the Judge of Probate and prosecutor can decide whether it is a case of insanity or plain every day drunk.

CHAPTER XV.

Elliot, who enjoyed this captivity, had acted at first until she could get on more, and had now moved himself for her sake. She had hoped that the Indians would be satisfied, once they had ascertained that she was a relative of chiefs, who knew that no ransom could be obtained from them in the shape of money, which more than to the slightest, but Elliot was a young man of good family and connections. She had hoped that the Indians would respect and appreciate this, but had found that they were proof against such motives.

Nevertheless, as time went from the time drew on, the chiefs had not yet settled, the Indians had resumed their war-paint, and the prisoners had not left the camp, although it was now beyond their back and setting fast in the middle of a great plain, with no trees or shrubs and scanty water in the vicinity. The natives were a good deal, for the Indians, and seeing that they had no cattle with them, and that the chief had left the camp, they felt sure that they would be back in a few days, and that the chief would be with them

The big factory at Boyne City has received than for five cargoes of bilies from Soulo Asserto. They come via New York, Philadelphia and New Orleans. The bilies are bought at about 1 cents and the freight per car from those ports of entry to Boyne City averages from $25 to $10.

The discovery of gold on the farm of Andrew Hanneson, five miles south of Smith Ste. Maire, has caused much excitement and a general increase in land values in that vicinity. Hendrickson was drilling a well when heretofore a situation of hard rock, breaking the point of his drill. In taking up the pieces among the pieces of clipping to the point were found two good sized nuggets of pure gold, in appearance similar to that found in the Klondike. A jeweler who tested the nuggets says there is no question as to their being the real metal.

Delaney Democrat: Prof. Graves was presented with a cane last Monday. The presentation however was not made in the usual manner, but was delivered with stinging blows over the head. The cane was in the hands of A. C. Sart, who for aggrieved at an article printed in the Democrat News relecting on Mrs. Sart. Mr. Sart believed Prof. Graves the author of the telegram and took this means of "squaring" matters. We are told that the professor did not get the worst of the battle. Mr. Sart pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and paid a fine in Justice Fisher's.

A Trinity special says: Evidence was found today that proves almost beyond a doubt that the counterfeit found at Frankfort, Mich., last summer is the workmanship emanating for the foundry use for the Ann Arbor summer hotel there was the property of Parker Magnetic, the famous Indian missionary. In possession he has been imparted since he left the Ann Arbor Railroad Company. Today the road was cleared from the premises and the date 1893 was found on one side, while on the opposite side was found the inscription, "M. & C. Quebec." Marquette left Quebec for upper Michigan in 1893 and was turned at Frankfort.

Bayne Gleason, Elisha R. Johnson, an old pioneer and highly respected citizen of Charlevoix county, passed away Tuesday afternoon at his home at his old homestead. Mr. Robinson was at his death sixty years, and lately formed the third active on Nov. 16. In 1871 he took up a homestead entry of 160 acres in section 1 Bayne Valley. From the virgin forest to one of the best farms of the Valley has been the transformation. The citizens of Charlevoix county elected Mr. Robinson for 25 years as county treasurer which position he ceased to occupy only when he was a candidate for the office of county clerk. Mr. Robinson for 25 years as county treasurer which position he ceased to occupy only when he was a candidate for the office of county clerk. Mr. Robinson was a man of high character and an elder of the same since the church was established in 1878.

Bellaire independent: Jacob Steinman and Mr. Shooks of Ellsworth, through their attorneys, N. B. Walker of Central Lake and H. T. Cook of Smith Haven, served a notice of suit against this county Tuesday upon County Clerk and Register Adams, over the board of supervisors. Thus we two suits, one of summons containing a declaration of four counts from $500 to $5,000, and one of Mrs. Shooks containing three counts also for $5,000. The suits are for damages alleged to have been sustained by the people on July 21 last, when a party composed of about 15 masked men are claimed to have gone to the house where the two plaintiffs were living and taking them out of doors stripped them of their clothing and after whipping them gave each a coat of tar and other substances, and left them lying bound and helpless. The complaint at the time when Steinman tried to get warrants for some of the party whom he claimed to have recognized was that the men said that he had impounded some horses and the woman had assisted.

Traverse City Eagle: While the Eagle has tried, ever since the plan was first made public for the building of a railroad from Traverse City down to Northport, to give our readers all the facts obtainable in relation to the matter, we must admit that all mist quite recently we have had very little faith that the road would ever be put through for many years. While a plan of a car ferry between Northport and Manitou was talked it was somewhat difficult to discern the object of going to the expense of establishing and operating a ferry between the two points, and connecting with nothing beyond Manitou. Now, however, that the Traverse City, Leland & Manitou & Northwestern the proposition presents a very differ and good one. Leland has always had issued cord rates northwesterly from Manitou a distance of fifty.

three miles and connects at Shingle, on M. with the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic system. Of course the road north from Traverse City will be operated by or in connection with the G. R. & I., which is closely connected with the Pennsylvania system, and there is good reason to believe that an interurban through traffic will be built up over these lines. There now seems to be no question that the early connection of Traverse City and North port by rail is an assured fact.

In view of the many outbreaks of smallpox in the lumber districts of Michigan, the state board of health has issued a leaflet dealing with this disease, which it is distributing throughout every lumber camp in the state. It relates particularly to prevention and vaccination. The leaflet says that the type of smallpox this year is so mild that it is difficult to identify, for the reason that some of the younger physicians having never seen a case of smallpox, and some of the older ones having never seen this mild form, having called the disease chickenpox, measles, Cuban itch, Arkansas itch, impetigo, contagious and various other names. In case of any doubt it is urged that the public safety should be given the benefit and isolation and disinfection carried out until at least, it proves to a certainty not to be smallpox. Thus far, in nearly every such instance, investigation by the state inspector of contagious diseases, the disease has proved to be smallpox. Opportunities owing lumber camps and large business from, may well present interruption of their business because of smallpox by or spiting employes to exhibit certain cases of recent vaccination or of revaccination. Every infected camp should be thoroughly disinfected.

LEADS FIVE MILLION WOMEN.

Mrs. Sewall Has Largest Following of Any Member of Her Sex.

Mrs. May Wright Sewall, president of the International Council of Women is by virtue of having the largest voluntary followers of any woman in the world. The organization numbers 5,000,000 members in sixteen countries. This council has three great purposes or reasons for existence—to prevent war, to spread peace throughout the earth, to find and publish to the world the laws affecting the domestic relations of women in all the countries represented and to collect and distribute accurate information concerning the status, activities, industries and labors of women in the different nations.

Mrs. Sewall framed the petition for peace, which was the only one officially commended by the peace committee at The Hague. She is the leading club woman in the world and is the president of one of the first women's clubs formed in the country. Her sympathy with the latest methods of education is manifest in her children, her lectures and in the classical school in Indianapolis, to which she devotes her morning hours for three quarters of the year. Here she holds a weekly salon, formed after the Madame de Staël plan, for the discussion of literature, art and the classical languages and literature. IMAGINATIVE EDUCATION.

Chauncey Depew's Visit to a Symbolic Kindergarten.

"A young lady acquaintance of mine conducts a kindergarten purely for the delight she takes in the work," said Senator Depew. "I was present not long since on an occasion of showing off. The young lady wished to demonstrate how successfully she had taught the children the meaning of words by appealing to their imaginations. She had taught them according to a system of symbols, which she had herself arranged. Of course the little people were much terrified by the presence of a stranger, and refused to commence for the glory of the assiduous teacher, as usual. At last she resorted to a question which she hoped would relieve all. Can any of the children tell me what happens during the season of winter? The silence was not broken for a long and desperate interval. Then one brave lad piped out: 'Please ma'am, we and Willie sleep very close together when it's winter.' We all encouraged him. 'What else? inquired the teacher. The child thoroughtful his hands into his mouth and thought awhile. Then he announced triumphantly: 'Willie's feet are always cold!' The teacher was disappointed, but I am of the opinion that the youngster had the right idea, very accurately symbolized, indeed."—New York Times.

A Song in Air.

"I'm no kicker, and I mind my own business" said the old man with the red face as he sat down in the car, "but there are things that put me out. I was just in the smoking car when a fellow came had a figure of Alex Jeffries hanging on his watch chain. I asked if it was a woman for Patrick Henry or Daniel Webster, and he looked at me as if I was a fool. Then he growled out: 'Say, you, what's it to you?' I said I was curious. 'Curious! Could I stand by and see you make a fool of yourself in public?' I asked him what he was, and he said he was a bookkeeper, rolled his cuffs over a lounge and flung me up the stairs in disgust. Think of it, sitting in a smoking car with a fellow that's the laughing stock of the country!"

Many Uses of Petroleum.

Parafine and its products are utilized in surgery and medicine; in the making of lubricants and the production of light, in paint manufacture and the preparation of chlorine, in the manipulation of rubber and in washing wool. Where it is cheap, it replaces coal; in Russia all modern plants worn one of the petroleum derivatives is used for the enrichment of coal. For greater lubrication the paraffin oils are the most serviceable.

Gorgeous Graduates of 1784.

Dipping the Ship.

Dipping the ship, it is said, will be the fate of Boston's white rosette next season. The dipper of the ship sets himself to the outright of a long metallic boat, lowers one side a stirrup and the boat plunges down into a tank and becomes entirely submerged. Presently it leaps out of the water at the other end of the tank and the passengers get out quite dry as to their outward persons and profoundly impressed. The theory of the inventor is that at

Free Cuba and Free Sugar.

Free Cuba, so called, is the child of American philanthropy. To accomplish the rescue of Cuba from Spanish oppression, cost millions of American money and much—too much, good American blood.

Spain expelled from Cuba, American philanthropy commissioned American soldiers, to do in our name what Spain had for centuries sustained as the handmaid of tyranny, Greed.

Whatever good intent possess they have been taught a Americans, whatever blessings the people have been given freely given by the United States. Their full political freedom will come with the springtime, with a President of their choice, and a government unfettered by United States dictation. Their flag will float over Morro Castle and the United States retires, retaining but a nominal but righteous guardianship, partly in the interest of Cuba itself.

But still there is much talk at Washington about "our duty to Cuba" as if our duty had not already been fully done.

Is our part of our duty to be philanthropic, a sole duty to be force voluntarily in to our philanthropy to feed the Cubans and go hungry ourselves? Are we called upon by the golden rule of international religion, to fill handsome pockets industries in order to "do our duty" to Cuba?

These are nine men down at the White House and the capitol, we should imagine, have been formerly on purpose, but they are letting their duty goad for Cuba to warp their judgment.

An Old Factory Again.

We learn that at the recent Farmers' institute in this place, and at similar meetings in other towns, a paid representative of the Michigan Agricultural College has performed a supposedly free spring sermon that is superior in nutritive qualities, to winter wheat and that bread can be made much easier from the former than from the latter.

Wishy, in the rose of an unskillful baker, the last statement may be, on a measure, true, the claim that spring wheat bread is more nutritious than winter wheat bread has been over again disproved by scientific demonstration, and the only reason it is still current, is that it is persistently put forward by unscrupulous western milling agencies.

That our agricultural college should lend itself to this fallacy, and thus strike a deadly blow at the entire farming interests of Michigan, is to us evidence of a sinister wheat clique and should be a subject of a searching inquiry.

SCHOOL COMMUNE COLUMN.

Teachers Wanted.

We call attention again to the Central School Laws, page 17, 1901 edition, sec. 49. Sometimes, through carelessness, or personal spite, or some other unknown reason, two members of a school board will contract with a teacher and employ the third member out in the cold world. This section is referred to, so as plain that any school moral understanding of it, if he will take the trouble to read it.

Meetings of the board may be called by any member thereof by setting on the other member a written notice of the time and place of such meeting at least twenty-four hours before such meeting is to take place, and no act authorized to be done by the district board shall be valid unless voted at a meeting of the board. A majority of the members of the board at a meeting thereof shall be necessary for the transaction of business." This section is supplemented with the following decision:

"A teacher cannot be hired by two members of the board without the concurrence of the third and without convening any meeting of the board."

Recently we have been notified that contracts have been made with teachers by two members of a board, ignoring the third member.

We blame the teacher as well as the offending members of the school board, in such cases. The teacher cannot collect her salary under such circumstances and she should refrain before becoming a party of the second part to the contract, whether the board has held a regular meeting and the members have signed the contract in a legal capacity.

Teachers must pass an examination upon school law and should be thoroughly conversant with their legal status.

We hope, that hereafter, every teacher will ascertain all the facts connected, and not catch at straws by accepting the terms of a contract wherein the third member has been ignored, and she has not been voted for at a regular meeting.

School boards in many instances have been employing teachers in this manner and directly a disagreement occurs and trouble arises. All trouble can be avoided by complying with the law.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS.

—R. J. Gedeck returned Saturday from Grand Haven and brought with him a license as first class pilot on the great lakes. This enables him to ship as first mate on anything that floats on fresh water. About the same time Harry Campbell, son of Capt. P. H. Campbell, returned with an engineer's license as chief for vessels of 100 tons and for national inland.

Reports received in St. Joseph from various inland points vouch the fact that practically the entire crop of peaches in southwestern Michigan, except the St. Joseph, lake shore and Fulpshi districts, has been killed by the recent cold wave. The total acreage affected by the cold is 100 and Van Buren county was 15,000 acres at outset, which produced 1,000,000 baskets of peaches last year. The loss of the peach crop represents nearly $1,000,000 to growers of that section of the state.

—An exchange says that a man was recently arrested and fined $25 for listening to a telephone message passing over the line in which he could at a phone and afterwards telling what he overheard. The theory was that message of course unless over the wires are confidential and the last that he caused a phone gave him no right to repeat anything he might of heard even by accident or otherwise. It is this is a good law, although sometimes you happen to hear some very amusing and interesting things which are not intended for your ears.

—On the occasion of the birthday anniversary of "Bobby" Burns, the immortal Scottish poet, the Charlevoix Scottish Club will give an entertainment at Odd Fellows' Hall Saturday evening, January 25th. The program will be of a Scottish character. It was reported that Angus McKinnon was to dance a hightland fling, "sword in chanterpiece," but it has been decided later. Bob Caldwell will tell a Scotch story, and Andy Rowe will sing a song. But joking aside, it will be a very interesting event. Rev. D. Hyslop, himself from the land of the thistle, and Rev. W. H. McCartney, a thoroughbred, but a Irish parson, will talk on Scotch subjects. There will be things to eat, and a social be-ecossed passtime, either.

Muskegon, Inch, is a much fashioned town of 25,000 inhabitants, and its citizens not only believe in municipal ownership of public utility but have votes on that belief. The water works and electric lighting system are owned and operated by the city. The two systems are in the same building and are run by the same plant, but are under separate management. The electric lighting system has been in operation the shortest time, but it shows better and quicker results than the other. According to the plan inaugurated in 1895 the revenue derived from electrical lighting pays the running expenses. This scheme has been successful from the very start. There is no charge for the electric lighting for municipal purposes, but the city pays for street lighting at the rate of 10 cents on the dollar of actual cost. The people pay an advance on the original indebtedness. The rate charged for commercial or residence lighting is extremely low, 11 cents per kilowatt, with 25 per cent off for cash. The people are actually paying for light at this low cost to consumers. The plant was built in 1895 by a stock company, issuing $100,000 in gold bonds at the Chicago Electric Co. The intention of the company was to turn the plant over to the city as soon as completed, or whenever the council might see fit to assume the responsibility of such an undertaking. This plan was completely carried out.

MARINE NOTES.

Pere Marquette ferry No. 1 went ashore at Ludington Friday morning at Ludington. She struck a bar, lost her headway, and fell over to the north side of the north pier where she was stuffed in ten feet of water. Ludington fire seven, before daylight rescued the nine passengers and 30 sailors. Four of the former were ladies. B. W. Seymour, manager of the N. M. Trans Co., of Manistee was one of the rescued passengers. This is the second Pere Marquette steamer that has been stranded this winter.

The steamer Cetal Agitator arrived arrive here Thursday evening in tow of the Hackley, and lies at the Wilson dock. There were some features of the boat that we were unable last week to record. She is driven by a fore and aft compound engine, with cylinders 14x30 and 20x30. Her record speed is a little over 15 miles per hour. She is lighted by electricity throughout. Besides having a large decks fo sand, and side wings, she has two commodious cabins—one all on the main deck, and a ladies cabin above, both supplied with modern toilet rooms. Aft the cabin above is a large covered promenade deck.

W. M. Lowrie, general passenger agent of the Northern Steamship Co., announces that the management has decided that the steamers North West and North Land will be operated between Chicago and Buffalo during the season of 1902, and on the experience of last year it is their purpose to continue these boats in this service permanently. The Northern Steamship company is spending between $500,000 and $600,000 in improvements on these two steamers and substituting Scotch boilers for the Belleville type which will develop a material increase in speed, power and safety. The guests of each will be Milwaukee, Harbor Springs, Mackinac, Detroit and Cleveland.

The Masters' and Pilots' National associations in convention in Washington are able, led by a number of lake marine men, who are assisting the congressmen on a proposition that is being knocked by the national convention. Under the present regulation, when a vessel meets with a collision or other structure the local steam vessel inspector may revoke permanently or for a specified time the license of the master or pilot, if such officers are found to have been at fault. The regulation is however, subject to review by the district in session. The Masters' and Pilots' associations want congress to pass a law having it in a jury of rich masters and engineers to determine in all cases whether the penalty of forfeiture or revocation of license should be imposed.

We had the steamer Hackley last up last week, after her last trip, for last Sunday being a fine day, several. Pete having a kind heart toward the Islanders, took over a big boat, returning in the evening. January 19th is the latest, probably, that the mail ever went to the island by boat. The people were very happy to hear the laughter chasers of the Hackley. This is positively the "last appearance" of the Hackley on the Beaver Island route this winter, and probably the last trip she will ever make there. Capt. Campbell had no trouble with ice, and the trip was a pleasant and favorable one. The Hackley will have to up. And, while we are talking about the Hackley, we are authorized to announce that she is for sale. She will be sold only because the business of the boat has outgrown her. She is a staunch and well manicured boat, and will fill the requirements of some route as well as the Agitator will fill the requirements of this.

HARD PENALTY FOR CRIME.

Haunting Robber Sentenced to Death and Sixteen Years Imprisonment.

A notorious robber has recently received a remarkable sentence in Augsburg, a sentence that illustrates aptly the truth of the assertion that judges are not always as wise as they might be. The criminal Mathias Kistel by name lived in the Maximger Moos, a great Bavarian moor which, owing to its impenetrable bogs and general desolation, has long been a hiding place for all sorts of lawless characters. Kistel came of a family of lawbreakers and he once had served a term in prison. A year ago he committed a burglary, and when pursued by such dalmatrons he turned upon them and killed them both. He fled to the moor and for a long time defied pursuit. Finally, however, he was betrayed by a prisoner whom he had injured, and one night the armed house in which he had taken refuge was surrounded by gendarmes, who first poured a volley into the place and then rushed in. Kistel was forced sliding in the chimney. He was brought down by the revolvers of his pursuers, so badly wounded that his life was despaired of. He recovered, however, and was then brought to trial. The prosecution demanded his execution—three months for murder, for robbery and as an habitual criminal. He was found guilty on all three charges and the court gravely imposed a sentence of fifteen years.

On the first count Kistel was sentenced to death, on the second to fifteen years' penal servitude and on the third to deprivation of civil rights during the remainder of his life.

SKELETON DINNERS.

They Abound in Fickle, But Are Distasteful to Bolsha.

"What's the matter, old man? You look as though you had been up against it," remarked a well-known man about town yesterday, meeting another of the same ilk. The comment was not unmerited for. Bleary-eyed pale and nervous, the young man that afternoon did look every inch a victim of intense dissipation. He groaned both hands to his throbbing head and replied: "Skeleton dinner last night. Never again. Once is enough for a lifetime." Then he groaned. "What's a skeleton dinner?" asked his friend. "It's a dinner with nothing to eat, but the regis. What you look at, food you make up in drink. Friend of mine gave it at his home last night. Blue cheese, oyster shells and cocktails. Second course, hot water in bouillon cups, with sherry on the side. Third course, paper mache fish, lemon or mortlall. Next course, lamb chops with the meat scraped off and thrown. Then the skeleton of a turkey and quart of champagne. By that time the thing seemed so funny we didn't care whether we got anything to eat or not. So we drank champagne till the cows came home and the roosters were crowing. That's a skeleton dinner. If you ever sit down to a table where an alleged humorous host begins by setting oyster shells before you, it's up to you to play foxy."—Philadelphia Record.

What and Why at School.

Recently a gentle school teacher wrote the sentence, "Then boys are sliding down hill," and requested someone in the school to correct and why. One bright youngster held up his hand, and on being asked said: "Correction—Those boys are sliding down hill. Why—Because they can't slide up."—London Tit-Bits.

ODD PRACTICAL CHARITY.

Food in the Dustbins From Municipal Kitchens in Boston.

The city of Boston has an ingenious method of supplying food to the destitute, as well as providing them with bedding for the night, according to a consular report. For several years the city has managed a system of municipal kitchens known as "Ice Pourboux Almoneries Municipaux," where persons without money may present tickets and procure a warm, substantial meal. The city has also recently erected one of these buildings, having in connection therewith a dormitory with beds for the accommodation of about fifty persons. These beds are free to the destitute for a period of three nights, when they are obliged to make room for others. The rule are sent to the hospital. During the stay at the dormitory, each one receive two meal tickets each day. These municipal kitchens are open from the 15th of October until the 15th of April each year, but the dormitory is open during the entire year. Two meals are served each day, the noon meal from 10:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., and the evening meal from 5 until 7:30 p. m. With the exception of the kitchen connected with the dormitory, the meals are not cooked, but the prices are so low that anyone is obliged to suffer from hunger. Tickets for filling the holder to one dish of anything on the bill of fare are deposited at the bakeries and tobacco shops throughout the city where they are purchased by the charitably inclined citizens, who in turn hand them to the Applicants for Charity.

Do We Wash Too Often?

For many years medical men and others have recognized the dangers arising from a restricted use of soap and water. There is a generally accepted belief that people cannot wash too often. Physicians are now prepared to say that this is a mistaken idea. It has been pointed out that the skin is not well adapted to frequent applications of water, accompanied by even the least irritating of soaps. A tendency arises to maceration of the superficial part of the epidermis, which is too frequently removed. There is no doubt, according to the Lancet, that many cases of roughness of the skin of the face come from too much washing. It is a good thing to rub the face with a soft, clean, dry towel two or three times a day. If in addition water is used in the morning and at night, the skin will be kept in a sound, smoother and healthier state than if, as is often the case, soap and water are used three or four times a day.

Vanity of a Child Princess.

A boatman once carried one of the little English royalties on board a yacht. As he carefully set her down on the deck, he said, "There you are, my little lady." The child, who had not relished being carried, shook herself and said: "My little lady! Don't I'm a princess!" Her royal mother, who stood by, said quietly: "You had better tell the kind sailor who carried you, that you are not a little lady yet, but that you hope to be one some day."

Sea Water for Sunstrokes.

Sea water is recommended as a cure for sunstrokes, in addition to a light diet and a mild purge before starting on a voyage, and loose clothing and a recumbent position in the open air on board ship. It will be the gift of Rev. D. Hyslop to the high school on the occasion of the opening of the new building. A valuable and most appropriate gift.

—The Robert Burns birthday anniversary entertainment of the Charlevoix Scottish Club at Odd Fellows' Hall last Saturday evening was a success. Most of the invitations were accepted and the attendance was good. The address of Dr. Hyslop is spoken of by all present as highly classical and instructive. The gathering was a red letter event in the history of the Scottish Club.

—H. Lee Billings, who returned from southern Michigan brought with him a relic that is well worth preserving. It is the bean shell of a three inch rapid fire cartridge, that was used in the national salute of Manilla in honor of the memory of the late President McKinley. The shell was brought from the Philippines by Mr. Billings' sister, whose husband is an army surgeon there.

—There are days and nights when a little personal carelessness on your part can make a lot of trouble. Watch your stoves, in the morning, you deposit your ashes. Inspect your flues and stove-pipes; clean up about the door of your furnace. And, last but not least, keep insured, but don't let the consciousness of your financial security beget carelessness in your part and hazard the safety of your neighbor whose policy may have expired.

—Mrs. Mary Lindsay died at her home on the south terrace, in this village, yesterday morning, aged 69 years. The funeral will be from the M. E. church. Deceased is survived by nine children, Thos. of Dunbeggan; Hannah, of Washington, D. C.; James and Joseph, of Charlevoix; Mrs. James Alcock and Mrs. Albert Pellinger, of Charlevoix; Mrs. George Hickmans, of Deer River, Minn., and one daughter in Canada.

—The Orkand Masonic lodge in the counties is declared to be that at the old central church Kewaunee county, just across the line from Oconto. The property contained something like $700, and it was decided to purchase Oshanto & Herla tolling stock for less than 40 per share. Since then the stock has sold for over $900 per share, while the dividends received have all along been applied to the purchase of more shares, until now a good paying block is held by the lodge.

—T. J. Thomson died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Isaac Hogan, in this village, last Friday evening, aged 77 years. Deceased located in the township of Platt, Benzie county in 1852, where he lived continuously until 1880, when he removed here. He was a devoted Christian, a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and for many years was a local preacher. He leaves a son and two daughters—Hon. M. E. Thomson, judge of Probate of Benzie county, Mrs. Isaac Hogan, and Mrs. J. R. Carter, of this place. The remains were taken to Benzie county Saturday for interment, in charge of the surviving children.

Free Cuba and Free Sugar.

Free Cuba, so called, is the child of American philanthropy. To secure this the rescue of Cuba from Spanish oppression, cost millions of American money and much more much, good American blood.

Spain expelled from Cuba, American philanthropy consulted with American soldiers, to drive out what Spain had for centuries sanctioned as the handmaid of tyranny, disease.

Whatever good Cubans possess they have been taught by Americans, what ever blessings they enjoy have been these freely given by the United States. They felt that American freedom will come with the spanglitter, with a president of their choice, and a government untrammelled by United States alteration. Their flag will float over Morro Castle, and the United States nation, containing but a nominal but righteous guardianship, purely in the interest of Cuba itself.

But still there is much talk at Washington about our duty to Cuba "as it was duty had not already been fully done.

Is it a part of our duty to make concessions to our desire to be hospitable? Is it true philanthropy to lend the Cubans and go hungry ourselves? Are we called upon by the golden rule of international reciprocity to loading our own industries in order to "do our duty" to Cuba?

Those are time honored words down at the White House and the capitol, we would not question their honesty of purpose, but they are letting their holy zeal for Cuba to warp their judgment.

An Old Fakery Again.

We learn that at the recent Farmers' Institute in this place, and at similar meetings in other towns, a gold representative of the Michigan Agricultural College has professed to demonstrate that spring wheat flour is superior to winter wheat flour, winter wheat, and that bread can be made much easier from the former than from the latter.

While, in the case of an unskillful baker, the last statement may be, to a measure, true, the claim that spring wheat bread is our traditional then winter wheat bread has been over again disproved by scientific demonstration, and the only reason it is still current is that it is persistently put forth by unscrupulous vendors, selling agencies.

This our agricultural college should put a stiff to this fakery, and thus strike a deadly blow at the entire farming interests of Michigan, which practically is winter wheat land, and should be a similar educational, it is almost past comprehension.

SCHOOL COLUMN COLUMN.

A. W. CRAIG, Editor.

We call attention again to the General School Law, page 49, 1893 edition, sec. 49. Sometimes, through carelessness, or personal spite, or some other unknown reason, two members of a school board will contract with a teacher and leave the third member out in the cold world. The security referred to, is so plain that any ordinary mental one understand it, if he will take the trouble to read it.

"Meetings of the board may be called by any member thereof by serving on the other member a written notice of the time and place of such meeting at least twenty-four hours before such meeting is to take place, and no act authorized to be done by the district board shall be valid unless made at a meeting of the board, a majority of the members of the board at a meeting thereof shall be necessary for the transaction of business." This section is supplemented with the following decision:

"A teacher cannot be hired by two members of the board without the concurrence of the third and without convening any meeting of the board."

Recently we have been notified that contracts have been made with teachers by two members of a board, ignoring the third member.

We blame the teacher as well as the offending members of the school board, in such cases. The teacher cannot collect her salary under such circumstances and she should accertain before becoming a party of the second part to the contract, whether the board has held a regular meeting and the members have signed the contract in a legal capacity.

Teachers must pass an examination upon school law and should be thoroughly conversant with their legal status.

We hope, that hereafter, every teacher will ascertain all the facts connected, and for such at stake by accepting the "ways of a contract wherein the third member has been ignored, and she has not been voted for at a regular meeting.

School boards in many instances have been employing teachers in this manner and directly a disagreeable course and trouble arises. All trouble can be avoided by complying with the law.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS.

—R. J. Gedick returned Saturday from Grand Haven and brought with him a tonsure as test class pilot on the great lakes. This entitles him to skip as test mate on anything that floats on fresh water. About the same time Harry Campbell, son of Capt. F. D. Campbell, returned with an engineer's license as chief for vessels of 100 tons and first assistant unlimited.

—Reports received in St. Joseph from various school points confirm the fact that practically the entire crop of peaches in southwestern Michigan, except the St. Joseph, lake shore and Fennville districts, has been killed by the recent cold weather. The wind storm affected the crop in this and Van Buren county was the 1893 acres of orchards, which produced 350,000 baskets of peaches last year. The loss of the peach crop represents nearly $1,000,000 to growers of that section of the state.

—An exchange says that a man recently arrested and fined $10 for listening to a telephone message passing over the line to which he was a phone and afterwards telling what he overheard. The theory was that messages of conversations over the wires are confidential and the law that no person a phone over line so tight to repeat an "thing he might of hear, either by accident or otherwise. If this is a good law, although sometimes it will happen to hear some very amusing and interesting things which are not intended for your ears.

—In the occasion of the birthday anniversary of "Bonny" Burns, the immortal Scottish poet, the Charlevoix Scottish Club will give an entertainment at Odd Fellows' Hall Saturday evening, January 25th. The program will be of a Scottish character. It is rumored that Angus McIntosh was to dance a highland fling over the "claymores." but it has been decided later. Bob Caldwell will tell a Scotch story, and Andy Ross will sing a song. Joe, taking aside, it is to be a very interesting event. Rev. Dr. Hyslop, himself from the land of the thistle, and Rev. W. H. McAvoy, a thoroughbred, but a born yankee, will talk on Scotch subjects. These are to things to see, and if you be a national partisan, either.

—Mishawaka, Ind., is a town farthering town of 9,000 inhabitants, whose citizens not only believe in municipal ownership of public outlief, but vote on that belief. The water works and electric lighting system are owned and operated by the city. The two systems are in the same building and are run by the water board, but are under separate management. The electric lighting system has been in operation the shortest time, but it shows better and quicker results than the other. According to the plan inaugurated in 1895 the revenue derived from commercial lighting pay the running expense. This scheme has been successful from the very start. There is however, a levy of 15 cents on the $100 for street lighting. The proceeds are applied on the original indebtedness. The rate charged for commercial or residence lighting is extremely low, 11 cents per kilowatt, with 20 per cent off for cash. The plant is gradually paying for itself at the rate named in contracts. The plant was built in 1895 by a stock company of public spirited citizens known as the "Mishawaka Electric Co." The intention of the company was to turn the plant over to the city as soon as convenient, so that over the money might see it to assume the responsibility of such an undertaking. This plan was completely carried out.

MARINE NOTES.

Pere Marquette ferry No. 3 went ashore at 5 o'clock Friday morning at Ludington. She struck a bar, lost her anchorage, and fell even to the north side of the north pier, where she was scuttled in ten feet of water. Ludington life savers, before day break rescued the ship passengers and 20 sailors. Four of the former were ladies. R. W. Seymour, manager of the N. M. Trans. Co., of Manistee was one of the rescued passengers. This is the second Pere Marquette steamer that has been stranded this winter.

The steamer Owl Agitator arrived arrive here Thursday evening in tow of the Hackley, and lies at the Wilson dock. There were some features of the boat that we were unable last week to record. She is driven by a fine and all compound engine, with cylinders 14x20 and 20x20. Her boiler equal is a little over 75 miles per hour. She is lighted by electricity throughout. Besides having a large draw forward, and wide wings, she has two commodious cabins—one aft on the main deck, and a ladies cabin above, both supplied with modern conveniences. Aloft the cabin shows is a large covered promenade deck.

W. M. Lowrie, general passenger agent of the Northern Steamship Co., announces that the management has decided that the steamers North West and North Land will be operated between Chicago and Buffalo during the season of 1902, and on the experience of last year it is their purpose to continue these boats in this service permanently. The Northern Steamship company is spending between $250,000 and $300,000 in improvements on these two steamers and substituting Scotch boilers for the Belleville type which will develop a material increase in speed, power and safety. The ports of call will be Milwaukee, Harbor Springs, Mackinac, Detroit and Cheboygan.

"The Masters and Pilots' National" associations in convention in Washington are attended by a number of lake steamboat men, who are soundly the congressmen on a proposition that is being knocked by the national convention. Under the present regulation, when a vessel moves with a pilot house or other accident, the local steam vessel inspector may revoke permanently or for a specified time the license of the master or pilot. If such officers are found to have been at fault. The association is however, subject to review by the district inspector. The Masters' and Pilots' associations want congress to pass a law leaving it to a jury of six masters and six engineers to determine in all cases whether the penalty of forfeiture or revocation of license should be imposed.

We had the streetcar Hackley laid up last week, after her last trip, but last Sunday being a fine day, we caught Pete having a kind heart toward the islanders, took over a trip and, returning in the evening. January 19th is the latest, probably, that the mail ever went to the island in. The people were very happy to hear the familiar whistle of the Hackley. This is positively the "last appearance" of the Hackley on the Beaver Island route this winter, and probably the last trip she will ever make there. Capt. Campbell had no trouble with the, and the trip was a pleasant and fortunate one. The Hackley will run to tip. And, while we are talking about the Hackley, we are authorized to announce that she is for sale. She will be sold only because the business of the route has outgrown her. She is a staunch and well matched boat, and will fill the requirements of some route as well as the Agitator will fill the requirements of this.

HARD PENALTY FOR CRIME.

Bavarian Robber Sentenced to Death and Fifteen Years' Imprisonment.

A notorious robber has recently received a remarkable sentence in Augsburg a sentence that illustrates once the truth, on the assertion that judges are not always as wise as they might be. The criminal Matthias Kneisl by name, lived in the Machtzer Moos, a great Bavarian moor which, owing to its impenetrable bogs and general stagnation, has long been a hiding place for all sorts of lawless characters. Kneisl came of a family of lawbreakers and he once had served a term in prison. A year ago he committed a burglary and when pursued by two gendarmes he turned upon them and killed them both. He fled to the moor and for a long time defied pursuit. Finally, however, he was betrayed by a relative whom he had injured, and one night the round house in which he had taken refuge was surrounded by gendarmes, who first poured a volley into the place and then rushed in. Kneisl was found hiding in the dungeon. He was brought down by the relatives of his victims, as fully wounded that his life was despaired of. He recovered, however, and was then brought to trial. The prosecution demanded his conviction on three counts—for murder, for robbery and as an habitual criminal. He was found guilty on all three charges and the court gravely imposed a sentence to fit the verdict. On the next count Kneisl was sentenced to death, on the second to fifteen years' penal servitude and on the third to deprivation of civil rights during the remainder of his life.

SKELETON DINNERS.

They Abound in Florida, But Are Different in Spirit.

"What's the matter, old man? You look as though you had been up against it," remarked a well-known man about town yesterday, meeting another of the same ilk. The component was not unreal for. Blear-eyed, pale and nervous, the young man thus addressed did show every evidence of extreme dissipation. He pressed both hands to his throbbing head and ejaculated "Absinthe dinner last night. Never again. Once is enough for a lifetime." Then he groaned. "What's a skeleton dinner?" asked his friend. "It's a dinner with nothing to eat," was the reply. "What you look in food you make up in drink. Friend of mine gave it at his house last night. First course, oyster shells and cocktails. Second course, hot water in bouillon cups, with sherry on the side. Third course, pepper sauce fish, lobster cocktail. Next course, lamb chops with the meat scraped off and dared. Then the skeleton of a turkey and grip of champagne. By that time the things seemed so funny we didn't care whether we got anything to eat or not. So we drank champagne till the crew came home and the runners were crowing. That's a skeleton dinner, if you ever sit down to a table where an alleged humorous host begins by setting oyster shells before you, it's up to you to play foxy."—Philadelphia Record.

What and Why at School.

Recently a public school teacher wrote the Gazette, "Three boys are sitting down idle, and requested some one in the school to correct and why. One bright youngster held up his hand and on being asked said: "Correction—Those boys are sitting down idle. Why—Because they can't slide up."—London Tit-Bits.

ODD PRACTICAL CHARITY.

Food in the Destitute from Municipal Kitchens in Nantes.

The city of Nantes has an inexpensive method of supplying food to the destitute, as well as providing them with lodging for the night, according to a consular report. For several years the city has managed a system of municipal kitchens, known as "Les Fourneaux Alimentaires. Municipaux" where persons without money can get meal tickets and procure a warm, substantial meal. The city has also recently created one of these half-fledgling in connection therewith a dormitory with beds for the accommodation of about fifty persons. These beds are free to the destitute for a period of three nights, when they are obliged to make room for others. The sick are sent to the hospital. During the stay at the dormitory, each one receives two meal tickets each day. These municipal kitchens are open from the 15th of October until the 15th of April each year, but the dormitory is open during the entire year. Two meals are served each day, the noon meal from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m. and the evening meal from 5 until 7:30 p. m. With the exception of the kitchen connected with the dormitory, the meals are not exactly free, but the charge is so low that no one need fear to suffer from hunger. Tickets entitling the holder to one dish of stewing on the bill of fare are deposited at the bakeries and tobacco shops throughout the city, where they are purchased by the charitably inclined citizens, who in turn hand them to the applicants for charity.

He We Work Too Often?

For many years medical men and others have recognized the dangers accruing from a restricted use of soap and water. There is a generally accepted belief that people cannot wash too often. Physicians are now prepared to say that this is a mistaken idea. It has been pointed out that the skin is not well adapted to frequent applications of water, accompanied by even the least irritating of soaps. A tendency arises to maceration of the superficial part of the epidermis, which is too frequently removed. There is no doubt, according to the Lancet, that in cases of roughness of the skin of the face come from too much washing. It is a good thing to rub the face with a soft, clean, dry towel two or three times a day. If, in addition, water is used in the morning and at night, the skin will be kept in a condition, somewhat and has other stats than if, as is often the case, soap and water are used three or four times a day.

Vanity of a Child Prisoner.

A boatman once carried one of the little English orphans on board a yacht. As he carefully set her down on the deck, he said: "There you are, my little lady!" The child, who had not resisted being carried, shook herself and said, "I'm not a little lady. I'm a prisoner!" Her royal mother, who stood by, said quietly: "You had better tell the kind sailor who carried you that you are not a little lady yet, but that you hope to be one some day."

Sea Water for Seasickness.

Sea water is recommended as a cure for seasickness. In addition to a light diet and a mild purge before starting on a voyage, and loose clothing and a recumbent position in the open air on board ship, the remedy never known to fail is a pint of sea water. This usually acts as an emetic, and often as a saline aperient, giving prompt relief from all unpleasant feelings.—St. Louis Republic.

It will be the gift of Rev. Dr. Hyslop to the high school on the occasion of the opening of the new building. A valuable and most appropriate gift.

—The Robert Burns birthday anniversary entertainment of the Charlevoix Scottish Club at Odd Fellows' Hall last Saturday evening was a success. Most of the invitations were accepted, and the attendance was good. The address of Dr. Hyslop is spoken of by all present as highly entertaining and instructive. The gathering was a red-letter event in the history of the Scottish Club.

—H. Lee Hiddings, who returned from southern Michigan brough with him a relic that is well worth preserving. It is the brass shell of a three inch rapid fire cartridge, that was used in the national salute at Manilla in honor of the memory of the late President McKinley. The shell was brought from the Philippines by Mr. Hiddings' sister, who is husband is an army surgeon there.

—There are days and nights when a little personal carelessness on your part may make a lot of trouble. Watch your stoves; be careful where you deposit your ashes; inspect your flues and stove-pipes; close up safely the door of your furnace. And, last but not least, keep insured, but don't let the consciousness of your financial security beget carelessness on your part and hazard the safety of your neighbor whose policy may have expired.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Kalkaska county has just secured a free delivery route. The route is 26 miles long with a population to be served of 2,000.

It is rumored that the Michigan Telephone company are contemplating a grand move into Leelanau county in the spring, by extending their system throughout the county.

Lieutenant Governor J. Wright Giddings, of Chicago, who for the years been closely allied with the politics of Michigan, has decided that he is in the west. He has returns from his present lecture tour in the east he will move to Tucson, Arizona.

By the sale of Manistique & Northern railroad last week, and the building of the Traverse City, Leelanau & Manistique line, it is believed that the Pennsylvania system, through its subsidiary Chicago & Indiana, is preparing to enter the lumber range. The importance of the deal lies not so much in the acquisition of the two finished lines as in the possibility and probability of further expansion north and west by the Pennsylvania.

Traverse City Record: The new Traverse City, Leelanau & Manistique railroad, between this point and Northport, which was to connect by surface with the Manistique at Northwestern, may be lost through the demands of a few farmers between Omena and Northport. The property rights were practically assured from Traverse City to Suttons's Bay, but the present demands for right of way are declared too exorbitant by the owners of the road, who at present have an arrangement with the Ann Arbor ferries to carry their freight.

Petoskey Record: Captain Albert E. McCabe, accompanied by his wife, arrived in Petoskey over the G. R. & I. Tuesday afternoon. A number of friends and relatives met them at the depot and extended to the captain a welcoming hand. Life in the Philippines most Lake agree admirably with the captain as he looks as hale and strong as when he left two and one-half years ago. Mrs. McCabe met him in Chicago. He will remain in Petoskey for some time, before returning, and Petoskey people will undoubtedly have several opportunities to hear Captain McCabe tell of his life and experiences in the Philippines.

Traverse City Record: The supervisors at Alpena have devised a plan to bring over 1000 railroad projects down to Louisiana. The Alpena & Western and the Alpena, Gaylord & Western have been scrugging for the government on securing rights of way out of Alpena for the purpose of establishing a line from there across the state to Omena forty, by way of this city. The board of supervisors at a recent meeting put up a cash bonus of $500 to be paid "when the first company starts laying 25 miles of track." Now both companies are struggling for the bonus and it seems a matter of conjecture as to which will win out. Although it is said that the G. & W. has the "best show up to this time.

Boyne Citizen: William T. Adelle, a former well known Grand Rapids wealthy lumberman, died Jan. 20th at his home in Kansas City of a hard disease. Mr. Adelle moved to Emporia, Kan., about 20 years ago, where he lived until last summer, when he moved to Kansas City. In speaking of Mr. Adelle death the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette says: "He was a member of the city council between 1884 and 1890 and was acting mayor for a year of the time. In 1892 he was elected mayor again. Many of Boyne's older residents will remember Mr. Adelle as a prominent figure in lumbermen life, before he left for the west. At one time he carried on an extensive lumbering business at Big Springs, owning and operating a logging railroad from Boyne Falls to that village, the road bed of which is easily discernable in a number of places on the route even at this late day.

Petoskey Record: The First Nation of Black Indians in that they had the most peculiar case of currency mutilation brought to their attention Tuesday, that they differ ever had during their twenty years of banking experience. The circumstances are as follows. A gentleman from one of the country had a small pouch of tobacco and also a ten dollar bill. Being very desirous of taking good care of his money he thought to insure its safety he would place the bill in with his tobacco, which he did. Later it occurred to him to take a "chew" which he did without noticing particularly what he was taking. He took the bag and duly deposited the quid by the road side. After a while the gentleman began to wonder if he was every wise and naturally opened the pouch, and much to his surprise found no bill. He at once turned back to the spot where he had experimented and picked up his "quid" finding it not tobacco but his ten dollar bill. The number had not been destroyed and Cashier Curtis is confident that the department will redeem the same.

Commenting on the revelation at Ann Arbor tending to disprove the claim of Frankfort to the burial place of Dr. Mac-pelle, the Manistee News dropped into the following Poetical strain: "Of course it is no denial that the good father's cranium was found at fair Frankfort-on-the-bytheers. His old story paid and cartridge belt were deposited either at Muskegon or White Lake while his favorite stein and match box found a resting place at Chicago. At Ludington he had golf sticks interred and only recently by putting from and a letter were discovered in a fair state of preservation. The initials J. M. have their identity. But when it came to a final resting place for himself Marquette wisely instituted a press censorship. He knew well that his grand shore world some time became the resort of thousands of summer tourists and he did not propose to have his bones dug up and used to decorate the musical pow-wows of the Marquette Indians on four sides, steam heat, gas plumbing, electric annunciation in every room, and the modern improvements in every hall.

Our old friend "Jim" Gunton, with whom the editor of this paper boarded at the Gunton House, in Traverse City in 1888, and his estimable wife, have been celebrating their golden wedding at their home near Traverse City. In Dr. M. Leach's "History of Grand Traverse Region" is the following account of how Jim secured his wife fifty years ago, taken from the Traverse City Herald: "It is not to be supposed that flirtation, love making, and courtship, generally understood to be normal accompaniments of secret society in fashionable life, flourished in a society where the men outnumbered the women three to one, and where nearly all of the ladies were married, yet the meetings at Austin's were not without their romance. Jim Gunton, as he was familiarly called, seems to have been the sly dog of the pack. Henrietta Baxter lived at Austin's. While his companions, deep in the attractions of encier or old sledge, were divinions of all things around them, Jim, fully awake to the main chance, found opportunities to whisper unreserved in the maiden's ear that which sentiment prompted the blush on her cheek. Ere the winter had passed, it became known that there was an engagement of marriage. "Henrietta was the daughter of a Mormon lady, who was a widow. Mrs. Baxter had been investigated for taking her fortunes with those of the Mormons of Beaver Island, only to find, in a short time, her property lost in the clutches of the authorities of the Mormon church. The situation on the island for young, unmarried women, not in full sympathy with the peculiar doctrines and practices taught by the leaders, was not desirable, was far from pleasant. Henrietta found employment in the family of James Gallie, a "Gentile" living on the island, between whom and the Mormons there existed a strong dislike, if not a bitter hatred. In common with some of the "Gentiles" with whom she was associated, she at length became alarmed for her personal safety, was for years, in their full extent, may not have been well-founded. Be that as it may, she resolved to take advantage of the first opportunity to escape. One day a vessel touched at the wharf. Though its destination was to her unknown, she determined if possible, to get on board, and take the chance of reaching a suitable haven. As the vessel was about to sail, she took to her hand a bundle of such personal effects as she could carry, and started on a run towards it. Before reaching it, however, she was intercepted by some of the Mormons, who took away her bundle, after which she was allowed to proceed, glad to get off the island, even with nothing but the garments upon her person. The next port at which the vessel touched was Old Mission, where the fugitive was set on shore. Living in the vicinity of Old Mission was a family of Mormons of the name of Dowsen, who, if was understood, had in some way incurred the displeasure of Strang and his associates, and had consequently been compelled to leave the island. In this family Henrietta found a home. From Dowsen' she came to the head of the bay, where she found employment in the family of Austin, who also was known as a Mormon exile. "As Henrietta regarded Austin's house as her home, it was arranged that the marriage rite should be performed there, Rev. M. Dougherty officiate. For a wedding party to get there in the depth of winter, was not easy. The best preparation Mr. Gunton could make, was to procure from the indians of Old Mission two roughly made pungs, each drawn by a diminutive, shaggy, half-starved Indian pony. One pung was intended for the conveyance of himself and bride; the other for Mr. and Mrs. Austin. It was the intention to return to Austin's at night, but the pungles were slow, the roads in places were almost impassable from drifted snow, and it proved to be all they would do to reach Bowers' in the course of the day, not to think of returning. In the meantime the "boys" at the head of the bay prepared to give the newly married couple a rousing charivari on the return, watching for them in vain till late into the night. When they finally did return, the next day, the tossing of a general invitation to a party at Austin's in the evening turned the contemplated charivari into a more civil and more enjoyable affair, the fun ever held in what is now Traverse City.

BE FAMOUS. COST 125.

The latest scheme to make the vanity of every day citizens a source of profit comes in the customary form of the longwindmed encyclopedia, but it sells its purpose with a refinement of the old time business like offer to publish the picture of the person approached in case so much money is paid. The present enterprise approaches the victim with the announcement that the issue of a new book of the lives of prominent Americans is contemplated and that his history is to be handed down to posterity in the volumes. He is requested to "cooperate to the extent of $25" in the undertaking. He has, of course, been selected for the volume on account of his importance and his picture is also to be put in when satisfactory evidence of his co-operation is forthcoming. Doubtless this scheme will be as successful, so far as the profits of its promoters are concerned, as the others that have preceded it. The circulars are as a rule, sent to people who have acquired a certain prominence of a kind that does not bring them into publicity but gives an opportunity to be put into books in which they have seen others with no more right, than themselves figure among the prominent men of the day—so they pay the sum asked for the privilege. As the members of men also to afford this luxury grows larger every day, the making of such books is likely to be a source of profit for some time to come.—New York Sun.

SKILLED IN MANY SPORTS.

Left-Handed People Are Proficient in Ways That Astonish Men.

It is not wise to poke fun at a left-handed boy or girl. They may develop qualities that are unknown to those who use their right hands predominantly, and who have fallen into the habit of using their left hands should the occasion arise. Left-handed people are strongly implanted instinct and use the right hand whether they will or no. Their training has only tended upon the child a useless amount of awkwardness and inconvenience, but may do him serious injury, even to depriving him of the power of speech. According to the latest scientific discoveries all manner of labors may be wrought with the brain by the adoption of this mistaken method of teaching left handed children to use the right-hand. This discovery is the result of experiments lately made at the University of Chicago, which has gone very deeply into the modern subject of "child study" then most of the universities. In is Professor Swenny, director of the department of pedagogical investigation, who has made the most faithful acquaintance with the left-handed. He discovered that by far the greater majority of these unfortunate upon left-handedness as a defect to be overcome at any cost, and that the child was in consequence forced into a most unnatural system of training. Professor Swenny, one of children entrained, says Professor Sandley, are defective in speech. By endeavoring to substitute the use of the right hand the stoke backward on the brain so disturbed and troubles producing far less natural, detriment the power of speech may also be impaired. It is also a matter of record that left-handed people are in general of much more perfect than those who are right-handed.—Chicago Chronicle.

Population Multiplying in Algeria.

The French census returns for Algeria reveal the fact that in less than fifty years the native population of the colony, Arab and Kabyle, has almost doubled itself, having risen from 2,307,000 in 1856 to 4,071,000 at the present time.

COSTLY CHURCH.

Cathedral of St. John the Divine, in New York City.

Every Sunday afternoon from four o'clock to five o'clock there is a service in the crypt of what when it is completed, will be the Cathedral of St. John the Divine of the Protestant Episcopal church, in the diocese of New York, of which Bishop Potter is the head. The dimensions of the cathedral are: Length, 476 feet, across the transept, one-fifty 200 feet. The front will be 200 feet in width and flanked by two giant towers. The corner stone of St. John's was laid on St. John's day in 1892. Now intending accepted specifications and contracts do one certainly can tell the final cost, but it is estimated that the sum necessary to finish the work will be from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000. Great as the work undoubtedly is, with its construction going forward daily, there is a general belief that the cathedral will be nearly completed three years hence. When, that time comes a park will have been finished, in the midst of which the structure will stand. This will be known as Cathedral Heights Park, and will be connected with Morningside Park, laid out in the days of William M. Tweed and which extends along the natural lines of the beautiful bluff, under the shadows of its site on which the cathedral will stand.—Leslie's Weekly.

Its Royal Highnesses.

There is probably no American railroad which can boast of so many stockholders of royal blood as can the Great Northern Railway. In the offices of this road are the signatures of the Duke of Connaught, the Prince of Wales, the Princess Beatrice, the Duke of Cambridge, the Duke of Fife, the Marquis of Lorne, and of most of the other Dukes and Princes, Marquises and Earls, Marquisses and Marchionesses in whose veins run the traditional blue blood. The duke one who looks on such a list read is the head of the family—King Edward VII. Another distinguished member is the Queen Dowager Marchioness Ely. Most of these people were induced to invest in Great Northern shares through the efforts of Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal.—New York Times.

Great Scenery in Arizona.

"Talking about scenery," says Chief Justice Fuller of the Supreme Court of Arizona, "take my word for it that the only scenery which comes up to local boosters is the dense canyon of Arizona. Mother Earth has nowhere else so abundantly cleft in twain her face and the quotation of this great chasm seems to produce a smile of joy. It is miles long, thousands of feet in depth and one mile deep."

Five Visits to Denmark.

King Edward is the first King of Great Britain to visit Denmark since the time when England, Denmark and Norway had the same ruler in the person of Canute (Knud), who died 1035, and is buried in Winchester. James VI of Scotland visited Denmark in 1590 but he was then not yet King of England.—New York Post.

It is only in the United States that cities allow themselves to be fined with huge poster frames covered with any sort of placards that will stick with paint pots can devise. Posters and public advertising signs in European cities are limited in size, restricted in location, and taxed in such a way as to produce a large municipal revenue.

The bedroom suite of a man in Iola, Kas., comprises just two articles, a quilt and an alarm clock. On a reasonably tight with his outfit under his arm, he went to the park, spread out his quilt on the grass, put the clock near the spot selected for his bed and deliberately went to sleep.

Unfortunately for Mr. Mugg.

Maude—I must say that for absolute real—not mythology—love is stealing the book Kate—Why, what makes you say that? Maude—Well, you remember Mr. Mugg, of Sigma? Mr. Fullbert, about three years ago? Kate—Yes. Maude—Well, he was so certainly almost plus cute, and he said I should be his valentine. Now I just have him in the street, walking with another girl cool actually. I believe that Mugg has gained twenty pounds in weight.—Pittsburg.

INSTRUMENT CORRECTS ERRORS OF THE COMPASS.

Professor Chesney's Novel Invention Will Enable Sailors to Indicate Earth's True Poles—His Scientific, Warm, Place Man Chesney, Is Accepted.

The problem of compass deviation, which has puzzled the world for 400 years, is at last solved by Professor Chesney, of Liverpool, England, in a manner so simple, so practical, so accurate, so inexpensive, so easily applied to the hull of any ship, that it will be the wonder of the world that it was not thought of before. When the compass was first used, it was found that it did not point due north and south, but that it deviated a little east or west of the true north and south. This deviation, or variation, as it is called, was found to be different in different parts of the world. It was found to be different in the Atlantic from what it was in the Pacific, and in the Atlantic it was found to be different in the north and south from what it was in the east and west. Thus, in 1800, the compass in the Atlantic ocean, off the coast of Boston, was found to point to the northwest of the true north, while in the Pacific, off the coast of New Holland, it was found to point to the northeast. In 1700 the variation was found to be 8 degrees to the northwest in the Atlantic, and 8 degrees to the northeast in the Pacific. In 1800 the variation had gained to 16 degrees in the Atlantic and 16 degrees in the Pacific. In 1900 the variation had gained to 24 degrees in the Atlantic and 24 degrees in the Pacific. The variation in the Atlantic has now passed the meridian of 24 degrees, and is now 24 degrees to the northwest. In the Pacific the variation is now 24 degrees to the northeast. In 1900 the variation was 24 degrees in the Atlantic and 24 degrees in the Pacific. In 1800 the variation was 16 degrees in the Atlantic and 16 degrees in the Pacific. In 1700 the variation was 8 degrees in the Atlantic and 8 degrees in the Pacific. In 1600 the variation was 0 degrees in the Atlantic and 0 degrees in the Pacific. In 1500 the variation was 8 degrees to the northeast in the Atlantic and 8 degrees to the northwest in the Pacific. In 1400 the variation was 16 degrees to the northeast in the Atlantic and 16 degrees to the northwest in the Pacific. In 1300 the variation was 24 degrees to the northeast in the Atlantic and 24 degrees to the northwest in the Pacific. In

NO CHICAGO DOCK.

Manitou Steamship People Stand a March on the Ills Boats.

A Chicago special says: When W. C. Farrington, the general manager of "Jim" Hill's steamboat interests on the lakes, decided to construct a line of steamers North West and North back in the Chicago-Buffalo trade, he found that the dock the Northern Steamship Co. had used last season had been absorbed by its competitor, the Manitou Steamship Co. A couple of hundred along the river front for another dock where the Hill steamers could land but not yet started in building a good place. It was taken for granted that old docks near Kinzie street would be used, but no such dock was available. That view was also shared by the Manitou people, who have always received the lions' share of Northland and North West business in their docks. In Petoskey and Manitou Island, the particular field of the steamer Manitou.

The season was scarcely closed last fall before the Manitou people had erected a dock on the Northern steamship dock's dock. It was put away in a vault, and development were awaited. When Mr. Farrington found that it would be possible to overhaul the North Land and North West, all of them now before and changing their construction generally, he is thought himself of the Chicago dock, and this he learned it had been intended to the river frontage of the Manitou company.

Owing to the length of the boats it will be somewhat difficult to find a place below Rush street bridge where they can land. During the attention of the new State street bridge it will not be practicable to go above that point in the river.

A Bit Of History.

The passing away of Lucia Wheeler Morrill, descendant of the "Captive of Vermont." The Harmonic Courier's Haverhill correspondent gives the following account of the ancestry of Mrs. Lucia Wheeler Morrill whose death occurred at Boston recently.

"Mrs. Lucia Morrill died at her home in No. 6 in this part of Boston of pneumonia, Nov. 5. Mrs. Morrill was the daughter of Sylvester and Parlemia Hill Wheeler, of Barnston, Quebec, and the great grand daughter of the beautiful and heroic Mrs. Hoseen in the early history of Vermont as the "Fair Captive."

During the French and Indian wa Mrs. Howe with her children was taken by the Indians at Bridgman's Fort in 1756. After a year of indescribable suffering among the Indians she was sold to a French officer, who later her release was secured by Col. Peter Schuyler and she returned to Vermont under the care of Governor Putnam.

Her daughter, one of the captive children, married Joseph Wheeler grandfather of Mrs. Morrill. He and his wife were among the first settlers of Royalton Vt.

At the burning of Royalton during the Revolutionary War, Mr Wheeler raised a house, and placing his wife and infant son, three days old, upon it, sent them before him through the forest to a neighboring town.

Upon their return they found that theirs was the only remaining house. They remained at Royalton until the close of the Revolution. Mr. Wheeler serving as minute man under Gen. Stark. Later the family settled in Barnston where Mrs. Sarah Wheeler Morrill was born July 10, 1826.

She leaves to mourn the loss of a kind wife and devoted mother, her husband who is quite aged, three sons, Eben, Albert and Herman—two daughters, Mrs. F. C. Mosher, of Island Pond, Vt, and Jeanette of Worcester, Mass., seven freshmen Norman, George, and Orange of Barnston, Sherman, of Clarion Mich., Joseph and Sylvester of Portsmouth, and one only sister, Mrs. C. N. Benlock, of Barnston.

We would add that Sherman Wheeler of Clarion has recently married Sarah Ste Marie. He has two sons also three sons Clarion, Sherman who married a daughter of John Cooper of Charlevoix and William O. who married a daughter of A. W. Chew of Hay Shore.

WILL QUIT SCHEMES.

Advertisers Learn That Newspapers are the Best Mediums.

It is a most gratifying fact that during the past year many of the most prominent advertisers of the country have come out openly and declared that they will no longer have anything to do with scheme advertising, but will hereafter set their publicity through columns of the newspapers and each of the trade publications as may particular fields.

They have discovered that fully nine-tenths of the advertising schemes are utterly worthless, while the remaining one-tenth is of questionable value in other words, for every dollar spent the advertiser gets action on but one hundred of the amount, and mighty little on that.

The reason why the newspapers are the best mediums for reaching the people and securing business is that they come more closer touch with the people than any other kind of publications. They cover the reader's eye 365 days in a year in the other once a week in the remote country districts.

When a man takes up a news paper to find out what was going on in the busy world about him, he does not avoid seeing the advertisements contained in it. Whether he needs any of the articles advertised or not he is impressed by advertisements and remember them.

As a rule the average person who reads a circular in his mail, either throws it up without reading it at all, or at best after a glance throws it in the waste basket. In other words, the circular sent in an unsealed envelope receives scant notice from all those who receive it.

To reach half a million people by circulars would require an expenditure of at least $5,000. To reach the same number through either of the above papers the cost would probably not exceed $100.

But I digress advertisers a long time to find out these facts, but they seem to have been "educated" now, which, on the way, is a most excellent thing for their individual pocket-books.—Fourth Estate.

SCHOOL CORNER COLUMN.

During the past week we drove 85 miles and visited four schools in Charlevoix county and one in Emmet county, just outside our border and composed of a good portion of Charlevoix territory. Some time during the past year in a conversation with the teacher, we called his attention to the fact that a great deal of teaching in arithmetic work was passed over by teachers, and in fact in some instances in making recitations, arithmetic was given a making of 80 or 90 and allowed to pass, when the work, though some error of the pupil, did not produce exact results. We argued that an error should not be marked, the pupil either had 100 or nothing. Mr. Correll, the teacher has been carrying the idea out in his school and asked us to visit him to see what he had done with his pupils along the line of accuracy. Beginning the 2nd month, he gave his pupils supplementary work at the recitation, either along the line of study or review work. The pupil did not know what was coming and took the problem from memory, the teacher reading it out loud. If the problem was solved and exact results obtained the mark was marked 1. If the result was inaccurate he was marked 0. At the end of the month he received his standing. Twenty recitations marked giving the pupil 100 for the month. The first month his classes ranged from 70 to 85. The second month went from 80 to 100. The third month the remarkable gain of 100 was made by each pupil, except who had 95. Some of the problems solved the last month included problems in discounts, partial payments, exchange etc. The results are very satisfactory to the teacher and his classes have learned the important lesson that inaccuracy in arithmetic does not mean anything.

We hope the same enthusiasm will prevail in every school room. It would not be long until a great change would take place in the mechanical method of reciting arithmetic in the pupil. We are glad to note that we have a goodly number of teachers in Charlevoix county who know how to teach arithmetic.

Ralph P. Vassaw in charge of the Walloon Lake school pitted his school against the Clarion school in charge of Mrs. Gertie Ross, assisted by Miss Fay Wilson, in a spelling match, a few nights since. Clarion took first prize. It has been the means of bringing the spelling book into use.

That Spring Wheat Flour Matter.

At the recent meeting of the State Millers' Association, held in Lansing, the question of the relative nutritive qualities of spring and winter wheat flour came up and was vigorously discussed in view of the fact that a paid lecturer in Farmers' Institutes has been recommending spring wheat as superior.

The statement was boldly made that repeated tests of the two kinds of flour in the same laboratories have failed to show any advantage in nutritive qualities on the spring wheat side. During the discussion two or three professors from the Agricultural College came into the meeting and being appealed to in the matter frankly admitted that in the most exhaustive tests the winter wheat has been found superior.

Some pretty hot shots was poured into the department, on account of this lecture of Michigan interests by paid employes of the college, and a committee was appointed to take the matter up in a way to set the case right.

WHY BABCOCK SHOULD GO SLOW.

Tests are the outgrowth of capital controlling the cheapest sources of methods of production. They are international and cosmopolitan. Many of them would favor free trade in their particular commodity as an effectual means of eliminating local competition. The sugar trust, for example, openly favors that policy. But the close is certainly not opportune for tinkering with the tariff. Never in a country is as prosperous as we are it is an admirable thing to let well enough alone. The introduction of a new tariff act with any substantial support would open up the whole tariff question. If the house, by the application of its stringent rules, could confine discussion to the items named in the bill nothing could prevent the senate from so amending the bill that the original author would not recognize that he had ever seen it, and then it would come back to the house. Meanwhile for months the business of the country would be unsettled. Production would fall off in the commodities threatened, and importations and revenue would fall off with them. And we cannot spare revenue. Democratic tariffs, such as Congressman Babcock proposes will not support the government. They never did. For the six years preceding the enactment of the Wilson tariff our average receipts from customs was $212,152,755. For the four succeeding years the average was $153,156,256, a falling off of $57,015,524 per annum. It was that falling off which almost wrecked the finances of the country, and it was the accompanying destruction of domestic industries which brought rain to private homes. The country wants no repetition of that or any threat of it. A honest money should crowd the Sin. If I, I. Thy to let tariff tinkering alone—San Francisco Chronicle.

THE TRUST REMEDY.

WORTHLESSNESS OF THE BABCOCK PLAN CLEARLY DEMONSTRATED.

Removal of the Tariff Duties Would In No Case Injure the Big Combinations, While It Would Be a Positive Advantage to Some of Them.

In this matter of removing the tariff on trust goods in order to kill the trust or curb its power, which is the cream of the free trader, there are several points to be considered. First, would such a move do the work which they assert it will? Manifestly the great combination of capital never loses for protection than does the small concern because it is better able to handle itself. It can take every possible advantage of the trade and meet its opponent where the small concern cannot. Its product is immense, its capital unlimited, and it can sell at a loss in any given territory for a time until it has driven its competitor from the field. But the question of the free trader then the removal of the tariff will kill the trust presents a somewhat queer condition of affairs, in the face of the fact that some of our greatest trusts are thriving upon articles upon which no duty is levied. Take, for instance, the Standard Oil Trust, one of the most complete organized aggregations of capital in the world. And there is the Anthracite Coal Trust, which lays its heavy hand upon every householder who uses that article for fuel. But at once we hear the statement that the president of these two great trusts are of a peculiar nature, and that similar articles from other lands cannot be shipped to an advantage, and so on; the same easily be said on by some great combinations. There is sufficient an element of truth in this. But turn to another, and equally as great and successful a trust, which receives as much or greater attention than the two above named—the Sugar Trust. Here we find an situation working for the same thing the free-traders are, the removal of the duty duties. The free trader says remove the duty and the power of the great trust is curbed. The Sugar Trust wants the duty removed so that the millions which now go into the federal treasury may be turned in its own coffers, and the competition which stands in its way swept out of existence. Free trade by the water trust would give it vastly more power, because of the sugar interests it controls outside of the United States which would simply cause a transfer of the duty upon the material from the federal treasury to the pocket of the trust. It would leave millions saved in raw sugars, with which to build the best sugar interests at home, cheaper than might come in the future for a period, while it was undermining the competitor, let that would be all.

Then take the Steel Trust. It is very questionable whether the sweeping way of the duties on steel products as Congressman Babcock says'd like to do would curb the power of that great corporation to any extent, that it might seriously interfere with the prosperity of the many smaller concerns scattered through the country. According to figures given by those who favor Babcock's measure, the steel combine is now receiving some $4 per ton on steel rails over and above the margin given by the addition of the tariff, and what they claim is a fair profit added besides. Foreign competition is not taking advantage of this wide margin. Is there any proof that it would sink the tariff removed? The fact is that steps are being taken to organize foreign steel producers. They like the big problem just as well as the Americans, and their greed is just as virulent. The foreigner will take advantage of the enormous demand just as quickly as the domestic producer. He is just as susceptible to the advantages of combining mutual interests as is the American.

Is it not somewhat incongruous, this plea for "tariff reasons" to curb the power of the trusts, when at the same time one of the most powerful of trusts is working for free trade in the product it handles not for its own benefit but for the benefit of the public, but simply for its own financial gain? —Monitor (Mich.) The early evening suburban trains coming into the Broad street station and the Reading terminal in Philadelphia contain a good sprinkling these days of young men and women carrying bags filled with gold coin. The boys who lurk about the exits in the hope of picking up nickels and dimes for carrying small baggage let these people severely alone. They know it's no use. A young man angered from one of the trains at the German Reading yesterday afternoon, says the Philadelphia Record, accompanied by two young women. He was consequently loaded down with three of the unwieldy bags—his own and those of his two companions. As he passed through the gates he was approached by a boy who cried: "Carry yer baggage, mister?" The young man kindly waved him aside. Another boy, more worldly wise, took the first boy to task: "When yer in de business as long as me," he said, you'll know better dan to waste yer breat' on dem guys. Dem golf players, dem is. Dey wouldn't let yer carry dese stuff for nothin'. Dey t'ink it's smart to be seen carryin' dem clubs around de streets, but dey don't carry 'em around what don't play golf at all. NO CHICAGO DOCK.

Manitou Steamship People Steer a March on the Big Boats.

A Chicago special says: When W. C. Farrington, the general manager of Alfred Hill's steamboat interests on the lakes, decided to continue the big steamers North West and North land in the Chicago-Buffalo trade, he found that the dock the Northern Steamship Co. had used last season had been absorbed by its competitor, the Manitou Steamship Co. A careful look along the river front for another dock where the Hill steamers could land has not yet resulted in finding a good place. It was taken for granted that old docks near Hoyt's soap factory before Rush street bridge were available. This view was also shared by the Manitou people, who have always resented the inroads of North Land and North West have made in their business to Petoskey and Mackinaw Island, the particular field of the steamer Manitou.

The season was scarcely closed but fell before the Manitou people had secured a lease on the Northern Steamship Co's dock. It was put away in a vault, and developments were awaited. Mr. Farrington found that it would be possible to overhaul the North Land and North West, gift lug the new boilers and changing their construction generally, he believed the biggest of the Chicago docks, and then he learned it had been condemned to the river frontage of the Manitou company.

Owing to the length of the boats, it will be somewhat difficult to find a place below Rush street bridge, where they can land. During the construction of the two state street bridge it will not be practicable to go above that point in the river.

A Bit Of History.

The passing away of Lucia Wheeler Merrill, descendant of the "Fair Captive of Vermont," The Herald Courier's Haverhill correspondent gives the following account of the ancestry of Mrs. Lucia Wheeler Merrill whose death occurred at Boston recently:

Mrs. Lucia Merrill died at her home in No. 6 in this part of Boston of pneumonia, Nov. 5. Mrs. Merrill was the daughter of Sylvester and Dorlenne Hill Wheeler, of Barnston Quebec, and the great-grand-daughter of the beautiful and heroic Mrs. Howe known in the early history of Vermont as the "Fair Captive."

During the French and Indian wa Mrs. Howe with her children was taken by the Indians at Bridgman's Fort in 1756. After a year of indescribable suffering among the Indians she was sold to a French officer, and later her release was secured by Col. Peter Schuyler and she returned to Vermont under the care of Gen. Israel Putnam.

Her daughter, one of the captive children, married Joseph Wheeler, grandfather of Mrs. Merrill. He and his wife were among the first settlers of Royalton Vt.

At the burning of Royalton during the Revolutionary War, Mr. Wheeler retired a horse, and placing his wife and infant son, three days old, upon it, sent them before him through the forest to a neighboring town.

Upon their return they found that theirs was the only remaining house. They remained at Royalton until the close of the Revolution. Mr. Wheeler serving as minute man under Gen. Stark. Later the family settled in Barnston where Mrs. Sarah Wheeler Merrill was born July 10, 1826.

She leaves to mourn the loss of a kind wife and devoted mother, her husband who is quite aged, three sons, Elon, Albert and Herman—two daughters, Mrs. F. C. Mosher, of Hyde Park, Vt., and Jeanette of Worcester, Mass., seven brothers, Noson, George, and Orange of Barnston, Sherman, of Charlton Mich., Jonas and Sylvester of Tewksbury, and one only sister, Mrs. C. N. Jones of Barnston.

We would add that Sherman Wheeler of Charlton has recently moved to Saint Ste Marie. He has two sons who reside near Clarion. Sherman C. who married a daughter of John Cooper of Charlevoix and William O. who married a daughter of A. W. Chew of Bay Shore.

WILL QUIT SCHEMES.

Advertisers Learn That Newspapers are the Best Mediums.

It is a most gratifying fact that during the past year many of the most prominent advertisers of the country have come out openly and declared that they will no longer have anything to do with scheme advertising, but will hereafter set their publicity through columns of the newspapers and such of the trade publications as cover particular fields.

They have discovered that fully nine-tenths of the advertising schemes are utterly worthless, while the remaining one-tenth is of questionable value. In other words, for every dollar spent the advertisers gets action on but one-tenth of the amount, and mighty little on that.

The reason why the newspapers are the best mediums for reaching the people and securing business is that they come into closer touch with the public than any other kind of publications. They greet the reader's eye 365 days in a year in the cities once a week in the remote country district.

When a man takes up a newspaper to find out what was going on in the busy world about him, he cannot avoid seeing the advertisements contained in it. Whether he needs any of the articles advertised or not he is impressed by announcements and remembers them.

As a rule, the average person who receives a circular in his mail either reads it up without reading or opens it and after a glance throws it in the wastebasket. In other words, the circular sent in an unsealed envelope receives scant notice from the one who receives it.

To reach half a million people by circulars would require an expenditure of at least $5,000. To reach the same number through either of the above papers it would probably not exceed $100.

It has taken advertisers a long time to find out these facts, but they seem to have them "checked" now, which, by the way, is a most excellent thing for their individual pocket-books.

SCHOOL CORNER COLUMN.

During the past week we drove 85 miles and visited four schools in Charlevoix county and one in Emmet county, just outside our border and composed of a good portion of Charlevoix territory. Some time during the past year in a conversation with the teacher, we called his attention to the fact that a great deal of incorrectness in arithmetic work was passed over by teachers and in fact in some instances in making recitations, nothing was given a making of 80 or 90 and allowed to pass, when the work, though some error of the pupil, did not produce exact results. We argued that an error should not be marked by the pupil other but 100 or nothing. Mr. Correll, the teacher has been carrying the idea out in his school and asked us to visit him to see what he had done with his pupils along the line of accuracy. Beginning the first month, he gave his pupils supplementary work at the recitation, either along the line of study or review work. The pupil did not know what was coming and took the problem from memory, the teacher reading it but once. If the problem was solved and exact results obtained the pupil was marked 5. If the result was inaccurate he was marked 0. At the end of the month he received his total standing. Twenty recitations marked 5 giving the pupil 100 for the month. The first month his classes ranged from 70 to 85. The second month went from 90 to 100. The third month the remarkable gain of 101 was made by each pupil except who had 95. Some of the problems solved the last month included problems in discount, partial payments, exchange etc. The results are very satisfactory to the teacher and his classes have learned the important lesson that inaccuracy in arithmetic does not mean anything.

We hope the same enthusiasm will prevail in every school room. It would not be long until a great change would take place in the mechanical method of presenting arithmetic to the pupil. We are glad to note that we have a good number of teachers in Charlevoix county who know how to teach arithmetic.

Ralph V. Varnum in charge of the Walloon Lake school pitted his school against the Clarion school in charge of Mrs. Gertie Hose, assisted by Miss Fay Wilson, in a spelling match, a few nights since. Clarion took first prize. It has been the means of bringing the spelling book into use.

That Spring Wheat Flour Matter.

At the recent meeting of the State Millers' Association, held in Lansing, the question of the relative nutritive values of spring and winter wheat flour came up and was vigorously discussed in view of the fact that a paid instructor in Farmers' Institutes has been recommending spring wheat as superior.

The statement was boldly made that repeated tests of the two kinds of flour in the same laboratories have failed to show any advantage in nutritive qualities in the spring wheat side. During the discussion two or three professors from the Agricultural College came into the meeting and being appealed to by the matter frankly admitted that in the most exhaustive tests the winter wheat has been found superior.

Some pretty hot shots was poured into the department, on account of this betrayal of Michigan interests by paid employes of the College, and a committee was appointed to take the matter up in a way to set the case right.

WHY BABCOCK SHOULD GO SLOW.

Trusts are the outgrowth of capital controlling the cheapest sources of methods of production. They are international and cosmopolitan. Many of them would favor free trade in their particular commodity as an effectual means of eliminating local competition. The sugar trust, for example, openly favors that policy. But the time is certainly not opportune for tinkering with the tariff. When a country is as prosperous as we are it is an admirable thing to let well enough alone. The introduction of a new tariff act with any substantial support would open up the whole tariff question. If the house, by the application of its arbitrary rules could confine discussion to the items named in the bill nothing could prevent the senate from so amending the bill that the original author would not recognize that he had ever seen it, and then it would come back to the house. Meanwhile for months the business of the country would be unsettled. Production would fall off in the commodities threatened, and importations and revenue would fall off with them. And we cannot spare revenue. Democratic tariffs, such as Congressman Babcock proposes will not support the government. They never did. For the six years preceding the enactment of the Wilson tariff our average receipts from customs were $212,153,789. For the four succeeding years the average was $155,128,556, a falling off of $57,025,524 per annum. It was that falling off which almost wrecked the finances of the country, and it was the accompanying destruction of domestic industries which brought ruin to private homes. The country wants no repetition of that or any threat of it. A burnt country should dread the fire. It is a time to let tariff tinkering alone.—San Francisco Chronicle.

In the United States there were January 1, 1900, 12,500,000 horses and 2,000,000 mules and asses.

THE TRUST REMEDY.

WORTHLESSNESS OF THE BABCOCK PLAN CLEARLY DEMONSTRATED.

Removal of the Tariff Duties Would in No Case Injure the Big Combinations While It Would Be a Positive Advantage to Some of Them.

In this matter of removing the tariff on trust goods in order to kill the trust or curb its power, which is the dream of the free trader, there are several points to be considered. First, would such a move do the work which they assert it will? Manifestly the great combinations of capital have been for protection than does the small concern because it is better able to handle itself. It can take every possible advantage of the trade and meet its opponent where the small concern cannot. Its product is immense, its capital unlimited, and it can sell at a loss in any given territory for a time until it has driven its competitor from the field. But the assertion of the free trader that the removal of the tariff will kill the trust presents a somewhat queer condition of affairs, in the face of the fact that some of our greatest trusts are thriving upon articles upon which no duty is levied. Take, for instance, the Standard Oil Trust, one of the most complete organized aggregations of capital in the world. And then there is the Anthracite Coal Trust which lays its heavy hand upon every householder who uses that article for fuel. But at once we hear the statement that the products of these two great trusts are of a peculiar nature, and that similar articles from other lands cannot be shipped to us advantage, and so can the more easily be shut out by these great combinations. There is doubtless an element of truth in this. But turn to another, and equally as great and successful a trust, which receives as much or greater attention than the two above named—the Sugar Trust. Here we find an institution working for the same thing the free traders are, the removal of the sugar duties. The free trader says remove the duty and the power of the great trust is curbed. The Sugar Trust wants the duty removed so that the millions which now go into the federal treasury may be turned to its own coffers, and the competition which stands in its way swept out of existence. Free trade for the sugar trust would give it vastly more power, because of the sugar interests it controls outside of the United States which would simply cause a transfer of the duty upon its material from the federal treasury to the pocket of the trust. It would mean millions saved in raw sugars, with which to fight the beet sugar interests at home. Cheaper sugar might come to the public for a period, while it was undermining its competitor, but that would be all.

Then take the Steel Trust. It is very questionable whether the sweeping away of the duties on steel products as Congressman Babcock would like to do would curb the power of that great corporation to any extent. But it might seriously interfere with the prosperity of the many smaller concerns scattered through the country. According to figures given by those who favor Babcock's measure, the steel combine is now receiving some $4 per ton on steel rails over and above the margin given by the addition of the tariff, and what they claim is a fair profit added besides. Foreign competition is not taking advantage of this wide margin. Is there any proof that it would with the tariff removed? The fact is that steps are being taken to organize foreign steel producers. They like the big products just as well as the Americans, and their greed is just as extensive. The foreigner will take advantage of the enormous demand just as quickly as the domestic producer. He is just as susceptible to the advantages of combining material interests as is the American.

Is it not somewhat incongruous, this plea for tariff removal, to curb the power of the trusts, when at the same time one of the most powerful of trusts is working for free trade in the product it handles, not for its own undoing, nor for the benefit of the public, but simply for its own financial gain? —Manitou (Minn.) Free Press.

—Cut settlers agree on the proposition that log wagons have gone out of fashion and be substituted by sleds. Last year on the 20th of January there was not a log wagon in the city. This year we can rate the show window's on the principal side of the street five to 1 in favor of sleds. The load outlasted a combination of sleds and wagons. Sleds are necessary in order to haul the logs, with ease, and wagons are necessary to haul the lumber. It is unnecessary to state that some of this plus cut will leave Charlevoix. It will be cut and kiln-dried for factory purposes.

It is intimated, however, that a portion of the dock will be fitted up for a coaling station for the tugs.

—Yesterday, the State Banking Commission established the Boyne City State Bank, at Boyne City. The officers of the new bank are: President, Wm. Wise; Vice President, W. S. Shaw; Cashier, W. E. Mathews. Geo. Platten and Thos. White are members of the board of directors. The bank has good quarters in the new White block. As a Charlevoix county institution we wish it well.

—Some time ago we called attention to the fact that if people would walk down the middle of the street instead of walking under the magnolia, or shade trees, and watching the horses and automobiles at your feet, you would discover that you have a very pretty street to look at. Well, we have taken a trip up north since then, and we find that the middle of the street is not the only place to look for pretty scenery. We found a very pretty picture on the north side of Lake Street, which we think, if you will take the time to look at it, you will be pleased to see. It is a view of the lake, looking down the alley between Bridge and Mitchell streets. The foreground is the back yard of Mrs. Wilson's residence, and the background is the lake, looking down the alley. The picture represents a fine sheet of water, with a few boats in it, and some pretty trees in the foreground. It is a very pretty picture, and we think it will be a good advertisement for the city if some one should frame it and place it in a window where it can be seen by the public. We wish it well.

—The Sentinel office is down in the dumps, looking under the magnolia, for a Charlevoix county fair. We wish it well.

I.—Advertisers.

The SENTINEL is compelled to make the following rule: All copy for changes of advertisement must be in by noon of Tuesday. The necessity for this rule will suggest itself to advertisers. When the copy for several changes all comes in the day before going to press, it is like several loads of hay coming to the barn all over, and but one man to "show it."

NO CHICAGO DOCKS.

Mission Steamship People Signal a March on the Big Banks.

A Chicago special says: When W. C. Farrington, the general manager of June Bird's combined interests on the lakes, decides to continue the big steamers North West and North Land in the Chicago-Buffalo trade, he found that the dock the Northern Steamship Co. had used last season had been allocated to its competitor, the Mission Steamship Co. A case fell home along the river road to an office when a man the Bird steamers could land had not yet rented in such a convenient place. It was taken for granted that dock now was occupied by Mission people. Mr. Wheeler was amenable. The town was alive filled by the Bird-Gray people, who have now amalgamated the mossy North Land and North West boats, now in their fourteen to Buffalo. The Mission dock, the partially held of the planner Manitou.

The boats was scarcely closed last fall when the Mission people had secured a lease on the Northern Steamship Co.'s dock. It was put away, in a hurry, and development of the place started. When Mr. Farrington found that it would be possible to overhaul the North Land and North West gets ready to new bridges, and changing that condition is generally, he he thought transfer of the Chicago dock and then he started it had been arranged to the river frontage of the Manitou company.

On going to the length of the legal, it will be somewhat difficult to find a place below Rush street bridge where they can dock. Immediately upon the end of the new State street bridge, it will not be practicable to go above that point in the river.

A Bit of History.

The passing away of Laura Wheeler Morrill, descendant of the pioneer Ezekiel Worcester, "The Revolutionary Pensioner." The Barnstable Company Baccinal correspondent gives the following account of the ancestry: Mrs. Laura Wheeler Morrill whose death occurred at Benton recently.

Mrs. Laura Morrill died at her home in No. 6 in this park of Benton of pneumonia, Nov. 5. Mrs. Morrill was the daughter of Sylvester and Eulinena Hill Wheeler, of Harwich Center, and the great grand daughter of the beautiful and heroic Lydia Hall, known in the early history of Vermont as the "Fair Captive."

During the French and Indian war Mrs. Howe with her children was taken by the Indians at Bridgman, Port in 1756. After a year of unspeakable suffering among the Indians she was sold to a French officer, who later her release was secured by Col. Peter Schuyler and she returned to Vermont under the care of Gen. Israel Putnam.

Her daughter, one of the captive children, married Joseph Wheeler, grandfather of Mrs. Morrill. He and his wife were among the first settlers of Royalton, Vt.

At the burning of Royalton during the Revolutionary War, Mr. Wheeler secured a horse and placing his wife and infant son, three days old, upon it, sent them safely home through the forest to a neighboring town.

Upon their return they found that there was the only remaining house. They remained in Royalton until the close of the Revolution. Mr. Wheeler serving as minute man under Gen. Stark. Later the family settled in Harwich where Mrs. Sarah Wheeler Morrill was born July 10, 1826.

She leaves to mourn the loss of a kind wife and devoted mother, her husband who is quite aged, three sons, Rev. Alfred and Herman, two daughters, Mrs. F. C. Mosher, of Bellport, L. I., and Jennette of Worcester, Mass., seven brothers, Norman, George, and Orange of Barnstable, Sherman, of Clarion Mich., Josiah and Sylvester of Fairmont, and one only sister, Mrs. C. N. Rentek, of Harwich.

We would add that Sherman Wheeler of Clarion has recently married a widow Mr. Morrill. He has two sons who reside near Clarion, Sherman O. who married a daughter of John Cooper of Charlevoix and William O. who married a daughter of A. W. Chew of Bay Shore.

WILL QUIT SCHEMES.

Advertisers Learn That Newspapers are the Best Mediums.

It is a most gratifying fact that during the past year many of the most prominent advertisers of the country have come out openly and declared that they will no longer have anything to do with exclusive advertising, but will hereafter set their publicity through columns of the newspapers and such of the trade publications as cover particular fields.

They have discovered that fully nine-tenths of the advertising schemes are utterly worthless, while the remaining one-tenth is of questionable value. In other words, for every dollar spent the advertisers get action on but one-tenth of the amount, and mighty little on that.

The reason why the newspapers are the best medium for reaching the people and securing business is that they come into closer touch with the public than any other kind of publications do, given the same space. Say, once a year in the cities once a week in the remote country districts.

When a man takes up a news paper to find out what was going on in the busy world about him, he enters a good among the advertisements contained in it. Whether he needs them or not, he reads the advertisements, as he does the reading matter, very carefully. Every word in them is read by thousands and hundreds of times.

As a rule, the average person will receive a circular in his mail either unopened or without reading it—open it and give it a glance then set in the wastebasket. In other words, the circular and in an unusually crowded receives scant notice from the one who received it.

To each full a million people 13 circulars would require an expenditure of at least $5,000. To reach the same number by newspaper space at the above figures the cost would probably not exceed $1,000.

It has taken advertisers a long time to find out these facts, but they seem to have them "located" now, which is the way, is a most excellent thing for the individual, particularly the Estate.

SCHOOL COMMUNITY COLUMN.

During the past week we drove 85 miles and visited four schools in Charlevoix county and one in Emmet county, just outside our border and composed of a good portion of Charlevoix territory. Some time during the last year in a conversation with a teacher, we called his attention to the fact that a great deal of money is spent in attractive work was passed over by teachers, and in fact in some instances in making revelations, with more was given a making of notes (?) and allowed to pass, when the work, though some error of the pupil, displayed a good exercise. We thought but an error should not be marked, the pupil either had 100 or nothing. Mr. Carroll, the teacher has been trying the idea out in his school and asked us to visit him to see what he had done with his pupils along the line if necessary. Beginning the first month, he gave his pupils supplementary work at the recitation, either doing the line of study or reason work. The pupil did not know what was coming and took the problem unawares, the teacher reading it out once. If the problem was solved and exact results obtained the pupil was marked 5. If the result was inaccurate he was marked 4. At the end of the month he received no total standing. Twenty-eight pupils marked 5 getting the pupil 100 for the month. The first month his classes ranged from 70 to 85. The second month from 70 to 100. The third month the remarkable gain of 100 was made by each pupil except one who had 95. Some of the problems solved the last month included problems in discount, partial payments, exchange etc. The results are very satisfactory to the teacher, and his classes have learned the important lesson that in accuracy in arithmetic does not mean cycling.

We hope the same enthusiasm will overall in every school room. It would not be long until a great change would take place in the mechanical method of presenting arithmetic in the pupil. We are glad to note that we have a goodly number of teachers in Charlevoix county who know how to teach arithmetic.

Ralph P. Vanzaw in charge of the Walloon Lake school pitted his school against the Clarion school in charge of Mrs. Gertie Ross, assisted by Miss Fay Wilcox, in a spelling match, a few days since. Clarion took the prize. It has been the means of bringing the spelling book into use.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor.

The Sunday school is increasing in attendance and the interest is good.

The Men's Auxiliary is arranging for the annual banquet which will be given soon.

Sunday next being the 23rd Sunday of the Christian Endeavor movement, the Christian Endeavor Society will observe the occasion with fitting services that evening. Besides the regular meeting, the Endeavors will take part in the church service by songs, recitations and short addresses. All Endeavors past and present are invited to take part in the service also celebrate the coming of age of this young mother of many young people's christian organizations. "For Christ and the Church." The choir will render a special anthem and the young quartette will sing one of their selections at the evening service. The subject of morning sermon will be "Large Sources."

The choir has received a good assortment of new music, including anthems, Chants and responses. Also several pieces for the ladies quartette.

That Spring Wheat Flour Matter.

At the annual meeting of the state Millers' Association, held in Lansing, the question of the relative nutritive qualities of spring and winter wheat came up and was vigorously discussed in view of the fact that a bulletin issued by the Agricultural College has been recommending spring wheat as superior.

The statement was boldly made that repeated tests of the two kinds of flour in the same laboratories have failed to show any advantage in nutritive qualities on the spring wheat side. During the discussion two or three professors from the Agricultural College came into the meeting and being appealed to in the matter frankly admitted that in the most exhaustive tests 100 winter wheat has been found superior.

Some pretty hot shots was passed between the professors, on account of this betrayal of Michigan interests by paid employees of the College, and a committee was appointed to take the matter up in a way to set the case right.

WHY BARCOCK SHOULD GO SLOW.

Times are the outgrowth of capital controlling the cheapest sources of production. They are purely national and cosmopolitan. Many of them would grow free trade in their particular commodity as an effectual means of eliminating local competition. The sugar trust, for example, openly favors that policy. But the time is certainly not opportune for tinkering with the tariff. When a country is as prosperous as we are it is an admirable thing to let well enough alone. The introduction of a new tariff act with any substantial support would open up the whole tariff question. If the house, by the application of its stringent rules, could confine discussion to the items named in the bill nothing could prevent the senate from so amending the bill that the original author would not recognize that he had ever seen it, and then it would come back to the house. Meanwhile for months the business of the country would be unsettled. Production would fall off in the commodities threatened, and importations and revenue would fall off with them. And we cannot spare revenue. Immediate tariffs, such as Congressman Babcock proposes will not support the government. They never did. For the six years preceding the enactment of the Wilson tariff our average receipts from customs were $212,115,756. For the four succeeding years the average was $155,138,256, falling off of $57,015,521 per annum. It was that falling off which almost wrecked the finances of the country, and it was the accompanying destruction of domestic industries which brought vim to private homes. The country wants no repetition of that or any threat of it. A burnt country should dread the fire. It is a time to let tariff tinkering alone.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Equine Statistics.

There are in the whole world about 72,000,000 horses and 11,000,000 mules and asses. They are distributed as follows: Europe, 39,400,000 horses, 3,200,000 mules, etc.; America, 22,500,000 horses, 4,700,000 mules, etc.; Asia, 9,100,000 horses, 1,300,000 mules, etc.; Africa, 1,000,000 horses, 1,900,000 mules, etc.; Australia, 2,500,000 horses. In the United States there were January 1, 1900, 13,500,000 horses and 2,000,000 mules and asses.

THE TRUST REMEDY.

WORTHLESSNESS OF THE BABCOCK PLAN CLEARLY DEMONSTRATED.

Removal of the Tariff Duties Would in No Case Injure the Big Combinations, While It Would Be a Positive Advantage to Some of Them.

In this matter of removing the tariff on trust goods in order to kill the trust or curb its power, which is the dream of the free traders, there are several points to be considered. First, would such a move do the work which they assert it will? Manifestly the great combination of capital cares less for protection than does the small concern because it is better able to handle itself. It can take every possible advantage of the trade and meet its opponent where the small concern cannot. Its product is immense, its capital unlimited, and it can sell at a loss in any given territory for a time until it has driven its competitor from the field. But the operation of the free traders that the removal of the tariff will kill the trust presents a somewhat queer condition of affairs, in the face of the fact that some of our greatest trusts are thriving upon articles upon which no duty is levied. Take, for instance, the Standard Oil Trust, one of the most complete organized aggregations of capital in the world. And there there is the Anthracite Coal Trust, which pays its heavy hand upon every householder who uses that article for fuel, that at once we hear the statement that the products of these two great trusts are of a peculiar nature, and that similar articles from other lands cannot be shipped on an advantage, and so can the more easily be shut out by these great combinations. There is doubtless an element of truth in this. But turn to another and young as great and successful a trust, which receives as much or greater attention than the two above named—the Sugar Trust. There we find an institution working for the same thing the free traders are, the removal of the tariff and the duty removed so that the millions which now go into the federal treasury may be turned to its own coffers, and the competition which exists in the way every sort of existence. Free trade to the sugar trust would give it what it never enjoyed, because of the sugar interests it controls outside of the United States which would mainly serve a transfer of the duty upon its material from the federal treasury to the pocket of the trust. It would mean millions saved in raw sugars, with which to fight the best sugar interests at home. Cheaper sugar might mean a new trade for a period, while it was undermining the competitor, but this would be all.

Then take the steel Trust. It is very questionable whether the sweeping away of the duties on steel products as Congressman Babcock would like to do would curb the power of that great corporation to any extent. But it might seriously interfere with the prosperity of the many smaller concerns scattered through the country. According to figures given by those who favor Babcock's scheme the steel combine is now receiving some 24 per ton on steel rails over and above the margin given by the addition of the tariff and what they claim is a fair profit added besides. Foreign competition is not taking advantage of this wide margin, to have any proof that it would with the tariff removed? The fact is that steps are being taken to organize foreign steel producers. They like the big profits just as well as the Americans, and their greed is just as extensive. The foreigner will take advantage of the enormous demand just as quickly as the domestic producer. He is just as susceptible to the advantages of combining natural interests as is the American.

Is it not somewhat incongruous, this plea for tariff removal, to curb the power of the trusts, when at the same time one of the most powerful of trusts is working for free trade in its product it handles, and for its own, no doubt, not for the benefit of the public, but simply for its own financial gain? —Stockton (Minn.) Free Press.

PROUD OF THEIR BURDENS.

Street Urchins Get No Chance to Carry Bags for Cutters.

The early morning suburban trains coming into the Broad street station and the Reading terminal in Philadelphia contain a good sprinkling these days of young men and women carrying bags filled with golf clubs. The boys who lack about the exits in the hope of picking up nickels and dimes for carrying small baggage for them, people scarcely alone. They know it as one. A young man alighted from one of the trains at the terminal yesterday afternoon, says the Philadelphia Record, accompanied by two young women. He was comparatively loaded down with three or the inevitably bags—his own and those of his two companions. As he passed through the gates he was approached by a boy, who cried: "Carry yer baggage, mister?" The young man simply waved his satchel. Another boy, more worldly wise, took the first hint to mind: "When yer in the business as long as me," he said, you'll know better than to waste yer breath on dem guys. Dem golf players, dem is, they wouldn't let yer carry dem stuff for not." They think it's smart to be seen carryin' dem clubs around de streets, some of 'em carries em around wot don't play golf at all. Don't yer never tackle none of dem people. There's nuthin' in it."

Aged Emperor Enjoys Hunting.

Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, although the second oldest monarch of Europe, is still much devoted to hunting and a climb of two or three hours in his Tyrolean costume is not too much for him. Between the years of 1856 and 1897 he killed in his various domains 1,243 deer, 1,750 chamois and much other game. He is particularly fond of chamois, where he spends the night in a cabin and early in the morning the game is driven in his direction.

—J. Wright Giddings, ex-Lieut. Governor of Michigan, and one of the most accomplished lecturers on civics, will appear in our city, in course Tuesday evening, Feb. 11th. We can personally guarantee a most enjoyable and instructive talk.

—The Bonnet Co. entertainment Feb. 5th is an "event" in the high school course. But the character of the concert is of a high order, and should be liberally patronized by friends of the high school, which means all of us.

—Commander P. M. Symonds, U. S. Navy, Lighthouse Inspector, was here Friday on business connected with the supply station. Commander Symonds, who will be a captain in September, was in command of the U. S. S. Marietta, which came across Cape Horn in company with the Oregon during the war of the Spanish war.

—A. L. Coulter and two assistants are canvassing the school districts of this county in the interest of the National Educational Association's language charts. These charts are approved by the best educational authorities of the country, and have the endorsement of School Commissioner Chew, of this county.

—Our settlers agree on the proposition that our winters have grown more moderate in temperature, with less snow, in the years of their knowledge of Northern Michigan. Many winters, in the early days, we could come into the village on the frozen surface side of the street, for the accumulation of snow from the sidewalks, and the morning mercury time went to 25 below zero. These days if we get ten below zero, we shudder it pretty cold, and thus far this winter four below is the coldest on record, while the snow is not over two feet deep on the level.

—The Charlevoix County Masonic Benefit Association was practically organized at the office of W. H. McCurdy last evening. The election of officers will occur at the same place next Wednesday evening, and the details of further organizing arranged. The Association will be in no sense an insurance company per se, and the assessment tax is to be fixed at a benefit of $100. In other words, it is designed to assure to the widow the funeral expenses of the deceased member. Of course, the membership will be confined to Masons, and it is hoped that other lodges in the county will join in the movement. The project is one that appeals to not only the fraternal sentiment of every Mason, but also to his good business sense. The membership fee will be $1.00, and death assessments $1.00, with probably annual dues of 50 cents. We hope that the fraternity will respond next Wednesday evening.

—Chapel & Morse have a new ad. in this paper.

—Grace Graves went to Grand Rapids yesterday to visit friends.

—Atty. W. Kane went to Grand Rapids yesterday on legal business.

—Fletcher, the druggist, advertises a big line of valentines this week.

—Mrs. N. Amstie is visiting her son Ward at East Jordan for two or three weeks.

—Hon. J. Wright Giddings Tuesday evening, for the benefit of the high school. Don't forget it.

—Mrs. Maud Hayden, of North Branch, and Mrs. Cramer, of Gaylord, were here last week Tuesday holding a Lighthone Sisters school of instruction.

—About everybody knows that Mr. Pete Campbell holds unlimited master's papers, but very few know that he holds chief engineer's papers for vessels of 750 tons. Capt. Pete knows both ends of a steamboat.

—The K. O. T. M. will give a grand sick benefit ball Feb. 21st, at Lewis opera house. The object of this event appeals to the benevolence of every citizen. If you don't dance buy a ticket anyway.

—It was announced that the railroad company was to rebuild the transfer dock this winter, and, indeed, a force of men began the work last week, but were almost immediately pulled off for some reason to your despatch unknown and unobtainable. It is rested, however, that a portion of the dock will be fitted up for a coaling station for the tugs.

—Yesterday the State Banking Commissioner established the Boyne City State Bank, at Boyne City. The officers of the new bank are: President, Wm. H. Whiley; Vice President, W. S. Shaw; Cashier, W. H. Mathews. O. Van Platten and Thos. White are on the board of directors. The bank has good quarters in the new White block. As in Charlevoix county institution we wish it well.

—Now Charlevoix folks do down in Florida, sitting under the magnolia or catching sea bass, and watching the swell of the gulf stream at your feet, we will not consider that you have all the pleasure of life. We who remain at home love to hear the wintry blasts from old Lake Michigan; we love to watch the goose feathers fill the air and pile up on the sidewalk; we love the crisp, inviting zero air; we love to hear the sleigh bells and the merry howl of the coasters; we love the exhilarating exercise that accompanies a snow-shovel. Oh, yes, we love all these. (In your aisles.) But we have this to consider, in favor of this winter, at least, the big end of it began about February 1st. We are "on on the peak of Mount Pisgah, looking down the other side."

—The logging operations of the Charlevoix Lumber Co. this winter include what is a surprise, even to a lumberman. The company owns a tract of pine up in Marion which has been preserved for many years as good timber in the bank. This winter they are making a hole in it, and some very fine boards come down about every day. One load Saturday contained an "event." It was announced by foro-runners, and when it reached Bridge street about five o'clock a crowd was waiting for it much as the small boy greets a circus. It was composed of ten logs, with Ed. O'Neil as driver. The load contained 1,187 feet of absolutely faultless lumber. It is economically to state that every board in this load will have Charlevoix. It will be cut and kiln-dried for factory purposes.

CHAPTER I.

Just after the war between the North and South a man came to the Far West. In border States went to the far West. In the majority of cases this migration was due to the party between which he was born in Virginia, Kentucky or Tennessee, up families and arrayed neighbors against each other. In his case it spoiled left equally in one, and as he was a boy, a child, he chose the gentler side, they like the passive Christians, themselves and children.

At that time the Indians on the great prairies extending from Buffalo Junction on the Platte River, on the west to Pittsburg, and the Smoky Hill and the Arkansas River on the south, were more browning and dangerous than that of the red cavalry. The Indians fought each other to bitter, to possessions that each claimed to be theirs.

Village Hogtown was, in 1867, fifty miles from the nearest town, and was a place with a small, rudely, tannery and a few other industries, which had been instituted by an enterprising position during four years of a war, which seemed a useless bludgeon, and he was a young man of 24, had lost his right arm amputated on the side of the South. In his home, the 24 years of age, was a man of 50, suffering from each other on the terrible field of battle, and the Christian spirit of the Christian, remain "the spirit of Christ." The Christian, remain "the spirit of Christ." The Christian, remain "the spirit of Christ." The

CHAPTER I.

I set after the war between the North and South, I was a young man, and I lived under Stokes' flag out to the far West. In the majority of scuffles in the West I was due to the party referenced, which in Virginia, Kentucky and Missouri, formed a familiar and natural neighbors against Lincoln's party, which was produced by equally strong, and, as has proved by time, strong, and, as has been said, strong. I was there amongst fortuitous, and I was there amongst fortunate, and I was there amongst delicious.

But I was in Latin America, from the Gulf of Mexico, and the Pacific ports, and the Gulf of Mexico, and the Pacific ports, since Gregory Cortez, the Mexican, made a dagger of the Stars and Stripes and carried it down into the Gulf of Mexico, and the Pacific ports, and the Gulf of Mexico, and the Pacific ports, and the Gulf of Mexico, and the Pacific ports, and Yellow Journalism and the Governorship.

We note that the Detroit Tribune and its partner in iniquitous Scripps yellow journalism, the Evening News, indorsing much valuable space to the discussion of the republican side of the gubernatorial campaign, with the plainly discernable purpose of poisoning the minds of the people against Governor Bliss.

It is equally noticeable that there is a marked complacity, in the said valuable space, of the absence of any reference, whatever, to Democratic candidatures or ambitions; probably from the fact that the combination cannot find a sinn in the twin pendulums who can measure up to the Bliss standard, even allowing the Scripps estimate, for argument's sake, to be correct.

But Colonel Bliss will be the unanimous nominee of his party, and he will succeed himself in the gubernatorial chair. There are no good reasons why this should not be so. In 1901, Mr. Stearns, if he behaves himself in 1902, will succeed Gov. Bliss; if Mr Stearns does not conduct himself as he should in 1902, his name will be Dennis in 1904!

The administration of Gov. Bliss has not been brilliant, but it has been respectable—a condition of affairs that did not obtain for some time previous to 1900. Col Bliss' grammar can be criticed; so could Zach Chandler's. Senator Chandler in a speech eulogizing Lincoln said: "He sees his duty and he does it!" Col Bliss never did worse than this, yet the name of Chandler stands out brightly in the galaxy of Michigan's great names.

Gov. Bliss has done nothing to bring reproach to himself, his party or his state. He has made some enemies, and we love him for it. They are of the sort who always stand on the brink of record making to become political pyrolenes if their man is not appointed deputy oil inspector or deputy game warden!

Of this class the Scripps yellow sheets always stand ready to become the official organs.

Broke Loose Again.

Mr. Tillman, the belligerent southern Senator, who has acquired the sobriquet of "Pitchfork Tillman," broke loose in the senate again the other day, and delivered himself thus:

"I could hardly forgive you if you made such a subject the minds and hearts of the enlisted majority—the noncurrentists, yellow-dog-Democratic, boot-lick-loving majority, as such a subject is to be consonant with the miserable, canting, damnable attitude which that party is now assuming."

Ex congressman Towne, the Minnesota populist, expressed the same sentiments when he was in the senate and supporting Bryan. He made a big bunch of money in oil, or something of the sort, he is now on Wall street and is "conservatilized money grabber," and has nothing to say.

If Tillman should strike oil, make a bunch on wheat, or be offered the presidency of a bank at $25,000 a year he would join Towne, and cant and damn, with the best of them.

It Grinds Fine Grinds.

The fame of Hoskins's Arnica Salve, as the best in the world, extends round the earth. It's the one perfect healer of cuts, burns, bruises, sores, scalds boils, ulcers, felons, aches, pains and all skin eruptions. Only infallible pile cure. 25c a box at F. G. Hines & Co's.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Amos C. Stuffer of Bay Shore goes soon to Okalia, Fla., where he will be in the employ of the Colburn lumber Co. for an indefinite period.

The Frankfort Hotel Company to day decided to name the new hotel at Frankfort, Michigan, the Royal Frontenac.

Boyne Citizen: Hon. J. M. Harris is making a tour of the northern half of the lower peninsula in the interest of the Michigan Maple Co., his route extending from Traverse City to Bay City.

At a conference between Grand & Gillett of Traverse City and Mr Cunningham Boyne City, held here last week, arrangements were completed for the continuance of the firm of Grand, Gillett & Cunningham, lumber inspectors, as it was before Mr. Cunningham sold his interest about a year ago. The latter will look after the firm's interest at this point, the former gentlemen operating at Traverse City.—Boyne Citizen.

The following from the Petoskey Record relates to a concern in which Harrison Bedford, of Charlevoix, is a partner: Will Stevens of the Litchfield, Stevens Lumber Company informs us that they had a very peculiar accident occur on their logging road at Cross Village last week. The best team the company owns while drawing logs, in some way got out of the main road and slid over a big bluff, the engine being nearly a one-hundred-pitch. The horses in the fall struck a tree and stopped. The wonderful part of the accident was the fact that no particular damage was done. The team was injured but little and the driver saved his life by jumping. Mr. Stevens states that they are doing a thriving business in Cross Village with every prospect of a bright future.

The large number of snow owls captured in northern Michigan this winter is exciting a good deal of curiosity among taxidermists and students of natural history. Snow owls are quite common in Michigan, but just why they should leave their northern homes to come down into this part of the country is a mystery. The sports have not told us that they are kill many quail and frighted many others away.

It is announced that the organization for a new company to establish a paper pulp mill at Cheboygan is almost completed. The new mill will probably be largest in Michigan, as it is to be twice the size of the one now running at Alpena. The capital stock is to be $750,000. It is stated that there is water power on the site of the proposed mill sufficient to run the plant, while the neighborhood of Cheboygan abounds in spruce, hemlock jack pine, and other wood used in making pulp.

A Frankfort dispatch says: One of the largest local lumber corporations, began Tuesday morning the operation of their newly built floating plant, with only a single exception, this is the largest floating mill in Michigan, eight machines and 30 men being employed in the manufacture of this product. It is the intention of the concern to also break into the manufacture of clothespins, broomhandles and other wooden ware specialties, within the next three months. The new buildings and warehouse cover about one block of ground.

Central Lake Torch: George Fisk is the champion fisherman this winter. A few days ago he went out on the lake from Fisk's camp to try to get a little trash food for breakfast for himself and his brother Jim who is keeping camp with him. He soon returned with a huge muskalunge weighing 55½ lbs. Fortunately George had two spears with him and after striking the fellow with a small spear just back of the head he let the big one into the broad lock just abaft the small spear, and then after a good ruff struggle succeeded in landing his prize on the ice.

Petoskey Democrat: Mr. Jay Jones, the popular clerk at the Central Drug Store, was recently presented with a very valuable dog by admiring charbroils friends. Not being prepared to bring him to Petoskey at once Mr. Jones paid the dog's board in Charlevoix for a few days. After the canine arrived in Petoskey Mr. Jones presented him to Mr. Walter Kephart, imagine the surprise of Messrs. Jones and Kephart when Sheriff Jones came in the other day to serve an attachment for $12 equal board bill for the dog, brought by Charlevoix parties. At first the two gentlemen were inclined to take the matter quite seriously—we are told—but they soon tumbled and saw the question is "only the joke on?"

East Jordan Enterprise: A majority of the farmers of this township and vicinity have decided to raise sugar beets for the Charlevoix Beet Sugar Co. They have concluded that it is better to raise the amount of $300,000 per year, being the sum of money necessarily paid out by the company for the requisite number of tons sufficient to run the factory one year. Those who have had experience in raising beets claim there is a net profit of $5 to 50 dollars per acre. F. L. Lanway is agent.——F. H. Barney made us a short call on Friday last, having come up from Chicago for a short visit with his family. He has been at work for some months at Marinette, Wis., but returns to Chicago to take a position with the Carbort Horse Nail Co. The Detroit & Charlevoix Railroad Co., are building a transfer dock down the lake that is the best. It is about 625 feet in length and 28 ft. wide on the top, and carries two tracks. It is built very solidly and is of plan throughout. It will cost upward of $5,000.

CANAL BOATS IN MANILA.

Some are Being Sent from This Country to the Philippines.

The easy-going native bargemen of Manila Bay will experience something like surprise when, a few months hence, they see towed into their harbor nineteen Erie-canal boats, sent by the Philippine Transportation company. For several years these barges have been in use on the Erie canal. Now they have been towed over to the Morgan iron works, at Ninth street and the East river, where they are being carefully pulled apart preparatory to shipping them to the Orient. Piers by piece the decks are being pulled up, beams and timbers separated and piled on the pier, ready to be sawed away into the holds of huge steamers, there to be put together again in Hong Kong. From there they will be towed across the China sea, down the Lzon coast and into Manila harbor. Large steamers are not approachable within two miles of the shore in Manila bay. For this reason it has always been necessary to send out cascos, or lighters, in which the cargoes are transported up the Pasig river to the city. These cascos are small and clumsy, and are owned by individual natives, who will not work until their supply of cash runs short. The Erie canal boats are capable of holding five or six times more cargo than any casco, and the nineteen together could put all the cascos of Manila harbor into their holds.—New York Tribune.

The Coins Carrying Trade.

Lately the Tribune made the admirable suggestion that any republican let the dollar between this country and Cuba should be confined to such coins as Cuban money carried under either the American or the Cuban flag. Cuban coins are not legal in the United States. The proposition immediately meets with opposition from the Museum line, whose ships are greatly Norwegian, and whose engineers are Germans. The prompt opposition of this line seems to have behind the Tribune's proposition and this foreign line, that neither employs American officers nor repairs or outfits its ships in American ports, seem to be dictating the maritime policy of this country.

The Truly Unfortunate.

The free trade Boston Herald refers to the "unfortunate" Wilson tariff bill. The "fortune" is somewhat astray in the appreciation of its epithets. It was not the Wilson bill which was "unfortunate." That term is more appropriate by far to apply to the American people, who were made the victims of the felonious assaults as well as of the utter ignorance of American industrial conditions, which found expression in that disaster bringing law.

A New Stock Exchange.

"There's another advance in Manhattan Elevated," said the broker pointing to what looks like a railroad trestle built in what will be the trading floor of the new stock exchange building. "I see it is going up again." After some further talk that night we called a lunch from the customer who had traded on margins and "tips" before, explanations followed. The ceiling of the trading room of the new exchange will be ninety feet above the floor, so as to give ample room for the accommodation of kids and office-boys, perhaps a wide flight for brokers who occasionally happen to hit that ceiling. A big temporary scaffold has been built into this space, which rests on wheels and moves from east to west. The top is of tiles, rails and a trestle, which moves from south to the forbidding north. From this traveler workers will raise the steel beams which support the high ceiling. But this elevated road, which moves at will in any one of four directions, is nothing new to the broker and his wife and children.—New York Sun.

INDIANS WILL FIGHT.

WISH TO RETAIN THEIR LONG HAIR AND PAINT.

Tough Headache Is Looked For if Order of Interior Department Is to Be Enforced Prisoner Killed in Jail Delivery at Fort Smith, Ark.

The Indians encamped at La Chance, Wis., claim that the law of one of the Northwestern tribes calls upon bloods revolt. Unfortunately, the recent order of the Interior Department to cut off long hair and discourage a certain war paint and gaudy ornaments. They say at the Black River Falls agency there is the strongest sort of feeling against the order. They allege the government's object is to emasculate with what they consider sacred rights and abolish anything to wear "paleface" clothing, they want to be allowed to wear red paint, feather bonnets and long hair. They want to hold death dances and have their medicine men and wampums. In Dakota and Montana, Cheyne Black Tails are the Blackfeet and Sioux tribes will shed blood more quickly than the Northern tribes, if Hiawatha's words on the subject.

To Advertisers.

The SENTINEL is compelled to make the following rule: All copy for changes of advertisement must be in by noon of Tuesday. The necessity for this rule will suggest itself to advertisers. When the copy for several changes all come in the day before going to press, it is like several loads of hay coming to the barn at once, and but one man to "stow" it.

MARINE NOTES.

The tug Avery was sold by U. S. Marshall Tuesday. Harry Nicholls getting her for $255.

The name of the Hart line steamer City of Louisville has been changed to Harlet A. Hart. The steamer is to be given a steam steerer.

The Licensed Tugmen's Protective Association, at their recent Cleveland convention, took action that will very materially affect tug interests here. It has heretofore been the custom of the big lumber steamers to tow their two and three consorts in and out. Hereafter these captains must take tugs for the bargain, in and out, or they will not handled at the other end of the route by association tugs. When it is considered that three quarters of the lumber cargoes from this port are in this class of vessels, it means a good deal to local tugs.

The tug Corkum went to Beaver Island last week the day of our going to press, and we were unable to say thus what success attended the trip. The Corkum got within 100 feet of McCann's dock, and Capt. E. D. Campbell went ashore and around to the harbor with the mail. The people of St. James were very glad to see Capt. Pete. It was the latest steamboat trip ever made to the Island.

A Ludington special of the 4th says: Since the 10,000 bushels of barley and a few tons of ice have been removed from the hold of the steamer Pere Marquette 3, the boat is straightening up and looks less like a wreck than she did a week ago. Her bulkheads were fixed today for the first time, and the leaks have been stopped to such an extent that one pump working half speed keeps the water down. Aside from a few open seams there appears to be very little damage to the hull. Five Marquette officials expect to have the boat running again by spring. As soon as weather will permit the steamer will be taken to the Milwaukee dry dock.

It is given out from Chicago that Capt. A. H. Wolvin will early the coming season carry out his scheme for the establishment of a line of steamers between that port and Quebec, to connect at the latter port with transatlantic steamship lines. It is claimed that negotiations have been completed with the American Shipbuilding company for the construction of a fleet sufficient in number to accommodate the traffic anticipated for the new through route. The first of these steamers is expected to be ready for the service. The new line will be operated by the St. Lawrence and Great Lakes Transportation company, incorporated in West Virginia, of which A. H. Wolvin of Duluth is president. Its capital stock is $500,000. Funds for steamers and docks at Quebec are said to be in hand. There will be no trouble over the question of insurance rates, which led to the abandonment of the Connecticut Trans-Atlantic line last season. In the division of the traffic, lake rates will prevail to Quebec, and ocean rates from there to European points. The steamers to be constructed will be of the same size and general arrangement as the Connecticut fleet which made a failure of the attempt to established direct traffic between Chicago and European ports.

It is reported at Chicago that the entry by which the Manitou Steamship company secured a lease of the dock at which the big passenger steamers Northern West and North Land make their landings last season and thus practically shut them out of available dockroom in the harbor of the Windy City will result in the charter of the line passenger steamer Manitou by the Northern Steamship company to run either between Duluth and Mackinac island of Duluth and Buffalo. The report is strengthened by the fact that Vice President Farrington of the Northern Steamship company has recently been in Chicago in consultation with the officials of the company operating the Manitou. Aside from this it is known that the Northern Steamship company people have for some time past been casting about for a suitable steamer to take the place of the Manitou on the Duluth route, and the Manitou would fill the bill exactly. It is believed that in the event of the charter of the Manitou she will be run between Duluth and Buffalo, as the Duluth-Mackinac island service last season was by no means satisfactory. Should the deal be made, as seems now altogether probable, the old landing at Chicago will again be secured for the North West and North Land.

SCHOOL NOTES.

On Friday, Feb. 7th, under the auspices of the Senior class, will be given the entertainment by the Russell Concert Company. The program will consist of numbers by Mr. Francis Russell, impersonator and vocalist and Miss Myra Russell pianist and vocalist. This is not a number on the regular lecture course. The entertainment will be the first given in the new building. Admission twenty-five cents; children under twelve fifteen cents.

Miss Miller has resumed her place as teacher in the Lincoln school, Miss Maunier, who has been supplying for Miss Miller, is now relieving some of the other teachers.

The fourth number on the course will be a lecture by J. Wright Giddings, the date is February 11.

The Extemporaneous class has been reorganized and has four new members, the other sixteen having been members of the old class. They have decided to have a course, the judges being members. The defeated side will furnish refreshments for the class.

Miss Jessie Brown and Mr. Nathan Smith have left school.—Miss Zeisler, Mr. Wilkins, and Thad Smith are absent on account of sickness, and Hazen Whitford and Rena O'Neill have just returned after a short absence.

Miss Josephine Smith is visiting friends in Harbor Springs.

The second program of the Lyceum contest will be given by the Sophomores Wednesday evening, Feb. 5th.

The following subjects were taken up at the beginning of the new semester: Book-keeping, Civil and Algebra by the ninth grade; Civil Government by the tenth grade; Geometry and Homer's Iliad by the eleventh grade; Milton's "Paradise Lost" by the twelfth grade.—and Commercial Correspondence.

Mr. Hastings started off so suddenly on his subject that everybody gave a little start and their were tickled to death with the rest of the lecture.—Canton, (O.) News Democrat.

Norwood Notes.

Fred Meech of Charlevoix was here for 3 or 4 days visit last week.

Mrs. Owens and Mrs. Perkins have gone on a visit to their husbands, who are working at Sturgeon Bay.

G. Y. Nash left on Tuesday to Pasadena, Cal., to visit his children Ned and Clara, and will be gone until the first of April.

The month of January, 1902 just closed, was the finest on record, good sleighing all the time without much snow or storm, and just cold enough to keep the snow from melting. I has not been below zero here this winter.

Crystal Lake in Benzie county is one of the most beautiful spots in the northern part of the state and efforts are being made developed it in a manner to make it the Saratoga of Michigan. Representative Burns has interested New York capitalists and a large amount of money will be spent in beautifying the place the coming summer. Lots are being picked up fast and they are already commanding high prices. It is proposed to connect the resort with the outside world by an electric line.

Traverse City special 4th: Henry D. Campbell, aged 71, a prominent business man, dropped dead this morning while cleaning the walk in front of his residence. He came here in 1852 on the first steam craft to enter Grand Traverse Bay. He distributed the first mail in Traverse City and built what is now known as the Park House hotel; established the water works and the first electric light plant here. He had just finished a $25,000 brick building. Mr. Campbell was an active politician, a republican and figured prominently in local affairs. He was four years county treasurer and 12 years judge of probate. At the time of his death he was alderman of his ward, and last evening took an active part in the council meeting. He had just planned to take an extended trip with his wife.

SCHOOL COMM'R COLUMN.

A. A. CRISS, OSCODA.

The latest report of the superintendent of Michigan shows a school population (from five years of age to twenty) of 721,668 and a total enrollment of 504,985 in the public schools, the estimated number enrolled in private and parochial schools being 52,230. There are 711 graded school districts, 6,542 ungraded districts, 119 township unit districts. The average term of the graded schools last year was 8.54 months; of the ungraded 8.19 months. The aggregate salaries of teachers in the public schools was $1,553,150 of which $1,385,076 were paid teachers in ungraded school districts (only 202,752 children of school age in those districts)

The average monthly wages of male teachers was $46.73 of female teachers $35.71. The amount paid for building and repairs last year was $1,127,-325; the amount paid for all purposes $9,257,621.

The total value of public school property was $19,255,173 (more than the total value of public school property in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Arkansas)

Libraries were reported in 426 townships, and 3,658 districts, with a total of nearly 1,000,000 volumes. Nearly 2000 teachers are graduates of Normal schools The attendance at the teachers' institutes for the year was 7,045.

A southern paper says: "Compare these figures with the figures for these items in your own state, think what the difference means for your state and for Michigan, and then resolve that this difference shall never be so large again. In making the comparison, remember that the area of Michigan is almost that of Georgia, the population about twenty per cent more, and the natural resources less than those of any of the southern states. Of course the wealth producing power of the people is greater than in any of the southern states, as it always will be until we spend more money for more and better education for all our people."

VISITING FRIENDLY "UNCLE"

Pawning Our Jewels in a Social Function in Vienna.

In New York when people have occasion to visit their "uncle" at the sign of the three gilded balls they generally do so in a furtive sort of way, and do not make their visit a topic of conversation among their fashionable friends afterward. But they do their things better in Vienna. In the Austrian capital they have a new and handsomely appointed pawnshop, where there are cozy tea rooms, reading rooms and every inducement to spend an hour or so in chatting, reading or walking about the spacious premises. It has become a fashionable resort, and quite the "swagger" thing to do is to meet one's friends there of a morning. The street before the pawnshop is filled at the fashionable hour with handsome carriages with armorial bearings emblazoned on their panels, and society meets in the luxurious rooms to talk and gossip. Inquiries are made as to what articles have been pawned, the amount received, and there is a great comparing of notes on the subject of pawnshops generally. It has been a well-known fact for years that a large part of Vienna society frequently had to resort to "uncle," but it is only recently that the practice has become a social function and the pawnshop a fashionable resort. Once the carnival is over, there family jewels, which it would be lacking in piety to wear through the Lenten season, are packed up and taken to "uncle's" and when summer is come there go all the costly furs, which are well taken care of during the warm months. With the money borrowed on them their owners are able to augment their hilarity during the "season of come and wine," leaving the reckoning day to take care of itself.—New York Press.

SPARE THAT TREE!

Woodman, spare that tree;
Touch not a single bough.
In youth it sheltered me,
And I'll Protect it now.

Arguments Based on Misinformation.

Some wonderful information finds its way into "low tariff" newspapers. The Boston Transcript, for instance, which apparently wants reciprocity with Canada, after reflecting on the motives of Senator Burrows and others who do not agree with it, prints this surprising information, which was sent to it all the way from Washington: "In the Dingley tariff the duty on logs was made double that carried by the McKinley tariff of only ten years ago." Logs were on the free list in the McKinley tariff and are also on the free list in the Dingley tariff. If the advocates of reciprocity with Canada were to base their arguments on facts instead of such wonderful misinformation as that about the duty on logs they would cease to talk on the subject.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Extremes in Nature.

A French scientist calls public attention to certain phenomena which show that the truism "extremes meet" applies with as much force to physical nature as to human character. He relates that in the mountains near Pontgibaud, in Auvergne, there is forested in the hottest part of every summer a most singular ice deposit which has no existence in winter. The local peasantry have never evinced any acute interest in the scientific explanation of this remarkable natural peculiarity, but they have always, from the first, turned it to practical advantage by using the spot for cool storage for the cheese which is the staple product of the district.

Tolstoi and the Women.

Mme. Sofia Feoklistof of Moscow delivered a message from Count Leo Tolstoi to rich women at a meeting of the Arche Club, Tolstoi, Mme. Feoklistof says, does not believe that modern women are Christians. "Why do you not stay at home and take care of your children?" he asked her. "The women of to-day are no longer good Christians. They wish to be seen and heard too much in public. They do not depend on their husbands. They read books which they understand not." The members of the Arche Club chose to consider Tolstoi's remarks humorous. They were not willing to admit that there was anything unchristian about women's clubs.—Chicago Tribune.

Reverse of Free-Trade.

McKinley's own words, in his Buffalo speech, defined reciprocity as "sensible trade arrangements which will not imperil our home production." This is the reverse of free trade.—Benton (Ill.) Republican.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor.

Large congregation Sunday morning and the service was much enjoyed. The evening service in honor of the 21st birthday of the Christian Endeavor Society was well attended.

On Sunday morning the pastor will preach on the subject of Human Temples. In the evening a special Lincoln Memorial Service will be held under the auspices of the Sunday School, some of the scholars taking part.

The ladies are arranging to hold their "Sample Sale" soon and have secured the Chaloupka building for that purpose.

The choir is preparing to give a Sacred Concert on Sunday evening, shortly—also they expect soon to furnish an evening's entertainment in the shape of a Bobby Burns Concert, which will accompany and be accompanied by notes on some of the best poems and songs of the Scottish Bard. The whole being illustrated with about 40 beautiful "Photographic Transparencies."

THINKING ABOUT OTHERS.

It Is a Foolish Habit and Worse Valueless Time.

Do not waste what is left of life in regarding other men, except when lead upon some manifest path. Why make opportunities for action by thus persistently regarding what so-and-so is doing and why, what he is saying or thinking or planning, or anything else that does and distracts you from allegiance to your inner self? In the sequence of your regards, shun wayward, random thoughts and, above all, meddling and idealizing. Instil yourself habitually to such regards that if suddenly asked, "What is in your thoughts now?" you could tell at once the cautious and unhesitating truth—a clean, plain proof that all your thoughts were pure and in charity, such as befits a moral being, who eschews voluptuous or even self-indulgent fancies, or jealousy of any kind, or malice and suspicion, or any other mood which you would blush to own. A man so minded and committed finally to the pursuit of virtue, is indeed a priest and minister of gods, true to that inward and implanted power, which keeps a man unsoiled by pleasure, invulnerable by pain, free from all touch of arrogance, innocent of all baseness, a combatant to the greatest of all combats, which is the mastery of passion, steeped in justice to the core, and with his whole heart welcoming all that befalls him as his portion; seldom and only in view of some large, unselfish gain, does he regard what other conduct is his sole concern, and he realizes without fail the web of his own destiny.—Marcus Aurelius.

One-Sided Reciprocity.

To illustrate one-sided reciprocity, let us name Canada. Canada wants free access to our markets, and in return will cheerfully give us free access to hers. Canada has 5,000,000 people; the United States has 80,000,000. Her people can buy of us, provided Great Britain does not demand her trade, one-sixteenth of what we would naturally buy of her. Though her soil is American and she contains a great deal of the North American continent, the wares she has for sale are 20 to 50 per cent lower than in the United States. She would, of course, fill our markets with cheap goods to compete with better paid American labor. Such a condition would undoubtedly help Canadian immigration, of which there has been practically none for half a century. It is better for the United States to attract this immigration to her own states and territories, where, despite the fact that we have sixteen times as many people as Canada on a smaller area, there is yet room, with only a small fraction of our natural, great resources developed.—Allentown (Pa.) News.

—Editor George W. Minchin of the Court Review has been O. K'd by Representative Darragh for a second term as postmaster of the town. Although all the postmasters in his district were the selections of former Representative Mesick, and most of his work in renominate Mesick two years ago and against Darragh, who beat him in the convention, they are getting second second terms. Darragh is recommending these for reappointment. He says they would have been ingrates if they hadn't stood by Mesick, the man who gave them their jobs, but he distrusts none of them now.

—A Southern paper says: Frank N. Clark, of Northville, for the past 32 years connected with fish culture under the United States fish commission, is in line for a promotion. W. DeC. Ravenel, chief of the United States fish culture division of the fish commission, is soon to resign, and Mr. Clark is a candidate for the position. The fact that Michigan has the greatest fresh water coast mileage in the United States, and fishing is the great industry, prompts Clark's friends to urge his appointment, and they say there certainly is no better qualified man in the United States. His whole life, practically, has been devoted to the study of fish culture.

To Advertisers.

THE SENTINEL is compelled to make the following rule: All copy for changes of advertisement must be in by 12 M. of Tuesday. The necessity for this rule will suggest itself to all users. When the copy for several changes all come in the day before it goes to press, it is the several hands of every opening to the barn at once, and but one man to "stow" it.

MARINE NOTES.

The tug Avery was sold by U. S. Marshall Tuesday, Harry Nicholls getting her for $305.

The name of the Hart line steamer City of Louisville has been changed to Hartet A. Hart. The steamer is to be given a steam-stopper.

The Licensed Tugmen's Protective Association, at their recent Cleveland convention, took action that will very materially affect tug interests here. It has heretofore been the custom of the big lumber steamers to tow their two and three consorts in and out. Hereafter these captains must take tugs for the barges, in and out, or they will not handled at the other end of the route by association tugs. When it is considered that three quarters of the lumber cargoes from this port are in this class of vessels, it means a good deal to local tugs.

The tug Grilcen went to Beaver Island last week the day of our going to press, and we were unable to say then what success attended the tug. The Grilcen got within 100 feet of McCann's dock, and Capt. F. D. Campbell went ashore and around to the harbor with the mail. The people of St. James were very glad to see Capt. Tetz. It was the latest steamboat trip ever made to the Island.

A Ludington special of the 4th says: Since the 10,000 bushels of barley and a few tons of ice have been removed from the hold of the steamer Pere Marquette 3, the boat is straightening up and looks less like a wreck than she did a week ago. Her bulkers were fired today for the first time, and the leaks have been stopped to such an extent that one pump working half speed keeps the water down. Aside from a few open seams there appears to be very little damage to the hull. Pere Marquette officials expect to have the boat running again by spring. As soon as weather will permit the steamer will be taken to the Milwaukee dry dock.

It is given out from Chicago that Capt. A. B. Wolvin will early the coming season carry out his scheme for the establishment of a line of steamers between that port and Quebec, to connect at the latter port with transatlantic steamship lines. It is believed that negotiations have been completed with the American Shipbuilding company for the construction of a fleet sufficient in number to accommodate the traffic anticipated for the new through route. The first of these steamers is expected to be ready for the service. The new line will be operated by the St. Lawrence and Great Lakes Transportation company, incorporated in West Virginia, of which A. B. Wolvin of Duluth is president. Its capital stock is $500,000. Funds for steamers and docks at Quebec are said to be in hand. There will be no trouble over the question of insurance rates, which led to the abandonment of the Consolidated Trans-Atlantic line last season. By the division of the traffic, lake rates will prevail to Quebec, and ocean rates from there to European points. The steamers to be constructed will be of the same size and general arrangement as the Connecticut fleet which made a failure of the attempt to establishes direct traffic between Chicago and European ports.

It is reported at Chicago that the company by which the Manitou Steamship company secured a least of the dock at which the big passenger steamers North West and North Land make their landings last season and thus practically shut them out of available dockroom in the harbor of the Windy City will result in the charter of the fine passenger steamer Manitou by the Northern Steamship company to run either between Duluth and Mackinac Island or Duluth and Buffalo. The report is strengthened by the fact that Vice President Farrington of the Northern Steamship company has recently been in Chicago in consultation with the officials of the company operating the Manitou. Aside from this it is known that the Northern Steamship company people have for some time past been casting about for a suitable steamer to take the place of the Miami on the Duluth route, and the Manitou would fill the bill exactly. It is believed that in the event of the charter of the Manitou she will be run between Duluth and Buffalo, as the Duluth-Mackinac Island service last season was by no means satisfactory. Should the deal be made, as seems now altogether probable, the old landing at Chicago will again be occupied for the North West and North Land.

SCHOOL NOTES.

On Friday, Feb. 7th, under the auspices of the Senior class, will be given the entertainment by the Russel Concert Company. The program will consist of numbers by Mr. Francis Russell, impersonator and vocalist and Miss Myra Russell pianist and vocalist. This is not a number on the regular lecture course. The entertainment will be the first given in the new building. Admission twenty-five cents; children under twelve fifteen cents.

Miss Miller has resumed her place as teacher in the Lincoln school, Miss Manners, who has been supplying for Miss Miller, is now relieving some of the other teachers.

The fourth number on the course will be a lecture by J. Wright Gildinge, the date is February 11.

The Extemporaneous class has been re-organized and has four new members, the other sixteen having been members of the old class. They have decided to have a contest, the judges being members. The defeated side will furnish refreshments for the class.

Miss Jessie Brown and Mr. Nathan Smith have left school.—Miss Zettler, Mr. Withors, and Thad Smith are absent on account of sickness, and Hazen Whitford and Rena O'Neill have just resumed after a short absence.

Miss Josephine Smith is visiting friends in Harbor Springs.

The second program of the Lyceum contest will be given by the Sophomore Wednesday evening, Feb. 5th.

The following subjects were taken up at the beginning of the new semester: Bookkeeping, Civil and Algebra by the ninth grade; Civil Government by the tenth grade; Geometry and Homer's Iliad by the eleventh grade; Milton's "Paradise Lost" by the twelfth grade.—and Commercial Correspondence.

Mr. Hodgings started off so suddenly on his subject that everybody gave a little start and their were tickled to death with the rest of the lecture.—Canton, (O.) News Democrat.

Norwood Notes.

Fred Meech of Charlevoix was here 3 or 4 days visit last week.

Mrs Greene and Mrs Perkins have gone on a visit to their husbands, who are working at Sturgeon Bay.

G. V. Nash left on Tuesday for Pasadena, Cal., to visit his children Ned and Clara, and will be gone until the first of April.

The month of January, 1902 just closed, was the finest on record, good sleighing all the time without much snow or storm, and just cold enough to keep the snow from melting. It has not been below zero here this winter.

Crystal Lake in Benzie county is one of the most beautiful spots in the northern part of the state and efforts are being made develop it in a manner to rival the Saratogas of Michigan. Representative Burns has interested New York capitalists and a large amount of money will be spent in beautifying the place the coming summer. Lots are being picked up fast and they are already commanding high prices. It is proposed to connect the resort with the outside world by an electric line.

Traverse City special 4th: Henry D. Campbell, aged 71, a prominent business man, dropped dead this morning while cleaning the walk in front of his residence. He came here in 1852 on the first steam craft to enter Grand Traverse Bay. He distributed the first mail in Traverse City and built what is now known as the Park Place hotel; established the water works and the first electric light plant here. He had just finished a $25,000 brick building. Mr. Campbell was active politician, a republican and figured prominently in local affairs. He was four years county treasurer and 12 years judge of probate. At the time of his death he was alderman of his ward, and last evening took an active part in the council meeting. He had just planned to take an extended trip with his wife.

SCHOOL COMMUNICATIONS.

A. W. STEWARD, EDITOR.

The latest report of the superintendent of Michigan shows a school population (from five years of age to twenty) of 721,668 and a total enrollment of 556,989 in the public schools, the estimated number enrolled in private and parochial schools being 55,239. There are 711 graded school districts, 5,642 ungraded districts, 119 township unit districts. The average term of the graded schools last year was 8.54 months of the ungraded, 8.19 months. The aggregate salaries of teachers in the public schools was $4,549,550 of which $1,365,076 were paid teachers in ungraded school districts (only 293,762 children, of school age in those districts).

The average monthly wages of male teachers was $46.73 (female teachers $35.71. The amount paid for building and repairs last year was $1,127,329; the amount paid for all purposes $8,297,691.

The total value of public school property was $19,358,173 (more than the total value of public school property in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Arkansas.) Libraries were reported in 426 townships, and 3,653 districts, with a total of nearly 1,000,000 volumes. Nearly 2,000 teachers are graduates of Normal schools. The attendance at the teachers' institutes for the year was 7,045.

A southern paper says: "Compare these figures with the figures for these items in your own state, think what the difference means for your state and for Michigan, and then resolve that this difference shall never be so large again. In making the comparison, remember that the area of Michigan is about that of Georgia, the population about twenty per cent more, and the natural resources less than those of any of the southern states. Of course the wealth producing power of the people is greater than in any of the southern states, so it always will be until we spend more money for more and better education for all our people."

VISITING FRIENDLY "UNCLE"

Pawning Your Jewels is a Social Function in Vienna.

In New York when people have occasion to visit their "uncle" at the sign of the three golden balls they generally do so in a furtive sort of way, and do not make their visit a topic of conversation among their fashionable friends afterward. But they do these things better in Vienna. In the Austrian capital they have a new and handsomely appointed pawnshop, where there are cosy tea rooms, reading rooms and every inducement to spend an hour or so in chatting, reading or walking about the spacious premises. It has become a fashionable resort, and quite the "swagger" thing to go to in order to meet one's friends there of a morning. The street before the pawnshop is filled at the fashionable hour with handsome carriages with armorial bearings emblazoned on their panels, and society meets in the luxurious rooms to talk and gossip. Inquiries are made as to what articles have been pawned, the amount received, and there is a great competing of notes on the subject of pawnshops generally. It has been a well-known fact for years that a large part of Vienna society frequently had to resort to "uncle," but it is only recently that the practice has become a social function and the pawnshop a fashionable resort. Once the carnival is over, there family jewels, which it would be backing in society to wear through the Lenten season, are packed up and taken to "uncle" and when summer is come there go all the costly furs, which are well taken care of during the warm months. With the money borrowed on these their owners are able to augment their hilarity during the "season of rose and wine," leaving the rendezvous to take care of itself.—New York Press.

SPARE THAT TREE!

Woodman, spare that tree;
Touch not a single bough.
In youth it sheltered me,
And I'll protect it now.

Arguments Based on Misinformation.

Some wonderful information finds its way into "low tariff" newspapers. The Boston Transcript, for instance, which apparently wants reciprocity with Canada, after reflecting on the motives of Senator Burrows and others who do not agree with it, prints this surprising information, which was sent to it all the way from Washington: "In the Dingley tariff the duty on logs was made double that carried by the McKinley tariff of only ten years ago. Logs were on the free list in the McKinley tariff and are also on the free list in the Dingley tariff. If the advocates of reciprocity with Canada were to base their arguments on facts instead of such wonderful misinformation as that about the duty on logs they would cease to talk on the subject.—Philadelphia Press.

Extremes in Nature.

A French scientist calls public attention to certain phenomena which show that the truism "extremes meet" applies with as much force to physical nature as to human character. He relates that in the mountains near Pontgibaud in Auvergne, there is formed in the hottest part of every summer a most singular ice deposit which has no existence in winter. The local peasantry have never evinced any acute interest in the scientific explanation of this remarkable natural peculiarity, but they have always, from the first, turned it to practical advantage by using the spot for cold storage for the cheese which is the staple product of the district.

Total and the Women.

Mme. Sofia Fredianelli of Moscow delivered a message from Count Leo Tolstoi to club women at a meeting of the Arche Club. Tolstoi, Mme. Fredianelli says, does not believe that modern women are Christians. "Why do you not stay at home and take care of your children?" he asked her. "The women of to-day are no longer good Christians. They visit to be seen and heard too much in public. They do not depend on their husbands. They read books which they cannot understand." The members of the Arche Club chose to consider Tolstoi's remarks humorous. They were not willing to admit that there was anything unchristian about women's clubs.—Chicago Tribune.

Reverse of Free-Trade.

McKinley's own words, in his Buffalo speech, defined reciprocity as "sensible trade arrangements which will not interrupt our home production." This is the reverse of free trade.—Benton (Ill.) Republican.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor.

Large congregation Sunday morning and the service was much enjoyed. The evening service in honor of the 21st birthday of the Christian Endeavor Society was well attended.

On Sunday morning the pastor will preach on the subject of Human Temples. In the evening a special Lincoln Memorial Service will be held under the auspices of the Sunday School, some of the scholars taking part.

The ladies are arranging to hold their "Sample Sale" soon and have secured the Chaloupka building for that purpose.

The choir is preparing to give a Sacred Concert on Sunday evening, shortly after they expect soon to furnish an evening's entertainment in the shape of a Robby Burns Concert, which will accompany be accompanied by notes on some of the best poems and songs of the Scottish Bard. The whole being illustrated with about 40 beautiful "Photographic Transparences."

THINKING ABOUT OTHERS.

It is a Foolish Habit and Wastes Valuable Time.

Do not waste what is left of life in regarding other men, except when lent upon some unselfish aim. Why hold opportunities for action by thus persistently regarding what so-and-so is doing and why, what he is saying or thinking or planning, or anything else that dazes and distracts you from allegiance to your inner Self? In the sequence of your regards, thus wayward, random thoughts, and, above all, meddling and ill-nature, limit yourself habitually to such regards that if suddenly asked, "What is in your thoughts now?" you could tell at once the candid and unhesitating truth—a direct, plain proof that all your thoughts were simple and in charity, such as befits a noble being, who eschews voluptuous or even self-indulgent fancies, or jealousy of any kind, or malice and suspicion, or any other mood which you would blush to own. A man so minded and committed finally to the pursuit of virtue, is indeed a priest and minister of gods, true to that inward and implanted power, which keeps a man unsoiled by pleasure, invulnerable by pain, free from all touch of arrogance, lascivious of all baseness, a combatant in the greatest of all conflicts, which is the mastery of passion, steeped in justice to the core, and with his whole heart welcoming all that befalls him as his portion; seldom, and only in view of some large, unselfish gain, does he regard what other conduct is his sole concern, and he realizes without fail the web of his own destiny.—Marcus Aurelius.

One-Sided Reciprocity.

To illustrate one-sided reciprocity, let us name Canada. Canada wants free access to our markets, and in return will cheerfully give us free access to hers. Canada has 5,000,000 people; the United States has 80,000,000. Her people can buy of us, provided Great Britain does not demand her trade, one-sixteenth of what we would naturally buy of her. Though her soil is American and she controls a great deal of the North American continent, the wages paid by her for labor are 20 to 50 per cent lower than in the United States. She would, of course, fill our markets with cheap goods to compete with better paid American labor. Such a condition would undoubtedly help Canadian immigration, of which there has been positively none for half a century. It is better for the United States to attract this immigration to her own states and territories, where, despite the fact that we have sixteen times as many people to Canada on a smaller area, there is yet room, with only a small fraction of our sufficient resources developed.—Allentown (Pa.) News.

...The Jones Chain Mower

Supreme on every Meadow.

The Modern King of all Grass Cutters.

It makes no noise—the power other mowers waste in racket is here applied to cutting grass.

It makes the cleanest. Its cutter-bar hugs the ground closely, either end will freely rise or fall into depressions—saves every inch of grass.

Stripped of non-essentials, a simple power-producing unit of up-to-date improvements, this Jones Mower is easily managed by a boy—you: lightest team will pull it through the season and grow fat.

If you love to tinker "fixin up" machinery don't buy a "PLANO," but if you want your crop cut cleanest, quickest, cheapest, look into this.

"Huh!" The relief out crept again and fastened his knee, black eyes to the old Scots face.

"My dirrl was Gaul, Grogan, wi' the big Jaggers in the seguedy fight to his fither. But in a great hunting his dead Mr. was pleased to take possession of his horses. He shouldn't use, he can't use black be known use for his foot, and I fit wi' powder—I surrender, do not shoot! Oh but hoot him, the hoots! Come him in my saddle, I discharged every chiny for if my mother into his foot, and I fit him to dead on his back."

"You mean I have to carry Jackson," said the chief, "though I could not have shot that to a Texas mule."

"Well, this same Mabel Fleming is now with the occupant rude mountain of race three, among the foothills, in the Sweetwater."

"And you will get her into your family?"

"Yes, as surely as my name is Gaul, I will get the girl! Jackson did fetch us some peaks of the Rockies At length the winning arrived in my hands and I will play them. Let the people get united in their destinies, they will half in one of the beautiful villages to wait, depend upon it, and so will be within easy reach. When they feel most at ease and begin to grow careless, then we can strike."

"That may be best. Have they a guide?"

"Yes, the man who passed through here last year with the people going to Vancouver."

"They call him Rob Whitman? I remember him; he is an silent and never is if he were a Sioux," said the chief, thoughtfully.

CHAPTER II.

It was mid-afternoon, and the sun shone like the fabled golden shield of Achilles, but it did not blind them to the indescribably glorious of the valley spread out at their feet. Riders and drivers pulled up, amazed at the sight, and which afforded the only avenue by which to descend into the valley, and the horses and their white allies.

As he sauntered to the valley he could see that the Sioux were signalling to the Utes, and he felt certain that some plot was afoot. He recognized Whitwind at the head of a small band of well-mounted braves, who were riding to head him off; and he saw everything depended on speed and endurance.

Whitman was not yet down in Indian, when above the thundering of his horse's feet he heard the shouting of men in the right, and the war cries of the Indians in the left.

To flesh across the opposite valley and to the other bluff around the only one had time. He had just decided to follow it, when his horse—poor, brave, noble! died. A band of Sioux on foot were in upon him, and he was bounded in, then against nosegays.

"There is nothing left but to fight for it," he said. "Do down, Hector."

He crouched the horse's knees, and the intelligent creature dropped on his legs as if he were dead.

CHAPTER III.

"Is there a man of it, Mr. Rob?" Whitman saw the Utes and their allies retreat to their bluff. They made no attempt to cancel their movements. Coming down in the night will have been which such odds in their favor, they deserved forth. Hector was shot, almost as the Indian ponies, as well as his master. With steel eyes, he looked along the only avenue by which he could reach the valley and the sheep, and the horses were arriving their ponies, or clambering on foot, then he raised his mouth and laid his master's shoulder, as if in world sign.

"It is time to mount; let me carry you from this death."

Finally double Whitman leaped lightly into the saddle, looked horribly over the line of his foes, and at the same time took rapid notes of the nature of the ground over which he was about to fly. He advanced in the direction of the Sioux at a gallop. They scarcely a block his way, and so exposed themselves to the fire of his repeater.

As the eagle swoops along the tree of the mountain, like a bolt leaped from the upper blue, but turns in mid-curve and shoots back over the line of its flight, so Hector wheeled in response to the pressure of his master's knee, and swept the singed arrows that pursued him, he plunged into the valley and up it. Captain Richmond and his well-armed, finely mounted dispatch-boys were dewdrop on his rear. In their surprise they had to yield the setting sun and shouted "Turn to the sun!" The speed race on this continent is westward, to gain the markets of the East. At the Pacific coast the fast-speeding trains will shortly be met by distance which faster and much larger than any horseflows known in our China-Japan service.

All railroads tributary to the transcontinental systems and most lines are now—feel the influence of this expansion and are placing big orders for rolling stock. The entire output of Auvergne Locomotive Company for 1902 has been contracted for in advance when its capacity will be 2,000 locomotives per annum. For through business, for long hauls, the iron horse still more than holds its own. Nor can it be expected that it will be stabled for good until the double as to the cost of electricity for the inter- business have been resolved to the point, of demonstrating that it is a cheaper Agent than steam.—Boston Transcript.

His Hope.

"I hope," said the serious man, "that you haven't been betting on the races."

"I hope so, too," said the young man with the red necktie and the restless eye. "I hope I will wake up to-morrow and find out that the whole thing was a wild dream. But there's no use in hoping."—Washington Star.

A law exists in Norway to aid people in securing land. The Government provides a sum of $200,000, which is lent to industrious farmers to enable them to buy farms.

Talmage's Sermon.

This Week's Subject: Disasters Turned Into Blessings.

Brooklyn, L. I., March 9, 1902.

In this discourse Dr. Talmage calls attention to the fact that disasters are often the salvation recounted and shows how a disaster may develop a heavenly spirit; text, Psalms xxxvii. 2, "Sins sorts bitter with a positive and a sacrament, and ton settings."

Agriculture as well as poor and computer and Long was David, the author of the Psalms. He was a shepherd, and tend thrifter and then played it upon a harp, strikes the sweetest music ever with his fingers and thunder. The harp is the chief of musical instruments. Jubal invented it, and he was the ancestor of all musicians. The harp was assigned to the tribe of the Levites, and David was a Levite. He was "Hind." It is the most consecrated of all instruments of music. Harp and lyre, the bugle never married, the cornet never married, the trumpet never married, the organ never married, but the harp has been married to the human heart, the human soul, the human tongue, the human language, the human tongue, the human tongue, the human tongue

Statehood for Cuba.

It may be that this Cuban tariff agitation will result in dispelling, in the minds of Cuban politicians and American "Philanthropists" the dream of Cuban independence.

A member of congress is preparing a bill to provide for the annexation of Cuba. No annexation by force, but by invitation. An appeal to the sober common sense of the Cuban people. As the United States rescued Cuba from the Spaniards, the bill will involve the rescue of Cuba from itself.

By its provisions Cuba is to come under United States autonomy, with the same status as Hawaii. Statehood is to follow at such time as Congress may determine.

Why should not this be the best thing for Cuba? The people of Cuba have for generations been dreaming of independence, and it is but an ignatum per ignotius, to them, and ever will be.

We believe, and have believed, since the official declaration of war with Spain, that every act of this government, and every co-operative act of the Cuban people, have been but steps toward Cuban freedom under the American flag—not independence as defined by Cuban politicians.

We believe that these years of transitory American tutelage are but the introduction to an era of American Cuba, in which the gem of the Antilles shall wash from the full fruition of her hopes—freedom and prosperity.

And she can reach it no other way. The idea of Cuban "independence" is but a phantasm. Cuba will one day be independent as Michigan is independent, and not otherwise.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Glad were the hearts and happy the faces of those students, teachers and visitors who assembled Monday morning to enjoy the first opening exercises of the high school in their new building. Seats were easily and rapidly assigned to those who are the first to study within the new walls. Upon being called to order Rev. Mr. Hutchens read from the Scripture, followed by Rev. Nagler who offered prayer. Hymns, Scripture lessons and gracious words presented the school with a gift which for years will add grace, dignity and inspiration to the walls of the assembly room—a large picture of our martyr Presidents. The portraits are clear, and true likenesses of those whose faces told of the patience, perseverance, courage, faith and purity. With sincere gratitude we thank Rev. Bishop for his kind thoughtfulness and interest in our school.

The Lyceum have put an enlarged picture of the feet ball boys of 1901 upon the walls of the main room of the Mackinaw High School. The picture is very much appreciated by all the members of the high school, and will serve as a memorial of the many victories won by these, while the parents themselves are free in their perfection, the manhood that gleams through the countenances, tells of the nability in many of the high school boys, of which we are proud.

There has been a general changing around of the grades in the former high school building. The seventh and eighth grades occupy the south rooms; the sixth grade, the seventh grade room; the fifth grade the eighth grade room while the third and fourth grades remain as before; the second grade has the sixth grade room and the first grade remains unchanged.

The audience that met on the evening of Feb. 4th was most delightfully entertained by the Russell Concert company, who for an hour and a half held the interest and attention of all. Mr. Francis Russell is an impersonator of no ordinary talent, that almost every audience is celebrity; not only has he wonderful power in presenting the different types and dispositions of human nature, but with rich fancy, color, clear tone and accurate in expression is enchanting to the listener. Miss Russell is an artistic pianist, and in her interpretation of music, Charlevoix high school want to hear the Russell Concert company again.

SCHOOL CONS'R COLUMN.

A. W. CHEW, CONS'R.

To show few teachers in a county change, we find in our teachers list for the year ending Sept. 5, 1898, considerably the same of one hundred forty-four teachers, just twenty, engaged in work this year. It requires 105 teachers to supply the schools in Charlevoix county. Of that number 85 were not teaching in the county in 1897-98.

We wish that every school district, school officer, school patron, and school teacher had a Farmer's Bulletin No. 134, issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled "Tree planting on Farm School Grounds." It is written by William S. Hall, Assistant Superintendent of Tree planting of the Bureau of Forestry. The paper deals with the present condition and needs of rural school grounds and indicates methods for their improvement. It also suggests important lines of study for the teacher and school in connection with trees and forests.

The teacher can get this by writing to our Senators of Representative in Congress or by applying to the Sec. of Agriculture, for Farmer's Bulletin No. 134. The teacher will find some excellent help in it for teaching Nature Study, and an excellent treatise on the subject of Shrubs and Trees and forests.

The eighth grade examinations for February will be held the 20 and 21 of this month. The next examination will be held the 15th and 16 of May. Pupils will be given two trials for a diploma, that is, they may write a part of the subjects in Feb. then finish in May, or they may write the whole examination in February and then in May rewrite on all branches in which they fail below 75. An average standing of 75 and a minimum of 65 will be required to pass the examination.

A Deep Mystery.

It is a deep mystery why women endure Backache, Headache, Nervous ness, Sleeplessness, Melancholy, Paint ing and dizzy spells when thousands have proved that Electric Bitters will quickly cure such troubles. "I suffered for years with kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Dustie Chorley, of Peterson, Ia., "and a lame back pained me so I could not dress myself, but Electric Bitters wholly cured me, and, although 73 years old, I now am able to do all my housework." It overcomes constipation, improves appetite, gives perfect health. Only 50c at F. G. Hines & Co's Drug store.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The Central Lake Cigar Co., has undergone a change and now C. Barry is sole proprietor, having purchased Joe Devlin's interest.

Emmet county will vote this spring upon the question of the removal of the county seat from Harbor Springs to Petoskey and there is little doubt but that the removal will be made.

The Michigan Telephone Co. expect with the opening of spring to extend their service to all points in Leelanau county and also to Harker Creek, Rapid City, Alden and Kalkaska.

The local grocer in the Ward mill at Howard ties the Cadillac News that it will take twenty-five years cutting 10,000 feet per day to cut all the timber owned by the Ward estate tributary to that mill.

St. Ignace has been selected by the Hay Fever Association for their rendezvous for the next season. For the past three years they have been meeting at Mackinac. However a geography another who have always stopped at Petoskey continue to do so regardless of the official headquarters.

The residents of Mackinac Island are preparing for their annual road making bee on the lee between there and St Ignace. The cold weather has thrown up the ice in windrows, and these will be smoothed off to make a passage for teams between here and that city.

W. H. Cross, an expert taxidermist of Elk Rapids, has a novel window display, consisting of 14 live white owls which he has mounted in an artistic manner. Each of these birds is a magnificent specimen with beautiful plumage extending down to the covering of the talons.

Chebogan Tribune: Trayton Saltsman, who spends his summers in northern Michigan, looking after his property interests, but seldom puts in an appearance during the winter, reading in the Tribune what delightful winter weather we have been enjoying, concluded to escape the rigors of the winter in Chicago and come to Chebogan to enjoy our delightful winter climate. He arrived in the city Tuesday evening and was pleased and called at this office this forenoon.

Capt. Albert McCabe, of Petoskey who had command of Co. C. of the 25th Michigan during the Spanish war but who has for two and a half years been in the Philippines, is home on a visit. Capt. McCabe has been offered the position of chief of the forestry bureau at a salary of $5000 a year. He will return to Manila in April and Mrs. McCabe will accompany him.

Central Lake Torch: Torch Lake is said to be alive with the finest white fish, which are allowed to increase and grow because none are ever caught out. It is unlawful to catch them with nets or to spear them and as they won't bit a hook it is impossible to get them. Schools of them are often seen in the shallow water at certain seasons, but they usually stay in the deepest parts of the lake. If some genius would invent a way to secure them without violating the law we could all feast on the finest fish that swim.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:
Deafness—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your invention, I will now give you a full history of my case, in the hope of benefiting others, who may be suffering as I did. About five years ago my right ear began to ring, and this kept on getting worse, until I had to wear a cotton in my ear all the time, for the noises in my head were so annoying. Sometimes consulting about my hearing in a crowd I could not hear a word, for the noises would so confuse me that I could not distinguish one word from another. Now I can hear everywhere, even in the operation room, and I can hear the tick of a watch, which I could not before. I can now hear the ring of a telephone bell, which I could not before, and I can now hear sermons, which I could not before. I can now hear the tick of a watch, which I could not before. I can now hear the ring of a telephone bell, which I could not before.

COLLIDE HIGH IN AIR.

TRAINS CRASH ON TRESTLE OVER COLORADO CREEK.

One Trolley Hand Killed in Accident Caused by His Own Precautation — Crews Made Safe Because Engineer Bob Pulsey, but Is Afterward Returned.

The Colorado Midland passenger train, for Salt Lake City and San Francisco, narrowly escaped instant destruction two miles west of Buena Vista, Colo. The company claims that a wooden trestle standing on a trestle only are feet high, bring the engine and a freight car into the creek below and killing Owen McCarthy, trolley hand on the freight train. Brakeman Peck and his fireman were severely injured, scalded by escaping steam and smashed on their engine, expecting to be killed in a death. The entire left the rails, but remained on the track, plunging into the creek only by one axle their brass on the other. The accident was due to a slight error in judgment on the part of the engineer, Bob Pulsey, who had been ordered to run slowly and cautiously over the bridge, because it was known to be unsafe. Pulsey was expected by several hours, Davis head of the Major and reached the place just as the train was approaching. Time had been carefully tamped, and both his ears had been pulled off. Davis then his ears and hunting half, burnt through the cheek of women who were turning the prisoner, and, though the swirling circle of brawn, rushed at him, he had the presence of mind to think about the best man who came near him. He set the thongs of his rebellious foot behind him on his horse and made good his escape to Wamsle, where he placed his prisoner in safety.

DIES IN SAVING CASH.

Grocery Clerk Gives His Life in Defense of His Trust.

The flash half of a grocery clerk with a bullet hole through his heart, a dog of a man with a smoking gun in his hand and the corpse a light-dress bullet hole in the forehead, lying on the floor, the windows of a little grocery on the West Side, tells the story, as far as the story can be told, of a tragedy in an attempted hold-up in the Mr. Mc Cormick's store, on Sheridan road, last night. It pears old, in the young man, who was doing his duty according to the rules of his employer, D. C. Herbe, Herbe, who was alone in the store, was at the time, the clerk, the man, stood down to open the cash drawer, when the door opened and a man lighted several gas burners, and he saw the man. The clerk, who was alone, went to put the cash in the drawer and the man ordered him to put up or make the cash. Unmagnetic half second, in which the man stood, and Herbe, who was alone, and the man, who had come to rob the store, and the man, who had come to rob the store, and the man, who had come to rob the store

SHE SHOT TO KILL.

Mrs. J. W. Coates, Attempts to Take Her Husband's Life at East Jordan.

Mrs. Coates Bound Over to the March Term of the Circuit Court.

From the East Jordan Herald:

A man with an ugly wound in the neck of his neck which may yet prove fatal and a woman languishing in the County jail awaiting trial for attempted murder is the last chapter in the long story of domestic infelicity in which J. W. Coats and his wife have been the leading characters.

Mrs. J. W. Coates made a murderous assault on her husband with a .22 caliber revolver Wednesday morning about 11:00 o'clock. The story of the crime and the events which led up to it is as follows:

Coates and his wife had never lived very happily together and about a year ago they separated, Mrs. C. taking occasion at the time to pretty thoroughly demolish the furniture of their little house in a manner that would have done credit to Carrie Nation. She took their child, a bright little girl of three years, with her and has recently been making her home with her so Wilfred Hughes, who resides in Bowen's Addition.

Tuesday she came down town and told Coates that the little girl was sick and he procured medical attendance for her as well as sending for some oranges and other delicacies, promising to call the next morning to see how the child was getting on.

He went up the next morning to the child and while there Mrs. C. asked him to take her back to his home which he refused to do, and not wishing create a disturbance, turned to go. As he was passing through the door she drew the gun, which she had held concealed under her apron and holding it close to his head, fired, the bullet striking him in the back of the neck. It struck the skull and was deflected downward, lodging some where in his neck in front of the spine.

Coates is a man of magnificent physique and was not even knocked down by the shock. He came down town to foot and had wound dressed. Although the doctors probed the wound very carefully they failed to find the exact location of the bullet. The injured man is doing very well and but for the danger from blood poisoning is nearly as good as ever. Considering the place and nature of the wound it seems little short of miraculous that he was not instantly killed.

The authorities were notified at once and warrant sworn out for the arrest which was served by Constable Johnson, who had no trouble in securing the prisoner as she had made no attempt to escape. The weapon with which the crime was committed was found in the other. It was a seven chambered revolver and contained six cartridges only one of which was discharged.

Sheriff Ivanson arrived from Charlevoix Wednesday evening and the prisoner had her hearing before Justice J. E. Chew Thursday morning. In default of $1,000 bail she was remanded to the county jail to await trial at the next term of the Circuit Court which sits at Charlevoix the fore part of next month.

MARINE NOTES.

The tug Martin will enter the pond in the spring.

Capt. Pete Campbell fell in the lake Tuesday. Fished out. Wet.

On Wednesday the tug Mary McLane, owned by G. C. Gelken and Geo. Weaver, was sold to Hawley, of Detroit. She will be taken there in the spring.

Capt. G. S. Mills and Mr. Cook are busy there days thoroughly overhauling, repairing and altering the steamer Wallace, on Walloon Lake. Extensive changes are contemplated. A cabin will be built, the pilot house placed forward and upon the upper deck; new floors laid; a piano installed as soon as the summer traffic begins. These improvements will make the Wallace a first class passenger steamer.

The little lake schooner Linseia is being equipped at Manitowoc for a long trip through lakes, rivers, ocean and gulf to Galveston, Tex., where she will carry oil to New Orleans. The Linseia has just been purchased for that service by William Willey and H. F. Wilson of Galveston from T. E. Tarrison, of Manitowoc. The schooner is 76 feet long by 21 feet beam, and measures 77 tons, but notwithstanding her small size she will start for the gulf by way of the St. Lawrence and the Atlantic ocean. The craft is to be equipped with two gasoline engines and a screw wheel. The purchasers are contemplating about for several more lake schooners for service on the gulf.

The government inspectors of steam vessels at their recent meeting in Washington, made several marked changes which will be of the utmost importance to owners and licensed officers on the lakes as well as upon the ocean. The big change which will this year be insisted upon is that all boilers must be equipped with fusible plugs made of brass and babbitt metal filling. The inspectors will not pass a vessel which has not had its boiler fitted with these plugs. One of the strict measures adopted by the supervising inspectors is that many of the old style of plugs will not be accepted, only those passing inspection which bear the stamp of the manufacturer, who must file with the inspectors a certificate as to the material used in the manufacture of the plugs. Another important position taken by the supervising inspectors is that they may hereafter anticipate the expiration of licenses of masters, engineers and pilots thirty days ahead of the actual expiration and renew the papers during the winter when business is dull. This will enable licensed officers to renew their papers three months ahead of their expiration, or before they leave their home port in the spring, this doing away with the trouble and annoyance of returning to the inspectors their papers for renewal. Many of the papers run out in April, May and June, and during this time the office force of the supervising inspector is overcrowded, and the new ones was to shift a large part of this work into the dull months as well as to make it easier for the officers whose licenses need renewing.

Beaver Island Brevities.

Zero weather is all the rage this week.

The Island Reading Circle meets with Mrs. W. H. Johnston this week Thursday night.

A fire was sighted from the harbor Tuesday night, apparently in the direction of Cross Village.

Capt. Bonner and his brother Tom are hard at work getting out timber for a fifty foot addition to the captain's dock.

Mrs. D. Martin is out again, looking better than before she was taken sick. Her many friends are glad to see her recovering so completely.

Perch fishing through the ice in the harbor is a sport freely indulged in these days. Scarcely a child ever comes away without from 25 to 50 nice fish.

Work is steadily progressing on the new Hotel Beaver, which, by the way is going to be a fine structure when completed. A more extended description of the building will appear later.

The various ice houses about the harbor have been emptied preparatory to filling with the new crop and as the slides are in positive the harvest will speedily be made when once in position.

Charley Cross of the west side of the Island is having a very severe time with blood poisoning this week. He had been doing well getting out the this winter until taken with this affliction which is giving him so much trouble.

Messrs. Gill, Mechans and Hancock are billed for judgment at the next term of court, but as ice boating is not safe yet and fishing is still out of order, they may wait a more convenient season.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hunt, a bouncing baby boy on Tuesday night. All concerned reported to be doing nicely. Mrs. Mary Carmody recorded the new heir onto the stage of action with becoming dignity.

Pete Jensen, Edjerles Larson and Willie Wachter were the first venturers across the ice from Garden Island Friday last. Pete Manitou an Indian from High Island came over today and says ice is five inches thick.

Mr. Dominick F. Gallagher's little babe who was bereft of its mother during the fall soon after its birth, succumbed to the dread destroyer last week. Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Hamrock had adopted the baby some time before its death.

Mrs. Gilson and daughters Anna and Ida entertained the Island Reading Circle and friends at their home last Thursday evening, this being the monthly social meeting a most enjoyable evening was spent with cards, crackanole and music.

W. J. Gallagher who has been corresponding with promoters of the Charlevoix Beet Sugar company, and who has been talking sugar beets to the farmers, says that prospects big fair for a kindly reception to the sugar beet representative, and that in all probability a large acreage can be secured.

Township treasurer of Peaine has nearly all the taxes in—including dog tax. St. James should look after its dogs also. The matter of tax on the sheep killing canines of this township is at present waiting on the county of the county Prosecuting Attorney, who seems to be slow in reporting.

Mr. and Mrs. V. V. McDonough of Sand Bay performed the sad duty of burying their little daughter Genevieve last Saturday. The long funeral procession of over a score of well filled rigs reached Holy Cross cemetery at noon, where the little one's remains were interred. The bereaved parents, who are held in the highest esteem by the people of the Island, have the heartfelt sympathy of all who know them. Sweet little Genevieve, in the twenty short months of her life endeared herself to the hearts of the large relation here on the Island in a way seldom seen, as she was an exceptionally bright child. This being the second and only child, their sense of loss seems doubly hard to bear.

WANTED—two girls for hotel work. Enquire at Hotel Clinton.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS.

—A. T. Barnett & Co. have a new display in their space this week.

—Read the new and enlarged ad. of Ward & Ward the agricultural implement people, in this issue.

—Geo. T. Riddle, of St. Louis, Mo., for whom C. C. Price is building a cottage, was in town yesterday.

—J. Wight Giddings, whose lecture on "Uncle Sam's people" was the high school course event Tuesday evening, was formerly Lieut. Governor of Michigan, and is one of Michigan's most scholarly and eloquent orators. The audience was most appreciative. As one listener expressed it, "the lecture had but one fault to my mind; it was too short." And yet Mr. Giddings spoke over an hour. It was Masterful in thought and diction and was decidedly a star number in the course.

—"A White Lie," a magnificent comedy drama in four acts will be presented Saturday evening by Mrs. K. Edith Graves, supported by a strong company. Mrs. Graves is recognized as an actress of marked ability, and Charlevoix people may expect a treat in this opportunity to hear her again. This play was presented to a splendid audience in the Petoskey opera house Tuesday evening and won unbounded comments.

—That portion of the new school building that has been completed for occupancy went into use last Monday morning, and Supt. Tice and the high school are doing business there. The balance of the building will be completed as required by the growth of the school. The rooms to use are on the second floor, and embrace the high school room, 50x56 feet; two recitation rooms, 16x21 and 20x26, respectively; a laboratory, 20x25, and the superintendent's office, 14x21. We are safe in saying that there is no finer suit of school rooms in northern Michigan. The high school room, especially, is a magnificent apartment. The rooms are finished in oak, with walls of patent hard rock plaster. The seating is of best manufacture, and all appurtenances are first class. The laboratory is fully equipped, and the superintendent's office is supplied with every convenience. Whatever differences of opinion may have existed as to the wisdom of erecting the building at this time, we can all agree that the district has school accomodations and educational facilities that, for the number of scholars, cannot be surpassed anywhere.

—The Licensed Tugmens' Protective Association ball at the opera house Thursday night was a stupendous success. The most elaborate and striking feature of the event were the decorations. The first thing that met the eye of the participant, as he ascended the stairway, were the regular red and green lights of a vessel, flanking the entrance, so that the chances of a collision, under the most unfavorable circumstances, was reduced to a minimum. In the hall itself, the appropriateness of the decorations at once pleased the beholder. An enormous American flag filled the proscenium arch; the international signal code flags hung from the gallery railing, a banner was festooned upon these, and all about were life preservers ready for the ones who fell overboard. The attendance was large and nothing occurred to mar the unalloyed pleasure of the night. Capt. Sam Hone and wife led the grand march, and Capt. Tim Smith danced every number from the grand march until the final quadrille at 4 o'clock in the morning. The I. T. P. A. are entitled to great credit for the success that crowned its efforts.

A Deep Mystery.

It is a deep mystery why women endure Backache, Headache, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Melancholy, Fainting and dizzy spells when thousands have proved that Electric Bitters will quickly cure such troubles. "I suffered for years with kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Phoebe Cherley, of Peterson, Ia., "and a lame back pained me so I could not dress myself, but Electric Bitters wholly cured me, and, although 73 years old, I now am able to do all my housework." It overcomes constipation, improves appetite, gives perfect health. Only 50c at F. G. Bliss & Co's Drug store.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor.

The ladies hold their Sample Sale this week Thursday, Friday and Saturday, afternoon and evening. They show a fine assortment of goods—cakes, confectionery and refreshments. Music, Curio exhibition and other features will be attractions. The Sale is held in the Chalmquia block. Admission at all times 5c.

The Lincoln Memorial Concert Service Sunday was well attended and well enjoyed. The Anthem and Male Quartette were both highly spoken of.

The pastor would be glad to hear from those who may be anticipating uniting with the church at next Communion, either on confession of faith or by letter.

A Francis E. Willard Union Service Sunday evening at the M. E. church.

NOT SIGNALS FROM MARS.

Light Observed in Dec. and Sept., 1900, Attributed to Illuminated Clouds.

While far removed from the popular notion of signal lights from Mars the explanation of the phenomenon on that planet observed at Flagstaff observatory in December a year ago, as made by Prof. Percival Lowell before the Philosophical Society, was little less interesting. By analogous reasoning he showed that the "projections" were altogether dissimilar to projections which may be observed on the moon when that body is less than full and which, he said, are caused by the sunlight illuminating the peaks of mountains or edges of craters, for the reason that projections on Mars as observed on Dec. 7 and 8, 1900, appeared at different places on the best equator of that planet, traveled with great rapidity to the same northwestery direction, rose to a maximum height of about 8 4-10 miles above the surface and disappeared. The phenomenon, he said, was undoubtedly caused by the rapid generation of clouds at a great hight, which were successfully illuminated by the rays of the sun as it was setting on Mars.

In the discussion on the subject, says the Philadelphia Ledger, Prof. Snyder of the Philadelphia observatory stated that the Russian astronomer, Gogovsky, in an article recently published reviewing the physical conditions under which planetary atmosphere may exist, manifestly confirms not only the observation but the explanation of the Martian phenomenon offered by Prof. Lowell.

England's Foremost Farmer a Woman.

One of England's foremost farmers is a woman, the Hon. Mrs. Murray Smith. On her estate at Overley Hall, Leicestershire, she raises some of the finest Jersey cattle that are bred anywhere. She is an early riser, and is up and about among her men as soon as the sun is in sight. All of the details of the work connected with the herd are under her own management. All of the improvements which can contribute to the well-being of the animals are made at her direction. The latter receive the best of care and have the best of food and the most comfortable quarters. As a result they have taken many prizes. One cow, Lorina, which carried off the milking prize at Friar and the butter certificate at the Bath and West of England show, gives 900 gallons of milk yearly. Mrs. Smith's rule is not to keep any cow which yields less than 600 gallons of milk a year. She herself attends to all of her correspondence and the record-keeping in connection with the animals. In her herd book is kept the pedigree of each animal, and the daily milk returns and the amount of butter each yields in a week are also entered on a record.—Philadelphia Times.

Superior That Hurt.

A correspondent at Hilton, N. Y., sends the Record the following street car incident: One of the last sharp November days a boy entered the car leaving the door open, much to the discomfort of an old gentleman who sat next. As the wind chilled his marrow his temper rose. Leaning across his seat and taking the kid by the ear he said: "Were you brought up in a barn? Why don't you shut the door?" The boy said nothing, but closed the door, coming back to his seat to tarry. The sight moved the old man to relenting pity. "There, there," he said, "little man, I didn't really mean you were brought up in a barn." "That's just it!" retorted the kid. "I was brought up in a barn, and every time I see a jackass it makes me think of it."—Philadelphia Record.

TRUSTS AND PATRIOTS.

With the American steel trust adding its facile ingenuity to the abilities of Cuban statesmen it will be strange if the insular patriots do not almost persuade us to give them anything they want—reciprocity, free sugar, free tobacco, free anything—even if we have to destroy an infantry or two of our own to do it.

NOT A NATIONAL BANK.

Conductor Makes Change in Small Coin for Six Mill.

One of those thoughtful women who present a $10 bill on a street car for their five-cent fare received a lesson the other day which she is not apt to forget. She handed the bill to the conductor with an air of innocent uncomfort which was just a little too pronounced to be natural. The conductor, a young fellow, unlike most of his kind, made no protest. The woman looked relieved, in spite of herself, as he accepted the money and retreated to the rear platform of the car to make change. It was fully ten minutes later before the young man strode into the car, holding both hands before him, as if to form a cup. "Here you are, madam," he announced, in a loud voice which attracted the attention of the other passengers. "Here's the change for that $10 bill. I'd advise you to count it and make sure it's all right." Saying this, he opened his hands, and poured a stream of dimes, nickels and cents into the woman's lap. "Oh, oh!" gasped the woman, as she gathered up her dress to prevent the coins falling on the floor. "Why, this is dreadful. I can't get all this money in my purse. Haven't you larger change than this?" "No, ma'am," responded the conductor promptly. "That's the best I can do." "But I thought you could give me bills," protested the woman. "I'm sorry, madam" said the conductor, "but you have no right to think so. I ain't no national bank."—New York Times.

A NEW REAL ESTATE AGENCY

I am about to start a real estate business in Charlevoix.

I believe in Charlevoix.

I believe that many more people would make Charlevoix their summer home if they knew its attractions and knew at what reasonable rates lots for building purposes could be secured here.

One of the principal features of my business will be in the line of inducing outsiders to settle here permanently or to buy lots and build homes for summer occupancy.

To accomplish this I would like those who have property for sale to put the same in my hands and I will do my best to find customers.

. . . The Jones Chain Mower

Supreme on every Meadow.

The Modern King of all Grass Cutters.

It makes no noise—the power other mowers waste in racket is here applied to cutting grass.

It cuts the cleanest. Its cutter-bar hugs the ground closely, either end will freely rise or fall into depressions—saves every inch of grass.

Stripped of non-essentials, a simple power-producing unit of up-to-date improvements, this Jones Mower is easily managed by a boy—your lightest team will pull it through the season and grow fat.

If you love to tinker "fixin up" machinery don't buy a "PLANO," but if you want your crop cut cleanest, quickest, cheapest, look into this.

HE GETS AWAY AGAIN.

GENERAL DE WET ESCAPES FROM BRITISH FORCES.

He Is Almost Surrounded by Kitchener's, Methuen's and Bullers Columns in the Barkamsvel Successful Undertaking of Crossing Westerns Lines.

Pretoria, July 30.—Gen. De Wet, the Boer commander, has escaped from the British forces under Generals Kitchener, Methuen and Buller, and is now in the Barkamsvel district, southeast of Pretoria. The British had hoped to capture the Boer leader, who was hemmed in on all sides, but he succeeded in slipping through the British lines, which extended for 40 miles.

Lord Kitchener, who was in the field with the British forces, telegraphed from Barkamsvel that the British had been outwitted by the Boers, who had broken through the British lines at a point where they were not expected to be found.

The British had 20,000 men in the field, and the Boers had 2,000 men. The British had been preparing for the capture of De Wet for some time, and had thought that they had him in a trap from which there was no escape. The British had been in hot pursuit of the Boer leader for some days, and had hoped to force him into a position from which he could not escape. The British had thought that they had him in the Vaal Krantz mountains, but he slipped through their lines and escaped.

Sampson Dying.

From the Chicago Inter Ocean.

The American people were unjust to Grant, but they made amends. They were cruel to Sherman, but they repented and honored him.

Grant, just after Shiloh—misrepresented, slandered, humiliated, pursued—was as pathetic a figure as ever stood before the bar of public opinion. Grant, after Appomattox, after his two terms as President, after his tour abroad, and in his last hours at Mount McGregor, is one of the finest figures in American history.

Sherman, denounced as a lunatic in 1861, had few friends among the people of the North, but after the march to the sea, after his record had been made and he stood at the bar of public opinion, the people were all his friends, and when he came to die there was none to belittle his fame.

Rear Admiral Sampson, slowly dying in Washington, is today before the bar of public opinion, asking no more than Grant asked after Vicksburg, no more than Sherman asked after the surrender of Johnston. He had a record of forty five years' service in the navy, with not a single questionable act charged against him. He was a fighting officer in the civil war. He was distinguished for his efficiency, resourceful activity, technical initiative, his high character, and his unswerving patriotism in all the years that followed it until he was called to high command at the beginning of the war with Spain.

When Admiral Sicard retired from the command of the North Atlantic squadron, Captain Sampson of the Iowa was designated his successor by the President, on recommendation of the naval board. He took command. The fitness of the appointment was recognized in the navy and out of it. As commander-in-chief of the largest war fleet ever gathered in American waters, he made no mistakes. He neglected no details. He was not accused by his most watchful enemies of indifference or inactivity. Wherever his instructions were followed there was success for the American arms, and at last the most formidable fleet of Spain was destroyed and the war brought to an end by the vessels under his command.

This is the record. The unfortunate controversy as to Admiral Schley's part in the naval battle of Santiago has no bearing on it. All that has been written in the course of the controversy has not changed one of the foregoing statements of fact. The record is there to stand for all time.

But the controversy has blinded the American people to the facts. It has excited prejudice and provoked vituperation until the same sort of storm that almost broke the heart of Grant in 1862 has actually broken the heart of the man who commanded the North Atlantic squadron in the war with Spain.

He has been commended by the President. He has had the support of his old comrades of the navy. He has been complimented by naval men abroad. But he is dying in the consciousness that a majority of the people whom he has served have only hard words for him.

The spectacle is as pitiable as any in American history. There has been nothing like it. When Grant's life hung in the balance Congress hastened to put him on the retired list with the full rank of General. When Sheridan was on his death bed Congress hurried through the measure that gave him the rank held by Grant and Sherman.

With Sampson dying there are Congressmen snarling at every mention of his name, disease on them.

Petoskey Record.

Petoskey Record: Admiral Schley has lost a good many friends by his course since the Court of Inquiry. He has proved by his posing as a hero in swinging around the circle, that his conceit is boundless, and that his armor of vanity is thick that even finding of the court did not penetrate it. Those finding conclusively prove that Schley is not a man to be trusted as a fleet commander, as on the points bearing upon his conduct as squadron commander, the Court was unanimous. Admiral Schley had better retire from his assumed position at the front and center of the public stage.

FROM GEORGIA.

Ex-Senator Wilkinson Tells Us All About The Sunny South.

Trenton, Ga., February 12th, 1902.
Editor Sentinel:

Thinking our many friends in Charlevoix and vicinity might be interested in some of our experiences since we left the north, and also like to know more of this land of sunshine and historic associations, I thought I would prepare somewhat on the space of your valuable paper for their benefit.

Myself and wife left Charlevoix January 28th in the midst of the blizzard then raging, and in our run south had a marked example of the varied climate changes that are experienced in traveling from north to south. The storm was raging severely with some nasty two feet down until we got beyond Traverse City. At Baldwin the snow was and over six to eight inches deep, and at Grand Rapids there was not sufficient for sleighing. We stayed over night at the Rapids, left there on the early morning train, and from Kalamazoo to northern Indiana we found but little snow, in places scarcely sufficient to cover the ground. At Fort Wayne, Ind., the snow began to get deeper as we went south until Cincinnati was reached where there was more snow than we had seen south of Traverse City. The snow was piled in the streets where it had been shoveled from the walks.

It had not stormed but little after we had passed Indianapolis until we had reached Bloomington, Ind., when it began to rain which continued from there to southern Tennessee. We found the snow quite deep well through the State of Kentucky. The rain froze as it fell, covering everything with ice, making it very slow traveling for the train, as every time we stopped it would take some time for the engine to get under way, it would back up then run forward as far as possible, would repeat this until it got under headway, and of course our progress was very slow.

Through Kentucky and northern Tennessee the ice broke down shade and fruit trees also telegraph and telephone wires, stopped the electric cars and the papers estimate the damage in last season at over one million dollars. Owing to the storm and ice our train was nearly three hours late at Chattanooga, making connections south so we had to wait all day until the 7:30 p. m. train which reached us to Trenton about 8 p. m. in a drenching rain.

Professor J. B. Allen was on the train and seemed to know all at the train and escorted us to our rooms, in the Lee House, near the depot where we stayed until we left the railroad, the valley and Lookout Mountain.

Trenton is a small town of some two hundred inhabitants, situated on be Alabama & Great Southern Railroad in Lookout Valley, is noted only for its mineral springs which is reported to possess wonderful healing properties, especially for kidney and stomach troubles, and also as the county seat of Dade county, Georgia.

Lookout Valley extends from the Tennessee river near Chatanooga in a south southeasterly direction into Alabama, is from four to ten miles wide, is thickly settled and has many nice farms which of course have the general appearance of the south.

Lookout Mountain which ranges from one thousand to eighteen feet high runs parallel with the valley on the east for seventy miles, and Sand Mountain six hundred to fourteen hundred feet high runs parallel on the west.

Lookout river said to be well stocked with fine fish, winds its way through the valley along the base of Lookout Mountain.

You look from the windows of the Lee House and to the north see Lookout Mountain with its lofty summit and on the east and west Lookout and Sand Mountains with their tops at times hid in the clouds and at other times their rocky ledges clearly defined in the beautiful sunlight, and the valley with its villages and farm houses and the railroad winding its way near the center, and you have a picture that is scarcely equaled in this country except in the mountains of the west.

The mountains here are filled with coal and the finest of iron ore, which is especially easy of access and all say the soil is good for crops and especially adapted to all kinds of fruits and my impression is the; there is no more promising field for northern push and capital than there is here in northern Georgia and Alabama.

Near here in every direction are historic places at the results of the war with the South, and there are magnificent canyons and gorges and a great cave rivaling the mammoth cave of Kentucky, all of which we expect to visit and explore as returning health and strength will admit, and I expect to examine and study the resources of this wonderful country and I shall be glad to from time to time give the readers of the SENTINEL my impressions of what I see and hear.

We wait vagerly for the appearance of the SENTINEL as its news items gives us so much of the news at home.

We were pained when we learned of the death of our near neighbor, Mrs. Lindsay, and the friends have our sympathy.

As I write the sun is shining brightly with the thermometer above freezing and every since we came, while it has been cold nights, which all say here is caused by the cold blizzards of the north, it has thawed during the day time and they tell us we shall soon see the finest of weather.

We are making the most of the water and pure air and sunshine and are feeling much better than when we came and hope and expect to receive great benefit from our trip, in health, and a general knowledge of this wonderful south land.

H. H. WILKINSON.

HEAD NOISES EASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

"Gentlemen: Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your invention, I will now give you my history. I was deaf in both ears for eight years, the drums of both ears were gone, my right ear began losing, and then kept on getting worse, until I had only a little hearing in my left ear.

"I employed specialists for patients, for three months—six hours every morning, consulting a noted physician, among others, the professor-in-ear specialist of this city, who tried me into one of his operations could do me no good. I was then advised to try your invention, which I did, and the result had the hearing in the affected ear restored to normal condition, and I can now hear the ticking of a watch, the whisper of a voice, and the rustling of a silk dress, as well as ever I could, and I am now cured of the head noises, which I had for years, and which were worse than the deafness, and which I thought would never cease. Yours, etc., F. A. WERMAN, Baltimore, Md."

TENNYSON'S EGOTISM.

The Famous Poet Was Fully Aware of His Transcendent Qualities.

The London Academy reprints from Charles Stewart's recently issued autobiography, "Brainstorms of Genius," the following letter to Sir Edmund Gosse, dated, Feb. 1886, "the following conference of Tennyson: 'With Alfred Tennyson in his later years I had frequent opportunities of meeting, both in London and at his country home. Personal intimacy with great authors is dangerous experiment, especially with great poets, for their imaginative writings have stimulated one's ideas about their personality until one foolishly self expects to find their genius displaying itself in every word and action of their daily life. Tennyson fulfilled such an unreasonable ideal perhaps as well as any man could, for his personal appearance, with which every one is familiar, was, of course, magnificent, and his manners and habits of life were dignified, if a little prettily eccentric. But the admiration which he received from his family and friends was somewhat satiating, as have seen Mrs. Greville, a woman herself of the most brilliant talent, actually prostrate herself on the floor before him, just as I have seen lovers of high rank literally sitting at the feet of Sir Henry Irving. Tennyson would have been more than human if he had realized the effect of this hero-worship. A little piece of praise was the day standing beside his chair, he lifted her up and placed her on his knee and then put her down, saying, 'Now you can say you have sat on Tennyson's knee.' I was shocked at the time, but there was a self-consciousness in the world and in the art which was not infrequently to be observed in the poet."

To The Point.

Repealing the birth laws with regard to one sex would help the trust, destroy the best sugar industry and greatly cripple the corn plasters. A combination of several conditions for ten years will foster an industry which, at that time, will produce all the sugar the people of the United States can consume.—Clinton (Mo.) Republican.

ARISTOCRACY.

The Nobility Which Wearer Out Opposition Is the Best.

There are all degrees of nobility, but amid the toil and giddiness of people one looks round, as for a tower of strength, on some self-dependent mind, who does not go astray for an estimate, and has long ago made up its conclusions that it is impossible to fail. The great Indian sages had a lesson for the Brahmin, which every day returns to mind, "All that depends on another gives pain; all that depends on itself gives pleasure; in those few words lie the definition of pleasure and pain." The noble mind is here to touch on that failure is a part of success. Prosperity and pound-cake are for very young gentlemen, whose such things content but a brief, a man's success is made up of failures, because he experiments and ventures every day, and "the more fails he gets, moves faster on;" defeated till the time, and yet to victory bent. I have heard that in horsemanship he is not the good rider who never was thrown, but rather that a man never will be a good rider until he is thrown; then he will not be haunted any longer by the terror that

MRS. BELVA A. LOCKWOOD.

Mrs. Belva A. I desire, also, to say not suffered from catarrh, but that it has no evil effects." Mrs. Lockwood's residence is Washington, D. C.

CONGRESSMAN CUMMINGS, OF NEW YORK CITY.

Hon. Amos J. Cummings, of New York, says: "Peruna is a good for catarrh. I have tried it and know it. It relieved me immediately on my trip to Cuba, and I always have a bottle in reserve. Since my return I have not suffered from catarrh, but if I do I shall use Peruna again. Meantime you might send me another bottle."

GENERAL JOE WHEELER.

Major General Joseph Wheeler, commanding the cavalry forces in front of Santiago, and the author of "The Santiago Campaign," in speaking of the great catarrh remedy, Peruna, says: "I join with Senators Sullivan, Roach and McEnery in their good opinion of Peruna. It is recommended to me by those who have used it as an excellent tonic and particularly effective as a cure for catarrh."

Catarrh has already become a national curse. Its ravages extend from ocean to ocean. More than one-half of the people are affected by it. Catarrh is a systemic disease. Peruna is a systemic remedy. Peruna cures catarrh by removing the cause. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O., for free book.

Miss Marion Cunningham, the Popular Young Treasurer of the Young Woman's Club of Emporia, Kans., has This to Say of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: — Your Vegetable Compound cured me of womb trouble from which I had been a great sufferer for nearly three years. During that time I was very irregular and would often have intense pain in the small of my back, and blinding headaches and severe cramps. For three months I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and aches and pains are as a past memory, while health and happiness is my daily experience now. You certainly have one grateful friend in Emporia, and I have praised your Vegetable Compound to a large number of my friends. You have my permission to publish my testimonial in connection with my picture. Yours sincerely, Miss MARION CUNNINGHAM, Emporia, Kansas."

MARINE NOTES.

The work of fitting out the steamers Illinois and Charlevoix has been commenced at Manistee.

A new chart in colors of the straits of Mackinac has just been issued and is now on sale at the United States lake survey office, 33 Campau building, Detroit, Mich., at 13 cents per copy.

A shake-up has occurred in the Northern Michigan Transportation Company's steamer City of Charlevoix, and an entirely new roster of officers will come out in her next spring. The new captain will be Hod Richardson, and the engineer Henry Bitton, who was second engineer in the Illinois last year.

The supervising inspectors of steam vessels have completed their annual session in Washington. Several important changes were made in the regulations affecting traffic on the lakes. The law provides that when a steamer and consort come to anchor a red light must be placed at both the bow and the stern of the consort, so that other vessels will have a warning not to run over towline and foul the wheel. Another is that in case of danger the signal shall be not "several short whistles, but five or more."

A dispatch from Washington says "A bill in the interests of lighthouse keepers was introduced by Representative Maynard to-day. It makes the salaries of the keepers $60 a month and assistants $40, but the more important feature is the provision that after ten years' continuous service keeper and assistants who become disabled shall be pensioned on half pay. Discretionary power is given the secretary of the treasury to determine who shall be entitled to pensions.

Several weeks ago the owners of the steamer Oriental Agitator of this port, made application to the Commissioner of navigation at Washington to change the name of the boat to "Beaver," yesterday Capt. Campbell received notice through the Grand Haven custom house that the petition had been granted. The Captain will now proceed to erase, remove, eliminate, obliterate and destroy everything suggesting "Agitator," and in black and gilt letters will appear "Beaver," in honor of the other end of the route.

Representative Hanbury of New York has introduced a bill provoking that when any keeper or member of a lifesaving or lifeboat station shall have served at least twenty years continuously or who shall have arrived at the age of 55 years, or who be so disabled by reason of a wound or injury received or disease contracted in the life saving service in the line of duty, shall be retired and during the remainder of his life shall receive one half of the salary which he was drawing at the time of retirement. The petition for retirement shall be filed with secretary of the treasury, who shall have full authority to pass upon the same.

A sensation is brewing for the owners of lumber tonnage, and if present plans carry, about one third of this class of vessel property will have to go out of business during the coming season. From a reliable source it was learned last evening that the insurance companies, at their coming meeting are going to rate out all class III boats and will not issue policies upon them. From the same source it was learned that the inspection for insurance purpose on all coats classed A2½ will be so severe that but few of them will be able to stand it and will be placed in the III class and so refused. This action, if it goes through, will have the effect of forcing about one-third of the present lumber carriers out of the business, as they will not be able to get cargoes when insurance can be secured upon the vessels.

Speaking of the recent sale of the schooner Lizzie to ocean service the Milwaukee Wisconsin says: "The route laid out by the new owners is between Brownsville, Texas, and New Orleans. The cargoes to New Orleans will be oil, and from New Orleans, merchandise. The oil, of course, will be carried in barrels as the schooner is not in shape for tank service. The purchasers are on the lookout for several more like schooners for service on the Gulf. On the face of vessels are over, but they are now badly needed in the coasting trade along the Gulf of Mexico. It is thought there is no particular danger in making the long run on the ocean from the mouth of the St. Lawrence, as the schooner is in good sailing shape, and it is said that she could easily double Cape Horn and make San Francisco all right if it was required to take her to the Pacific.

At a meeting of the local lodge of the Licensed Tugmen's Association last week the scale of wages was raised to $100 per month for engineers and $110 for captains. The Association does not, as its name implies, confine its membership to tugmen; licensed masters and engineers of all classes are eligible. The above action, therefore, is being much discussed. The tugmen proper claim that wages here have always been lower than at any other port, and that the new association regulation regarding tow barges will very largely increase towbarge earnings. The fish tug and passenger boat owners, on the other hand, claim that it is an injustice to them, that the association cannot make any regulations that will put fish in their nets, or swell the passenger lists. But, of course, it don't do any good to kick. The association is master of the situation. They claim that they are only coming up to the scale at all other points. And there you have it.

There is again a move on the part of the Buffalo and Tonawanda lumbermen to combine on the chartering of vessels, as was done in 1899. The taking of practically all craft that season through a single charter agent is known to have hurt the owners of lumber carriers and it will again, if rates should naturally be weak. The worst feature of his practice to the carrier is that it hits him when he is carrying lumber at a low rate, while with rates stiff as they were last season it is practically impossible to maintain such a lumber. Then it was to pieces last season, and it is likely to do the same now. Lumbermen will not wait for each other when they see the pressing need of tonnage. It is only when the vessel owner has to cease and beg for a cargo that the bargain is strong. All reports of cargoes for the lumber fleet last season are favorable to the owner. A few most of which was wrecked last fall is said have earned 25 per cent in spite of the disaster, and others made considerably more than that. Rates are sure to be stiff all next season unless the lumber trade is far less brisk than it is now expected to be.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor.

The Union "Willard Memorial" service at the M. E. church last Sunday evening was well attended.

The Ladies Aid Sample Sale was a very interesting affair, productive of social intercourse, cordiality, friendship and entertainment as well as netting the ladies considerably over $100. The society is well pleased with the results and grateful for help so generously given by the merchants, musicians and all other who in any way aided in making the occasion pleasant and profitable.

A Sacred Concert will be given Sunday evening, consisting of anthems, sacred sanctus, choral responses and quartette. Also a brief sermon on the Spiritual Value of Sacred Music. The subject of morning sermon will be "Phylacteries" showing the superstitious ideas associated with them and the purposes of which they were worn by Greeks, Romans and Jews. Present day Phylacteries will not be overlooked.

The Pulpit and Masonry.

We concede that it is a delicate and precarious business for the press to criticise the pulpit. The fealty of a Christian to his church and pastor is a sacred relation, and one that is closely related to family consanguinity.

But the pulpit, like the press, deals with public questions. The press is not above criticism, neither is the pulpit. When the preacher unjustly criticizes a man or a set of men individually or collectively, there should be some means of defense, and there is.

At the last Sunday evening services at the Methodist church, the pastor, Rev. A. F. Nagler, took for his text, "Come Ye out from among them; separate yourselves from the World."

Most pastors whom we have heard preach from this text, used it as an exhortation to those who were absorbed in the frivolities and vices of the carnal world, to come forth into the light—the effulgent light of salvation through Jesus Christ the Savior.

But Mr. Nagler applied it unequivocally to secret societies, and especially Masonry. Now, one of the chief things taught in a Masonic novitiate is "never to enter into argument with those who, through ignorance and ridicule Masonry, Masonic secrets and champions—no defenders.

But in the discourse Mr. Nagler made these statements concerning the Masonic obligation, and was promptly corrected by a Methodist Mason who was present listening to the sermon, and had subrepresented, a thing which a Christian minister should never do.

Now as to the Catholic Methodist church and Masonry. The first pastor ever appointed to this charge was a Master Mason—Hev. J. Gulick; the second was not; the third was a zealous Mason, and the fourth, coming through the "sublime ages" of this church there were more Masons than non-Masons, and they were all Christian gentlemen.

Going back from this pastorate; Mr. Nagler's predecessor, Dr. Hallenbeck, was a Royal Arch Mason; his predecessor, Mr. Harmes was a Mason; Mr. Harmes' predecessor, Mr. Iddings, was a Royal Arch Mason, and the predecessor of Mr. Iddings was a Knight Templar, and all were Christian gentlemen.

Masons have sometimes been the name of Deity; it incubates doctrines of purity of life, rectitude of conduct, and devotion to country and family. In no way does it run a contra-wise with doctrines taught by the orthodox church.

Now, why should the pulpit be made a tribunal for passing judgment upon men? Why should the fealty of an ordinary Christian church be made to do what a papal bull did centuries ago?

"The greatest and best of men in all ages have been Masons, and have not deemed derogatory to their dignity, to patronize its assemblies, or practice its arts." Washington, Garfield, McKinley, and a host of others great in their country's history have been high in Masonic councils, and have been proud of it.

Masonry has always taught that we should "never mention the name of God but with that reverential awe that is due from the creature to the Creator."

The higher degrees of Masonry—the orders of Christian Knighthood—makes "the life, the death, resurrection and ascension of our divine Savior" the chief element in its work, and the Lord's Prayer is as essential in a Templar's conclave as it is in a Methodist church.

Yet the pastor of the Charlevoix Methodist church condemns Masonry and calls it votaries hypocrites.

We try to be charitable to those whom God hath not endowed with those mental faculties which, when combined, constitute what is known as common sense. Among this lik is always to be found the critics and enemies of Masonry. A few—only a few—of these are teachers of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and for the sake of that sacred calling, we are sorry it is so.

But Mr. Nagler's "Sermon" was an insult to some of the best citizens of Charlevoix, and we are much mistaken if they do not resent it.

NEEDS OF THE SOUTH

SIGNS OF AN ECONOMIC WAKENING PLAINLY VISIBLE.

Democratic Newspapers Are Beginning to Consider the Value of the Principles of Protection as Applied to Southern Industry and Agriculture.

A number of newspapers published in southern cities are engaged in a discussion which is certain to be productive of good results. It is a healthful sign when Democratic newspapers in that part of the country fail to discuss tariff matters as related to the interests and welfare of their own people. That is what is now going on. It should be kept up. Southern people are, as a rule, averse to taking their political cues from Republican newspapers, but they are willing to receive argument when advanced by journals of their own political faith. In this way they are ready to admit some new ideas on the tariff question—ideas new to them, but very old and very strongly in favor in other parts of the country.

A considerable portion of the Democratic press of the South seems to have awakened to the fact that the Hensleitian doctrine of protection to domestic labor and industry is worth while considering, in spite of the fact that it is Republican doctrine. Those newspapers have begun to suspect that the protective tariff is not a sectional affair—not, as Calhoun used to preach, after he turned free trader, a device for the enrichment of the North at the expense of the south, but a policy which builds up and benefits all parts of the country. We find evidences of this gratifying discovery in a recent issue of the Charleston News and Courier, a rockribbed Democratic paper, as follows:

"The Louisiana delegation, it need not be said, is wholly consistent with itself in supporting the application of high tariff to the products of the foreign Philippines, and it is right in so doing, if it is to defend agricultural sugar interests of the South and West being bartered to make a recipiocity holiday for the manufacturing interests of the East. And the delegations from Western beet states will doubtless be forced to be of the same mind. Let well enough alone; or, if the holy tariff must be sealed, let it be sealed even."

Commenting on this expression the New Orleans Item says:

"This is in line with Senator McLaurin's views and indicates that those South Carolina lies become the foremost cotton manufacturing state of the South, her views are getting back to those entertained by John C. Calhoun before the days of slavery agitation. And yet, notwithstanding the necessity for a protective duty to defend and build up our cotton mills, we find every Democrat in the house except three Louisiana men voting to break down the tariff wall and let the products of a hundred fertile islands and ten millions of cheap laborers into the United States in competition with our sugar and cotton."

The "Item" then proceeds to remind the Democrats of the Southern states that they are justly and severely reproached on the tariff question in congress. It points out that the cotton grower is as much interested in a protective tariff as the sugar grower in the Philippines can grow in not yet known, but it is certain that it can be grown in these islands with native and Chinese labor, as easily as it is now grown in China, in the olden days we used Nankins, or nankeens, as it was called, in this country, for clothing, and with the tariff wall removed we may again find it cheaper to get cotton goods from Nankin and Manila The New Zealander, emulating his ancestors from the rules of London bridge, was looked upon as an amusing absurdity of Macaulay's, but it is not beyond the bounds of credibility to imagine the sunburned Manilans selling sugar and cotton.

Quite in the same vein the New Orleans "Picayune," a staunch Democratic newspaper, remains the action of Southern Democrats in Congress in refusing to act with Louisiana's representative in defending Southern agricultural and industrial interests against the unfair competition of cheaper labor in the Philippines, in Cuba, or anywhere else. Says the "Picayune":

"If raw sugar were allowed to come in from abroad free of duty the sugar producers of Louisiana and the West, not being able to compete with the sugars of Europe and the tropics, made with pauper labor would be driven out of business; but since the raw sugar, as it is imported, has to be refined in order to fit it for use, it would get to the Sugar Trust two cents cheaper, but there is no evidence that it would reach the consumers any cheaper than at present. It is not to be supposed that the Sugar Trust is operating only in order to give the people sugar at reduced prices. Nobody has any grounds for the belief that any manufacturing trust is a philanthropic institution, and it is difficult to believe that anybody in Louisiana outside of the trust wants to put money into the coffers of that powerful and greedy concern at the expense of the home sugar producers."

This is the right sort of talk, and there is going to be more of it. It is an edifying spectacle to see Southern Democrats arguing with each other on the tariff question. In such agitation our diversity of opinion has the South's best hope of reaching a sound, common-sense, level headed conclusion in favor of protection and prosperity.

Minister Plenipotentiary, and Heathen Extraordinary.

Wu-Ting-Fang, Chinese Minister to the United States, should be given his passports, and free transportation to the flowery kingdom. History records instances where for less offenses against American hospitality, ministers have hastily packed their baggage and departed under the displeasure of the government and people.

Wu-Ting-Fang is a heathen. He has, by years of contact with civilization, acquired an Anglo Saxon veneer; he has learned our language; he has been taught how to sit at the banquet table, and knows how to talk after the wine and walnuts have been disposed of. So has the parrot.

The Chinese Minister has been junketed about the country, wined and dined and petted, until he has the notion stowed away under his pigtail, that he is a necessary adjunct to the United States government; that he has been specially ordained by Confucius and a few other heathen gods, to regulate the governmental policies of this country to which he is accredited by the "Son of Heaven."

One would naturally think that when he acquired the use of our language and our post prandial accomplishments, he would also acquire the manners and common amenities of decency that obtain here.

But the minister, given much rope, by an amused people, scatters insults right and left; criticizes our legislation; abuses our press, and in divers ways makes a fool of himself.

SCHOOL COMPE COLUMN.

A. M. CROW, CORR'N.

We have been asked several times how far a teacher's authority extended over the pupils of the school. We have been of the opinion that the teacher's control of the child begins when the child reaches the school premises and ends when the child reaches home.

Law puts sents the child to school and is responsible for the acts of the child until the school premises are reached when the teacher assumes control, and has authority over the actions of the child until safely at home again.

But, the Court of Appeals of St. Louis in a decision rendered recently says: "A teacher has authority over his pupils, not only in school but on the way to school and from school." In this case, a pupil refused to accompany another pupil home as directed by the teacher, and was expelled. The boy's father appealed to the school board and the board sustained the teacher. The case was then carried up through two courts with the above decision. The teacher's authority does not cease when the pupil leaves the school premises. School teachers should confer residing benefit by teaching the consumer principles of etiquette to the boys and girls here and on the street, at home and in the society of others; the respect due their elders, and the honor and veneration due parents and aged people. A writer has said: "Gentlemen and ladies—even if they cannot spell every word in the dictionary, and correctly a column of figures seventeen rows wide and nineteen lines deep, and perhaps never heard of one Solon or Solon, or can tell where one American City of Gotham is located—are honored and respected by all, high and low."

WOOL AND TARIFF.

WHY CHANGES IN DUTY SCHEDULES ARE UNDESIRABLE.

Unstable Conditions Would Be Injurious Alike to Manufacturers and to American Farmers Engaged in Sheep and Wool Growing.

Most opportune is the publication of this year's domestic wool clip by Mr. S. N. D. North of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers. Reciprocity schemes and methods for the benefit of the industry at the expense of others have thrown upon Congress an avalanche of literature, and some of the recommendations indicate that selfish constituents are willing to sacrifice the sheep raisers if they can thereby secure personal profit. That no change is desirable in the tariff on wool will appear obvious after a little study of experiences in this industry under the last three revenue bills. During the wise operations of the McKinley law domestic output increased and the home production of wool rose to 318,236,152 pounds in 1892, while imports were but 85,152,595 pounds. Immediately after the enactment of the Wilson bill foreign wool was thrown upon this market in such abundance that imports rose to 556,852,068 pounds in one year, an increase of 536 per cent over the receipts from abroad under the protective tariff, and exceeding even the high record of domestic yield. Meanwhile the home grower found no profit in competing with Australian and other cheaply raised wool, so that sheep were sold for mutton and investors in the industry lost large sums of money. The annual yield in the United States steadily decreased until only 268,221,275 pounds were clipped in 1897. With the resumption of a reasonable tariff against cheap foreign fleeces came a renewal of domestic interest in the sheep industry, and we brought a larger total, until the report just issued shows a clip of 302,562,559 pounds.

This question of prices has been the most important one in connection with the agitation, although less bewildering when studied in comparison with the records of imports and general business conditions. According to the circular of Louis Ehrich, the average price of domestic wool averaged 22.78 cents a pound on May 1, 1892, when the country was prosperous under a sound tariff law and woolen mills were actively engaged, by September 1, 1895, the full effect of free trade was being felt, and the average price had sunk to 12.22 cents a pound. This fall of 46 per cent in prices was not only due to the competition of outside production, but also to the disastrous condition of all industries and business under low tariffs, which rendered the wage earners unable to purchase freely of warm clothing. With the reversal of tariff policy and restoration of a duty on wool those cause prompt recovery in this business, together with such confidence that the speculative influence became prominent. Despite large stocks which was tributary to a decline in the number, 1899, the average price was 19.24 cents, nearly two cents higher than in 1892. That the advance was obtained too rapidly and was reversed in the reaction to 17.66 cents, July 1, 1901. Numerous and heavy failures were precipitated by these erratic fluctuations, not only among growers, but dealers and manufacturers. Manufacturers must of necessity follow materials upward, and when wide variations are directly traceable to tinkering with the tariff.

It is not difficult to understand why the recovery in all departments of this industry has been slow, and why withdrawals of foreign wools have distinctly satisfactory conditions prevailed. In addition to the enormous quantity of woolen goods of all kinds that were manufactured from foreign fleeces, there was naturally followed by severe reaction. Even after the flood of cheap foreign wool subsided, home producers and holders of domestic wool found it difficult to adjust their positions all out of proportion to the gains made in prices and the improved prospects. Consumptive demand, it is true, was greatly increased by the sudden fall in prices, but the rise in the price of woolen goods was slow, manufacturers were compelled to resort to the usual method under the circumstances, which was a reduction in quality. Shoddy and cheap substitutes were used, while adulteration with cotton was general. Ultimately the lack of orders produced a salutary effect on the wool market, and prices were brought down to a point where the mills could do business at a profit, within a very short time the situation has developed signs of an encouraging nature, and a slight recovery in prices is recorded. Manufacturers have ordered unusually full assortments of wills until well into next year, and within a few weeks there was a reduction in material in the Boston market established a new record for a single week's transactions, and the Government statistics produced the largest week's shipment on record. At the same time there is evidence that supplies will be ample for all needs, and the Government report for Mr. North's report places the stock at 659,384,802 pounds.

In the light of these facts it must be seen that this industry is in no condition for a revival of revision discussions if special advantages might accrue to any of the interests involved.

Careful Arrangements. Every state and territory in the Union has a place in the Lewis and Clark Exposition, from little Rhode Island is officially credited with over 1,000 head, while half a dozen states average about three million each. Situation against greater disadvantages than any other industry, at least wool and woolens appear to have established a second position, and capital no longer hesitates to lend its aid to further expansion. At such times it is impossible to overestimate the harm that might be done by disturbing the situation in which lie dormant potentialities of great magnitude.

Unrestricted Reciprocity. To illustrate one-sided reciprocity let us quote Canada. Canada wants free access to our markets, and in return will cheerfully give us free access to hers. Canada has 5,000,000 people; the United States has 80,000,000. Her people can buy of us practically Great Britain does no demand free trade, consequently of wool we would annually buy of her. Though her sheep raisers are protected to a great deal of the North American continent, the wages of her people are so low that she can meet home wool in the United States markets. Of course, if our raisers of sheep could compete with cheap labor, the industry would immediately help Canadian industry, after which there has been practically none for half a century. It is better for the United States to at least give the same rate to the United States and territories, where, despite the fact that we have sixteen times as many people as Canada on a smaller area, there is yet room, with only a small fraction of our magnificent resources developed.—New Haven Palladium.

A Reasonable Reduction. Unprecedented to the glorious prosperity under reciprocity. The Chicago Evening Post pointedly asks: "Are there no industries which are sufficiently established to stand a reasonable reduction of duty?" It may be there are such, but if so, what of it? A "reasonable" reduction of duty would amount to nothing in the settlement of the question. It must be such a reduction as will enable the foreign producer to sell at home and abroad. What the Post clamors for, and what the Protectionists think they should have, is an unreasonable reduction of duty duties; a foolish destructive reduction; one that will enable them to break into this market and undersell domestic producers; such a reduction as would either close our mills and factories, or else lower the American standard of wages and living to a point that disturbs the purchasing capacity and the consumptive power of our wage-earners. That is what the foreigners want. Is it what the Chicago Evening Post wants?

LYNCH A MINSTREL.

NEGRO HANGED BY MOB AT NEW MADRID, MO.

Now Begins Reading a Performance Made a Second Time Rolling Down Hill Before Being Shot Dead—Had Boasted of Killing Two Men.

A crowd of so-called men assembled at the public square in New Madrid, Louis Wright, a negro, who had escaped from custody and had boasted of killing two men, and proceeded to hang him to a limb of a tree. The negro was given time to pray, and some of the whites joined in the prayer. Wright was then given time to make a few remarks, and he said he was innocent, but had confessed to the murders because he was afraid the white people would hang him if he did not. Several times he begged for time to live, but he was told he had had time enough. He said he was sorry he had killed the two men, and he hoped God would forgive him. He said he was a married man, and had a wife and child living in Memphis. He said he was from Memphis, and had been in New Madrid but a few days before his death. The condemned man continued to pray, and to call on the Lord for mercy, and in the midst of his prayer he was jerked from the limb and hanged by the neck until he was dead. The rope did not break his neck, but he died from strangulation. The negro was given a decent burial by the city, which was the last act of kindness shown him by any one.

STILL PRACTICE POLYGAMY.

Report Made to Salt Lake Ministerial Alliance.

Polygamy is still practiced and taught by the Mormons, according to a report adopted unanimously by the Ministerial Alliance of Salt Lake. The report was made by a committee which was appointed to investigate the alleged practice, and will be sent to the judiciary committee of Congress and circulated in the East to further the passage of the anti-polygamy amendment to the constitution. The report is based on the belief that it is known that can be produced in court, if necessary, the testimony of many persons who, either relatively in every sense or in conflict for a number of years, have been the committee members of the church, who declared to be the practice of polygamy among the Mormons to practice polygamy, from Church authority, and who publicly avow, that they intend to continue to practice it, notwithstanding the decision of the highest court.

HANG TWO ARMY DESERTERS.

Americans in Philippines Execute Some Men Who Joined Insurgents.

Edmund A. Dubose and Lewis Howell, deserters from Company E, 9th United States cavalry, who stole arms from the government and joined the insurgent ranks in August, for which they were tried and convicted by a court-martial composed of officers of the Philippines, were hanged at Imbalodon province of Abra, Luzon, P. I., in the presence of 2,000 persons. The execution was orderly. It was witnessed by Capt. Henry H. Wright of the 9th cavalry, commanding the post, and by native officials. The dying prisoners were received, but the relatives refused to take them. The bodies were buried by a jury before which he was tried for murder.

CHICKSHEN GET $900.

Barber at Avilla Captured and Tied While Robbers Blow Safe.

The large general store of S. K. Dunlap at Avilla, Ind., was entered by burglars early the other morning. The safe was blown into splinters and $900 taken, and a large amount in notes were taken. Mr. Dunlap, a brother, returned home from a sleigh ride with a young woman with the intention of having a social chat with them in the store. He was captured and tied in the store, where he was found in the cockscomb completed their work. A bootblacker across the street saw the robbers at work and got his horse ready to make a hasty retreat, but he was unable to interfere. The safe, a wooden one, was completely wrecked in the explosion. There were five robbers.

ROBBED MISS HELEN GOULD.

Daniel Donovan, who, under the name of John O'Neill, has been employed for about a week in the residence of Miss Helen M. Gould, at 579 Fifth avenue, was arrested in Jersey City on the Jefferson Market police court charge of stealing a pair of earrings belonging to his employers to the extent of seventy-five dollars. The complaint was made against the prisoner who was arrested in Jersey City by a police officer, who found on him a pawnbroker's ticket for the pawning of the earrings, and was held in $1,000 bail for the grand jury.

Suicide Under Made Wealthy.

Edwin Hoyne, head of the Western Federation of Miners and leader in the recent strikes in northern Idaho, has been made wealthy through a gift from an unknown admirer, and is now a man who has not to worry about the wolf at the door. He has left Wallace and the Coeur d'Alenes for his home in Butte, where he will live in ease and comfort.

Congress.

The House of Representatives on Wednesday passed the silver bill. The test of strength of the contending forces came on the motion of Mr. Walsworth of New York to refer the bill back to the committee on ways and means with instructions to report the substitute or adversely measure. The motion was defeated by a majority of twenty-one, the vote being 162 to 141. Republicans voted with the majority of the House after the passage of the Wilson tariff bill, and it was supposed beforehand that the silver bill would be passed by the same majority. The bill as it stands gives gold water.

The amending and pruning demand by home consumers for iron and steel products has placed the tariff bill, according to some authorities, close to a tension in steel. The primary cause of this great consumption is the universal prosperity in the United States. If the big year of 1892 had continued so bright a pressure for metals and the new year had not opened so auspiciously this demand would not have arisen. But the consuming capacity of business established railroads to add to track facilities and equipment and manufacturers to expand.

Where the immense export trade was sought a year ago by the makers of iron and steel, the home trade today makes demands they are not able to meet. It shows the capacity of the home mills, yet these demands that furnishing to Europe Germany are under consideration. The German manufacturer, who is apparently now to get rid of their surplus stocks. There is talk of bringing back to this country foundry iron sold in 1901 to European buyers. It is estimated that two-thirds of this year's output of pig iron has already been disposed of. Foreign shipments of pig iron are offered. Eastern producers of pig have shown the advance of 50 cents a ton. The structural and bridge companies declare that the demand for steel for the coming year is so solid ten months ahead.

The huge state of the iron and steel trade is the consuming capacity, not the creation of new plants, but the policy of the mills to continue to avoid a change in prices tends to check activity in that direction. Many manufacturers contend that iron and steel business are advancing prices, although the price comparison is made with the low quotations issued to get from the customers all the orders they could take.

The copper market is quiet. The tone is firm. The big producers of copper are stocked them up for a short time to come and, with the smelter demand which this will lead to, there is a belief that lower prices will not be reached.

The strike in Rhode Island plants of the American Woolen Company still going on. The company is filling its orders with other machinery. The Rhode Island plants turn out only one-seventh of the goods made by the company. The strike has finally decided to cope. Still, the price has not been put up to meet through the year.

Chicago.

Plans for the construction of several downtown buildings were filed in the city building department in view of the Cullerton ordinance requiring the use of fireproof structures. Contracts for structural material, including the steel beams, are in view, and while they add to the already overtaxed supply of structural material, contractors and builders believed they will be able to get the material. Building permits issued in January in Chicago reported a gain of 100 per cent over January, 1894. Improvement in the real estate market is reported.

Cotton is quiet, with the statisticians holding the advantage in the bull side. Sugar cotton are no more active, some manufacturers complain of the supply of immediate needs. Demand for export of cotton has been active. The volume of business in the country last week was the largest of any week for the year, but demand is moderate. The output of New York and Boston shows a large gain over last year. The leather market is active.

The volume of business reported in the mercantile agencies' reviews during the last week by direct wires, interviews with business men, and sundry customs is unusually large. It is natural in such cases to seek directions in which the spring business gets well under way.

Our royal visitor, Prince Henry of Prussia, is going the rounds at a great gait. He will return to his imperial brother with the knowledge that this is a great country, and that its hospitality is one of the greatest things in it. Which is all right. It is only a National characteristic—"Make your self at home; sit down and have some dinner; what will you have to drink?"

Tillman, the irrepressible, assaulted his colleague, Senator McLaurin, on the floor of the Senate the other day, and a most disgraceful scene ensued. McLaurin had very properly branded one of his statements as a "malicious falsehood." Both were declared in contempt, but were latter restored to their rights. The president cancelled Tillman's invitation to the banquet in honor of Prince Henry.

The dealers from whom the potatoes were purchased decline to state the location in this country from which they came, and it is reported they are trying to secure an option on the farm with the intention of prospecting.

The first case of smallpox in East Jordan developed last week, when a "lumberjack" wandered into town from a camp some distance away and took up lodgings at a small boarding house in the village. Complaining of being sick the health officer was at once summoned, and as some symptoms showed the contagious disease, he was at once taken to the pest house at the outskirts of the village and strict quarantine established around the boarding house, after vaccinating its occupants. There is little fear of the spread of the disease, as the officials are taking every precaution possible and have provided for free vaccination.

Hulman is a new township, really not more than one-eighth is settled by actual settlers and its a notorious fact, the great lumbermen by their immense holdings have materially retarded the supplement of the township with four times its population. Last spring at the annual township meeting they voted $250 to plow out the roads in winter. After every storm the roads are all plowed out and the man performing the service gets $3 per day for actual time put in. We have been recently informed by Mr. Hoffman, the clerk, that the services have been done and the winter still remaining that not more than two thirds the funds voted for the purpose will be needed.—Arena.

That old adage, "be sure your sins will find you out" was fully exemplified in an article which appeared in the Central Lake Torch last week. It states that J. C. Larrabee stopped off there to see the town on his way to his home in Muskegon county. He had been in the village only a short time when he met an old acquaintance, who had boarded with him a couple of years ago, in the person of Damon Wolver, now acting in the capacity of barkeeper in Sol Tinker's saloon. Wolver took upon himself the duties of host and exerted himself in every way to entertain his old time friend, even going so far as to spend the night with him in one of the local hostelrys. Larrabee informed Wolver that his wife had deserted him and he had been searching her throughout the State for the past year or two. Wolver tried the console the wronged man with words of sympathy and regret and carried on the part of the innocent to perfection. Larrabee's surprise can well be imagined when in some unaccountable way he became cognizant of the fact that his wife was then in Central Lake and had for over a year been living with Wolver in a small house in the north end of town. A warrant was sworn out upon the charge of adultery for the guilty pair, but they were aware of what was happening and the woman had left in a livery rig for Bellaire. A telephone message was sufficient to warn the authorities and she was detained at that place until the arrival of Officer Hinke, who took her back to Central Lake. The two are out on bail awaiting the time of hearing and Attorney T. W. Newkirk has been employed to conduct their defense.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor.

Communion next Sunday morning.

Next Sunday evening Mr. Hyslop will commence three Sunday evening "talks" on "The Life of Our Savior," reviewing the chief scenes and incidents thereof, and calling to memory some of his choicest sayings. Mr. Hyslop intends to throw onto the canvas about 16 transparencies each night, illustrating his talk. These views are reproductions of the World's Master Pieces of Sacred Art of which some will be colored.

The sermon on "Phylacteries" last Sunday morning was highly commented upon. The Sacred Concert service in the evening was much enjoyed by a large congregation. The choir sang three very beautiful anthems, the A capella Quartette rendered a sweetly soothing piece entitled "On Beaded Knee," and Mr. Fitch's song, "Shadows" of the Evening Hour" was much admired. The anthem and responses were all appropriate and lent much beauty to the service. The pastor spoke on the Spiritual Value of Sacred Music. Miss Mabelle Smith as organist was very helpful to the success of the service. A similar occasion may be expected early in April.

—There is no mistake in saying that the oyster supper given by the Grange at the home of Robert Trimble's on the evening of, Feb. 21, was in every way a grand success. A good sociable time was enjoyed by all. There was a short program consisting of recitations, solos and some instrumental music, in which our Charlevoix friends took a part. Proceeds of the evening $25.00.

—The Charlevoix High School boys have formed an Athletic Club, and in receipt of an invitation from the Ann Arbor club to send a team to the state gathering of high school clubs at that place, May 15th and 16th. The boys want to accept the invitation, and will endeavor to raise the necessary $100 by giving entertainments. Of course our people should encourage the boys in this very sensible enterprise, and we believe they will.

—Bert Smiley, well known here as a former resorter, is in trouble again at Gladwin, Mich., where he publishes a paper. A special from that place says: "An editorial appearing in the Enterprising last week published by Joseph Bert Smiley, editor, just said lawyer, bribe fair to create a sensation. The article stated Smiley's strong disapproval of the re-engagement of E. C. Hambleton as superintendent of the schools next year, contained no word against the gentleman's character or methods of teaching, nor gave any reason for opposition, but threatened to right him so long as he remained in the position. Mr. Smiley's manner of fighting is well known, and as Superintendent Hambleton has given great satisfaction to the patrons of the school many citizens are highly incensed. An indignation meeting was called last evening, at which resolution were adopted denouncing the Enterprise, upholding Superintendent Hambleton, and to rub it in, appointing a committee to consider Voelker's sanity. After the meeting Smiley was hung in effigy by boys."

Again the International Trust.

According to dispatches from Pittsburg, overtures have been made by the glass manufactures of Belgium, through their representative, M. Jules Gernaert, and to the American Window Glass company looking toward the formation of an international glass combination which shall control the world's trade in plate and window glass. The plan proposed, it is stated, is to advance the Belgian prices to meet the American prices and to divide markets. In case the proposed deal is consummated, it will be up to our free trade friends to explain to a waiting public just how the abolition of the tariff on glass will destroy the glass "trusts," so-called.

—Detroit Journal: Judging from the experience of the Wolverine Fish Company, Ltd., of Detroit, the fish business must be very profitable. M. J. Dee is president of the company, which was organized four years ago by himself, and A. M. Hungerford, in connection with the members of the Buckeye Fish Company of Cleveland. It started at 42 Atwater street with only $1,000 capital, and seines a has lines of the finest handling of fish, buy ing take and ocean fish from the fisheries and supplying them to dealers During the first year, on $4,000 capital, the company did a business of $250,000, turning its capital over every week. This year it will sell about $5,000,000 of fish. Each year, besides paying 10 per cent dividends, the company has doubled its capitalization out of the profits of the business, and on May 1 the capital will be raised to $30,000, where it will probably remain. Branches have been established in Selkirk, Manitoba, St. Paul, Chicago, Cincinnati, Louisville, Buffalo, Toronto, and New York, the company's interest in all these branches having been earned out of the original $4,000 investment. Mr. Dee says the company's phenomenal success has been partly due to the powerful backing of the Buckeye Fish Company. Nevertheless he believes that one of its best points is its investment, if that of supplying the people with fish.

—The republican village ticket will be the only one in the field. A citizens caucus was called to meet Tuesday evening at the Kehoe store, but so few attended that no action was taken.

—Charlevoix has a string quintett that is receiving many compliments. It is composed of Forrest Bartholomew, Geo. Hamlin, Ralph Smith, Harker Kirby and Meyer Levinson. The organization is under the leadership of Forrest Bartholomew, and is a "peach."

—Some excitement was created Saturday by a telephone message to Capt. Campbell, from the Beaver mail carriers, at Cross Village, that two men were lost by them going toward the island. The ice had gone out, and the men were supposed to be in great danger. The drift, however, being toward Hog Island, it was hoped that they could get ashore. The names of the men was Gallagher and Boyle, but further identification was not given. The ice having returned, and colder weather having made it firmer, the mail carriers were to have started back Tuesday.

—Andrew B. Dougherty is the republican nominee for President of Elk Rapids. Charlevoix is always glad when honors come to Andrew. He is a Charlevoix boy, and has always, in his personal and official conduct, honored the home of his boyhood days. Of course Andrew will be elected, and for what we here say, we expect some day the coming summer, to receive the keys to Elk Rapids and the freedom of the town. The writer of this was a printer in Elk Rapids 21 years ago, about the time the next president of the town was short dresses.

—The judgment in the slander case of Max Sarlan vs. Martha J. Ayers, taken to the supreme court on appeal from the circuit court for Charlevoix county at the February term 1901, was affirmed with costs Tuesday. Sarlan and Mrs. Ayers for saying that he had taken from the Ayers block certain fixtures belonging to her when he vacated the store. G. J. Dellthorp, of Petoskey, was attorney for Mrs. Ayers and Fitch & Fitch, of Petoskey, acted for Sarlan. The verdict in the circuit court gave Sarlan a judgment of $250 and costs. And now Martha must pay that and the costs of appeal.

—There seems to be a mix-up as to the status rank of George Van Orden. The Charlevoix Sentinel says that he went from East Jordan to Annapolis and is now a lieutenant of marines. One statement or the other is untrue, because officers of the marine corps do not go to the naval academy and are officers of the navy. The organization of the corps is a military one and they have nothing to do with seamanship, though serving on ships and employed for shore fighting.—Petoskey Record. Geo. Van Orden graduated from Annapolis, and was commissioned an Ensign, and as such went to the Philippines. On his own application he was transferred to the Marines with the rank of first Lieutenant. The Record is wrong about Annapolis graduates. Many of them come into the Marines, and we know one who is in the revenue cutter service.

"I do not know much about cattlepen, Major Rochefort," said Bertram, "but I can learn to change that before long. I'm a good hand at learning, I'm sure."

"Well," replied Neil, "something the same as that, only very different. Cattle-pens are a business by themselves, and there's a lot of it. Now, Mr. Bertram, you've had a long day in the saddle, and you've had a few knocks, and I think, seeing that I'm responsible for your being here, you'd better turn in and have a good sleep. If you don't feel like supper, a cup of tea and a slice of bread and dripping is what you need."

"Don't mind me, Major," said Mr. Arnaud, "I'm quite well." Neil looked at him sharply for a moment, and the young man added, "I'm quite well, sir, thank you."

"Well, I'm glad to see you so," said Neil, "but I know what it is to be knocked out by a sudden change of climate. Now, Mr. Arnaud, you look as if you'd had a good day's work, and I think, seeing that Fin said he would be up early to-morrow, you'd better turn in and have a good sleep, too. Fin and I can do all there is to do, and we'll be glad to do it, if you two young gentlemen are tired."

Neil spoke very kindly and politely, but there was a tone in his voice which made the young Frenchman feel that he was being dismissed like a schoolboy, and he flushed with blood.

The excited Cockney boiled again and began to an excitable chorus, "Well, I'm blimed! Ain't we been a day! Ain't we been a day! Ain't we been a day!"

More than ever Cecile Whitman was struck with the youth's beauty, and strange became the fascination with the gaze of his person and the melody of his voice.

"We rode with our friend after breakfast," said Col. Leroy to his son.

"In what direction?" asked Bertram.

"To the new settlement, and danger lies in that path."

"That is not a fair condition of our journey," said Bertram, with a winning smile, "for, as so far we have had no danger at all, I cannot think the time for a change of fortune has come."

Bertram looked over the three white men clustered their arms, now that their musket pouches were full, and stood ready to mount, when Tony brought each a pair of middle-long swing, to be fastened them over the pommels.

"How long has all this been going on? I'd'ly treated mild."

The three men mounted, and as they were about to ride away an Indian and a squaw appeared in their midst.

"Ha, Halpuch!" exclaimed the squaw. The Indian took a bottle, before he spoke still sleeping. How the boy, there, is no gnawing thought to eat in an hour like this! Nature's wonderful, and she demands longer periods of rest. You are still too young to understand this."

"I am twenty-eight, Col. Leroy, but judging by your experience and present feelings the figures should be reversed for me to feel my age at right now."

Col. Leroy sighed, smiled and shook his head, and taking Guide Whitman's arm they walked back to the house, where they found Hortense up and dressed.

Thought of man's nature, Bertram kissed his father, as was his habit when a child, and then shook hands with Cecile good.

More than ever Cecile Whitman was struck with the youth's beauty, and strange became the fascination with the gaze of his person and the melody of his voice.

"We rode with our friend after breakfast," said Col. Leroy to his son.

"In what direction?" asked Bertram.

"To the new settlement, and danger lies in that path."

The three men mounted, and as they were about to ride away an Indian and a squaw appeared in their midst.

The Indian was tall, but with the deep-breasted shoulders that ever betoken immense physical strength and phenomenal powers of endurance.

"Ha, Halpuch! exclaimed the squaw.

The Indian was tall, but with the deep-breasted shoulders that ever betoken immense physical strength and phenomenal powers of endurance.

"Are you going to remain, and to guard the valley while I am gone?"

"My Red Green Bird guard with a watchfulness equal to mine."

The young man bowed to the reclining squaw, bowed in reverence, and stepped lightly to his side. The white man acknowledged the salutation of the Indian, and the young man leaped to the saddle.

Within an hour the mountain was passed. On its summit they had halted, attracted by the presence of a few smoke wreaths and the location of Hebrewtown, and the chief had of course be startled by the fact that marked the site of the new settlement. The sun was shining on the dark green hearts—that filled them with a species of nervousness, though they had ridden, and urge their tresses on to their utmost speed.

"Ha, ha!" cried an hour's ride of Hebrewtown they might have been the triumph, in the great central fire, about which Bob Chalfi and his companions in the surrounding elevations—who at the moment had no more control of it than a broken half—had gathered to consult in a broken half.

"Well, what is, Jim, you see?" asked the colonel, excitedly.

"Indians!" replied Bertram.

"Where?"

"In the huts where the settlement. See, they are now directly in front, and are signalling to their fellows in others of the opposite side—"

"Yes, they are," replied Guide Whitman, "they have discovered us."

"Which by its means implies that they have us in their power, or that our side, in the confusion, has lost a friend and an unbeaten."

Col. Leroy touched spurs to his spirited horse and dashed ahead. Guide Whitman and Bertram were not slow to follow. He was dashing them directly towards the Sioux, now distinctly visible, and, as they could hear the war-cry yells and see the waving of excited arms. The Indians could have taken of unexcitedly the way of a mounted band, and, as Col. Leroy came in sight, with his long hair and beard streaming back on the wind like a sun-god in ruins, the superstitious red men fell back from his advance and left open a clear road to the alarmed settlement.

Bertram had drawn his pistols and no such dread of Leroy and his son, but, fortunately, they were in the rear and turned on the opposite side of the valley, and when the sight of the reinforcements it was nearly impossible to hold them back.

"Yep, Greyson had become alarmed in the absence of his son-in-law, and, as yer complained, he had gathered here, at Hebrewtown, some of the resident fur, the women and children. He realized that this was over but a matter of moments' delay. But he kept his fears to himself, and he ride and lose gave orders down to the women and children.

"Well, Bertram," said Mr. Warren to his country cousin, "what was the first thing that struck you when you came out of town?"

"A trolley car," replied Joshua, "but fortunately I did not be on, me very hard."—Detroit Free Press.

Talmage's Sermon.

Copyright, Louis Klopsch, 1903.

THE Rev. Dr. Talmage in his sermon for last Sabbath morning, taking his text from the Revelation of Jesus Christ, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord," pictured the joy of the redeemed in heaven, and the grief of the bereaved on earth, and showed how the Christian religion is adapted to the emergencies of life and death. The sermon was preached from the pulpit of the Tabernacle, Brooklyn, and was taken down by a stenographer for The Sunday School Times and Christian Work. The following is the sermon:

Death of Fremont E. Lewis.

Seldom has a community been shocked as was Charlevoix last Friday morning when it was announced that Fremont E. Lewis has passed away.

Mr. Lewis, last week Saturday, went to the lumber camps in Manton as usual, returning in the afternoon apparently feeling as well as usual. Saturday evening he was about the hotel office in his usual cheerful mood. About 9:30, as he passed up the stairs to his room, he turned around on the landing and smilingly made a remark to his brother-in-law, Judge Mayne.

As he retired he remarked to his wife that he was conscious of a sharp pain under his left shoulder. At midnight his suffering became more intense and Dr. Armstrong was summoned.

The case rapidly developed into pleuro-pneumonia, and the most unremitting care and treatment followed. Wednesday the symptoms were no more severe, and Thursday morning he seemed to be doing fairly well. Thursday night the condition of the patient became alarming, the disease having reached the heart. Friday morning at seven he became speechless, if not unconscious, and at 10:15 passed away.

Fremont E. Lewis was born in Whitewater 37 years ago. He was the son of Mrs. John Nichols, who survives, by a former marriage, and a brother of Mrs. D. F. Meech. His father was thirty years ago, one of the owners of what is now the Charlevoix Lumber Co. Deceased was, at the time of his death, a member of this corporation, and a director in the Charlevoix County Bank.

The closing of this young, manly, vigorous life touches all hearts. From the roster of our business men there goes out a life that was useful and valuable, and one that gave promise of many years of growing usefulness.

It is only a platitude to speak of his many friends. Notwithstanding the frictions that always attach to industrial enterprises, few who govern men had so many friends.

He was universally popular. His disposition was cheerful, and his greetings were always warm, frank and sincere. He was devoted to his wife and young daughter, and his home life was one to be emulated. The writer of this feels the sharpest taking off as a personal bereavement. It was a case of friendship that could only be broken by the relentless destroyer.

A mother, sister, wife and daughter mourn an irreparable loss, but the memory of a cheerful, industry, active life remains as a heritage to those who loved him in life.

The funeral occurred at 10 o'clock Monday morning from the Congregational church, but with the rites of the Episcopal church, Rev. C. T. Stout, officiating. The Knights of Pythias and the Maccabees, of which deceased was a member attended in escort of honor, as did also the Hathbone Sisters. The floral tributes from societies and personal friends were numerous and beautiful.

The attendance was far beyond the capacity of the church, and many were compelled to return to their homes.

And thus, amid tears and sorrow and heart breakings is laid away from our sight one who, but a few days ago was hopefully looking far afield, along pathways that threaded the flowery bejeweled vista and ended beyond his vision; pathways his feet were not to traverse.

A Basket Ball Game—A New Thing in Charlevoix.

The Charlevoix Athletic Association will give an entertainment at the opera house next Friday evening, March 7. The main feature of which will be a basket ball game. Music, speeches and recitations will also be given.

The object of the Association is to raise enough money to send a crack team to Ann Arbor about the 14th of May. It has the important material along the line of athletics, and we feel that we can make a creditable showing against the high schools of this state. If we can accept the invitation of the Inter-Scholastic League of Ann Arbor and send a number of our best students there, it will be a great advertisement for our high school.

The members of the Association do not want to ask the business men of town, who have so generously helped us in our foot-balls, to help us in this. The boys are going to give entertainments and suppers that any person can go to and get their money's worth. There is plenty of good talent in the high school which will be put to the best advantage.

To send a team to Ann Arbor to meet the teams of the other high schools of this state will advertise Charlevoix as well as the high school of this place. For two years the school board has endeavored to put their high school into university list, so that students could enter any university of this state and take any course he chooses without taking an examination.

Nothing will advertise our school and our town as this game going down to Ann Arbor to show that we can hold our own with any of them.

Come to the entertainment, help your school and spend a pleasant and instructive evening.

Strikes A Rich Find.

"I was troubled for several years with chronic indigestion and nervous debility, writes E. J. Green, of Lancaster, N. The Republican Ticket.

At the republican village caucus Tuesday night, which was one of the largest ever held, the following ticket was nominated.

President—Harry Nichols.
Trustees—E. W. Coulter, H. I. Mc-Millan and Andrew Rose.
Clerk—W. H. McCartney.
Treasurer—J. L. Price.
Assessor—John Ward.

There was never a better village ticket formulated in Charlevoix. President Harry Nichols has served two terms, and has brought to the office the hard headed business sense for which he has always been noted. He has given to the village his best efforts, and has given the people an administration that deserved the indorsement it is duly called for.

Mr. Coulter's re-nomination for trustee was to be expected. Coming up at a time when he was the best man that ever sat on the council, Mr. Coulter is the logical candidate for renomination when he has served his terms as trustee.

McMillan and Rose are two wise and safe men who will do their duty well.

The other nominations, — McCartney, Price and Ward, were endorsements, as all these selections were renominations.

The ticket is an exceptionally good one, and its election is certain.

Weapons in Russia.

When a weapon of any kind is purchased in Russia, a permit must be secured from the local authorities. The name of the man who makes the purchase, with the number of the weapon, is recorded. If the purchaser ever wants to dispose of the weapon he must notify the authorities and cause the transfer to be entered in the books of the firm which sold it. Fifty-Two Much Alike.

Daniel and William Hutchings, twin brothers of Sedgly, Ind., are so much alike that only their wives and children know them apart. A few years ago Daniel sought admission into the Masonic order, but the members, for what they regarded as prudential reasons, instead that William should join also, and the twins were put through together. In their courtable days they are now 52 years old—they used to spark each other's sweethearts and the girls did not know the difference.—Exchange.

Beside, the baby zebra, was turned over to the taxidermist yesterday. The pretty little animal died on Friday. A Sunday School Answer.

The Christian Register reports that the question, "What was the general character of Moses?" drew from one child in a Sunday school the reply: "A gentleman." Not understanding, the inspector asked why. "Please, sir, when the daughter of Jethro went to the well to draw water, the shepherds were in the way; but Moses helped them, and said to the shepherds, 'Ladies first, please.'"

Gum Arabic.

Gum arabic is an exudation from certain species of acacia. In order to obtain the gum, the stem must be cut or perforated so that the juice may exude. In the majority of cases this necessary perforation is accomplished by ants, without whose labors, therefore, the world could not get its supply of gum arabic.

THEY DENOTE DESTRUCTION OF ASSAY OFFICES.

Six Big Establishments Are Blown Up by Miscreants in Colorado—A Very English Speech Made in Parliament at Ottawa, Ontario.

Cripple Creek, Colo., is in a state of terror because of a premeditated attack on the assay offices doing business in the district. Beginning at 3 o'clock Monday morning, and following in rapid succession, six explosions occurred in assay offices in the centers ranging from Victor to Cripple Creek and up to Gold Hill Cole. In every instance the object sought to be accomplished was accomplished—the destruction of the offices with their large quantities of delicate ba assays. The raiders did not hesitate to endanger life and has one of the buildings were occupied by sleeping families. Mrs. Wagner and children were blown out of their beds by the shocks and suffered serious injuries. The extent of the damage cannot be estimated. In Victor the Dexter assay office was wrecked by two dynamite cartridges at a loss of $1,200. Ahead at the same time the offices of Vanderwalker Morgan and Williams were treated in the same way. Damage probably $500 in large as Dexter's. Damage, it is said, will not exceed $500 in the explosion at Williams' office. He was peeping in the window when the debris struck him in the face, cutting his eyes, which for a time gave the impression that the area of the assay office was blown to the center of the earth. The explosion of the district at all high grade, unique Cripple Creek.

SCHOOL COMM'R COLUMN.
A. W. CREW, CONN'R.

In the case of Hutching against school District No. 1, Colfax Township, the supreme court of Michigan says that the party suing was a school teacher and had a written contract with the school district to teach the school in the district for a term of six months, commencing on or about Dec. 11, at $35 per month. He presented himself at the district to teach on that date, but was informed that the building was not ready, that he could go home, and, when it was ready they would notify him.

He was finally notified, and opened school Feb. 5, following. He taught until the expiration of six months from Dec. 11, and testified that, before the expiration of this time he made a new arrangement, orally, with the board to continue the school another month, under the old contract. He received pay for the full six months covered by the original contract. Then, in this action, he received a judgment for $35, the value of the service for the extra month, under the new arrangement.

The school district contended that the contract, not being in writing, was not enforceable. The teacher on the other hand, contended, first, that this was not a new contract, but an enlargement of the original one which was in writing.

The supreme court does not think this proposition tenable. 87 Northwestern Reporter, 80. It says that the law contemplated that all the terms of the contract shall be in writing, and if, under a claim of enlarging or continuing a written contract, the board might make the principal part of it rest in parol, or in an oral agreement, it would have the effect to render the statute of little value.

It was further contended that the contract having been performed by the teacher, he was entitled to recover notwithstanding the State statute which requires that all such contracts shall be in writing. The court replies that there is nothing ambiguous about the terms of this statute (2 com. laws of Mich., of 1897, sec. 4, 678.) The district board as a board of limited powers, and no good reason can be urged why, when the statute is express and limits their power to contracts in writing, it should not be observed. The court mentions that in a previous case (Crane vs. School Dist., 61 Mich., 259) it affirmed that, where a written contract was signed by a majority of the board, and it was presumptively valid on its face, the retention of such a contract, not duly authorized might be ratified by the board without a formal meeting. Also, that where there was a written contract, valid and acquiesced in by all concerned, it held (Holloway vs. School Dist. 62 Mich., 157) that it could not be subsequently repudiated. The effect of these cases, it goes on to state, was to hold that one contracting with the school district in writing, and whose contract is signed by the officers contemplated by the statute, may rely upon the appearance of authority, and assume, at least, after his services have been received without murmur or complaint that authority had been duly granted to execute the contract.

The court further distinguishes this case from one (James vs. School Dist. 110 Mich., 353) in which all the officers of the district ratified a contract not required by the terms of the statute to be in writing, where the only question was whether the informal action of the board should be sustained.

It says that here it was dealing with a case where the plaintiff (teacher) presumes to know the law, must be held to know that the contract under which he assumed to render service to the district was one prohibited by the statute. He was not misled as to the authority of those with whom he assumed to contract, but stood upon equal ground with the school board, and, although it might be a case of hardship, the court is constrained to hold that the contract was one not enforceable, and that a verdict should have been directed for the defendant (school district.)

The views were detained on account of the floods east. They have however arrived now and the series will begin Sunday evening. Some of the views for the first evening will be "The Annunciation," "Angel Appearing to the Shepherds," "The Nativity," "The Magi following the Star," "Presentation in Temple," "Shadow of the Cross," "Christ disputing with the Doctors," and ten others. The officers of the church and members of the Men's Auxiliary as well as the pastor will give a very hearty welcome to all.

The funeral of Mr. Lewis which was held from the church Monday was very largely attended. The church was full. The church extends sympathy to all the sorrowing friends.

MARINE NOTES.

Ed. Martin, of St. James, will sail the fishing tug Maxwell this season.

Capt. Campbell will begin fitting out the steamer Beaver next week.

Capt. Eph Small will again command the steamer Pine Lake, and the schooner Nahal will again be sailed by Capt. Christ Ericksonn.

Capt. A. B. Dishmer has sold a one quarter interest in the fishing tug L. Q. Hanson, to Louis N. Allard, who will be her master the coming season.

Friday morning the ice entirely left this shore. The fishing tug Hellen loaded up with nets and started out, intending to set nets and reach Manitou Island or Frankfort, from where she will do early spring fishing. The Hellen is supposed to be at the Manitous now.

A Glen Haven special of the 1st says: There is no ice to speak of in this locality, nor has there been at any time during the winter. Unless extreme cold weather comes later, which is not probable, there will not be anything to hinder early navigation in this locality. The mail carrier from South Manitou is carrying his mail negatively by small sailboat. The occupants of the life saving stations at Sleeping Bear point and South Manitou island have arrived and taken charge of the same.

Later he concluded it could not well be bushed up longer. They were Feb. 20 of last year, and that they kept it a secret just because they didn't want to be bothered with congratulations. Capt. —Petoskey Record: The attack recently made by Rev. A. F. Nagler, pastor of the M. E. church of Charlevoix, upon secret societies in general and Masonry in particular, has resulted in no good, and has been productive of some harm to himself and his church. The Sentinel whose editor is an enthusiastic member of the Masonic brotherhood, makes an unexpectedly temperate answer to Mr. Nagler's assault, and the strongest point made by it is the showing that of Mr. Nagler's predecessors in the pastorate of the Charlevoix church, a majority have been members of the Masonic fraternity, and all recognized and revered as christian gentlemen and decent and consecrated minister of the gospel. The fact that bishops, and a goodly proportion of ministers in the Methodist Episcopal church have been and now are Masons of high or low degree, makes an assault like that of Mr. Nagler, an attack upon the integrity of his brother ministers, and upon his own church which does not restrain its ministry from membership in Masonic orders. Mr. Nagler, is not injuring the so-called secret societies, and especially Masonry, so much as he is fouling his own nest, and he will certainly receive no more approbation for his sensational course from Methodists than from Masons.

CHAPTER VII.

In the front Stony complex, had been fitted up a comfortable hut, having ground every stick from which for several blocks round, in the time-honoured secret manner. The fame of the Upper Mountain for the business went the British frontier and the mountaineers came from far to pay good gold on the mountains, were to be swept off existence.

Now was his time for revenge—for revenge on the Indian, for revenge on the Frenchmen, on the pencemen and a few on the men who held a horse's head.

"I can see him now—the big, solid man, Grayson, chewing with the cane you that had ever distinguished him on the Sandhills, and talking to the the Indians and their allies and—

"Is anything the matter, Mademoiselle?" asked Old Lenny.

"Yes, it seems to me I ought to go and look them, so to speak, a letter to the mutineers first."

"The nearest for Guy Grayson," said Gibbie Whitman, producing a pencil from, "So at this point, a hundred miles from town, in cross flow, out of it had been built there I do not think the Lieutenants would have gone on the warpath. But I was going to say that I will have to—and—"

"Why do you think so?" asked the general.

"Because they will know that we took now, even if successful, would result in the destruction of 3 hundred warriors. They are just as careful of their people as white men, and they will only take and his Queen be decided to have a fight."

"Then the chiefs are they will pass, I guess, to the Indians."

"Tell night, or just before daylight," said Old Lenny, "Grayson will be down to your defence. While it is yet daylight you must have gathered a dozen loads of fuel, enough to make cook at least."

"I see."

"At the proper time the lines must be lit. They will be so far off as not to expose you, while the fire coming into the camp will allow no made-targets for our rifles."

"Why fire?" asked Richmond.

"Why? Why, do indeed! Because I did not think of it before. It shall be attended to at once."

With characteristic energy, Old Lenny set about his orders, and so set the example in carrying them out. In a few hours a dozen good loads of fuel had been gathered and all were ready to flash up when a light was applied.

As night came on, among the Indians began to gather about the mountain peaks, and though no note expressive of his fears the Indian could see that all the chiefs were that the Grayson camp would extinguish any fire that could be built, and add greatly to the advantage of the attacking party.

Gibbie Whitman had conferred his part upon to start on his desperate mission soon after dark.

He confided to Mike Coulille the care of his horses, Hector.

He saw that his pistols and his repeating rifle were loaded, while Mabel Fleming put into Guy' cooked food in his haversack.

Every one in the camp was anxious to know his mission, and he was asked on all sides, "What are you going to do?"

"And what Whitman's head is here as a man, and the night before he left Utah."

"I shall be part of the center I chose, as the 1st, him to be light or the dark and—"

A SUNDAY BLAZE.

The Harsha Block Has a Narrow Escape From Destruction.

About two o'clock Sunday afternoon a clerk in Mrs. Levinson's clothing and dry goods store, in the Harsha block, had occasion to enter the store. He had no sooner entered than he smelled smoke. On going to the back end, he found smoke coming up from below, near the north partition. An alarm was at once sent in, and by the time the fire department reached the spot, which was prompt, the entire interior of the building was so full of smoke that it was impossible to enter the ground floor.

It was soon ascertained that the fire was yet confined to the basement, and two lines of hose were soon pouring in a deluge of water, front and rear. There were soon evidences that the fire had reached the interior of Levinson's store, and a stream was sent in through the front door. By three o'clock the blaze was extinguished.

Observation then revealed the situation. The greatest damage was done to stock in the Levinson store, by smoke and water. The floor was just burned through. A casual estimate places the damage at from 25 to 33 per cent. The printing office in the basement, adjoining the furnace room on the north was damaged by smoke and water about the same percentage. Fire crept through the floor into a blank case in the postoffice, destroyed blanks and old records and files. The accumulated Beaver Island mail, consisting of seven sacks, was hung against this case, and several holes were burned through the doors against which the pouches lay.

In the second story, the law and other offices, were so full of smoke as to indicate that fire had crept up the partitions, but the fire was confined. The books and files were removed from the council room.

The damage to the building will be fully $500, all fully covered by insurance.

The fire originated around the furnace. The janitor, S. Salter, had been a short time previous made a fire, and gone to the Methodist church where he is also janitor.

The fire department, as usual, did excellent work. The north mile company was the first to a hydrant, then on the corner of Bridge and Main streets, but it was found to be frozen. This permitted the south side company to get water from the hydrant near the SENTINEL building. The new hose, recently purchased, in its baptism, got an elegant mud bath.

Night Watcher Terror.

"I would cough nearly all night long" writes Mrs. Cline, Applegate, of Alexandria, Ind., "and could hardly get any sleep. I had consumption so bad that if I walked a block I would cough frightfully and spit blood, but when all other medicines failed, three $1.00 bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery wholly cured me and I gained 58 pounds." It's absolutely guaranteed to cure Coughs, Colds, La-Grippe, Bronchitis, and all Throat and Lung Troubles. Prices 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottles free at F. G. Hines & Co's drug store.

Atwood.

Geo. Parson has purchased a piano.

Allen Greenman is in Traverse City for a few days.

Robert Marrow of Central Lake called on his many friends on Sunday.

Ona Byers is at Charlevoix taking care of her sick sister, Mrs. E. W. Conlter

The M. E Sunday School on Easter will observe the day with a special program.

The Epworth League will give an instrumental concert in the near future.

John Parson who has been in Chicago, Iowa and Wisconsin the past winter, will be at home in a few days.

Quite a good many of our farmers will have telephones within 6 months. The line starts from Central Lake.

Arthur Smith will move to Torch Lake soon to take charge of an engine for the Central Lake Lumber Company.

Bills are out for an auction sale at the residence of John Peebles on Thursday March 28th. Free dinner to all. Everything to be sold.

Married, on Thursday March 6th, by Rev. Pool, John DeYoung to Libbie Harris, both of Atwood. Many congratulations to the young couple.

MARINE NOTES.

The schooner Maine has had her new mizzen-mast put in.

The steamer Pine Lake is being fitted out, and will go into commission as soon as ready.

Chas. Gordon, of Beaver Island, returned from Grand Haven Saturday with engineer's papers for 100 tons.

George Weaver on Tuesday sold his one-ninth interest in the tug J. V. Taylor to the Charlevoix Lumber Co.

Algie Alexander is back from Grand Haven with unlimited master's papers for Lake Michigan and Huron.

Capt. Geo. Weaver left for Sheboygan Tuesday to fit out and take command of the steambarge Welcome. He expects to make his first charter here.

Engineer Henry Sherman, who returned from Grand Haven last Saturday with chief's 500 ton papers, began fitting out the steamer Beaver Monday morning.

The Steamship Illinois will leave Chicago on her final trip to Northern Michigan on the 4th day of April. This will be the first sailing of that line.

George Emrey is one of the sailor boys who drew a ticket at Grand Haven. He comes home with an engineer's license for chief 100 tons, assistant unlimited.

Navigation may be considered open for the port of Charlevoix. The ice disappeared from this shore during Monday night, and it is extremely doubtful if any considerable body of ice is returns.

The fishing tug Minnie Warren left this port Tuesday afternoon to set nets. She also took on board the Beaver Island mail carriers and mail, and some important freight, with the hope of landing at some point on the island.

The fishing tug Darneelee went out Monday afternoon with nets, and will probably cross Beaver Island to Frankfort for a time.—Later—Both tugs returned Tuesday night, the Minnie effecting a landing at the head of the island.

The following harbor appropriations are recommended by the engineer department: Marquette, $20,000; Grand Maris refuge, $70,000; Menominee harbor and river, Michigan and Wisconsin, $23,200; St. Joseph, $24,000; South Haven, $12,000; Saugatuck, $15,000; Holland, $75,000; Ottawa, $40,000; Grand Haven, $10,000; Muskegon, $75,000; Pentwater and White Lake harbor, $85,000; Ludington, $75,000; Manistee $12,000; Portage Lake refuge, $25,000; Frankfort, $54,500; Charlevoix, $20,000; Petoskey, $15,000; Cheboygan, $8,000; Sand Beach refuge, $7,500.

The following vessel transfers are reported: Steamer Rand—John Bolton of Milwaukee to Joseph C. Miller of Harbor Springs, the whole $6000. Schooner L. B. Coates—Alexander Wilkowski to George Hentzen, Stephen Wolczak and Joseph Sadowsk of Milwaukee, one-fourth, nominal consideration. Schooner Eliza Day—Theodore Zeelerscke of Sheboygan to Charles S. Carlson and Edward Ellefson of Racine, one-fourth, $250. Schooner Annie O. Hanson—Theodore Partner and Harold E. Eldred of Milwaukee, and Albert S. Maxon of Milton Junction, Wis, to Charles and John Schultz of Two Rivers, Wis., the whole $1100.

When the steamer Joseph Gordon comes out this spring there will be a few patrons will not recognize her. The most important improvement will be in her machinery. The engine will be compounded, and, when set up, will consist of cylinders 10x12 and 12x20. A new shaft and new wheel will also be put in. This increased power will permit the enlargement of the hull, and will be lengthened seventeen feet. This involves other enlargements and improvements in cabin and freight accommodations, and when the Gordon goes into commission she will not only be far more speedy than ever before, but will be equipped better than ever to handle her growing business. Captain Gerard and his boat have always been popular on the East Jordan Charlevoix route, and with this practically new and elegant boat the jolly old sailor will stir things up on the inland waters. Good luck to the new Gordon.

Upon the result of a series of experiments now being made in Chicago depends the inauguration of a lockout which will result in tying up navigation on the great lakes. The lockout will effect the 2,000 members of the Lieutenant Ingram's Protective association, an organization composed of the captains and engineers of the tugs running out of twenty-eight harbors along the lakes. These men are threatened with the loss of their positions because of an attempt on the part of the Great Lakes Towing company, otherwise known as the "tug trust," to longer their working hours. The company insists that its captains and engineers shall work for four days at a stretch, instead of three as is now the custom. Minor differences between the officers of the company and those of the tugsmen union have arisen, and unless these they can be settled the opening of navigation will mean the inauguration of either a strike or a lockout. The demand of the towing company for longer hours was presented to the annual convention of the Lieutenant Ingram's Protective association in Cleveland January 29 to 27 and referred to the twenty eight ports in every port except Milwaukee. The majority of the locals have since voted upon the proposition and all have refused to accede to the demand.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

As soon as the frost is out of the ground the contractors will commence on the building for the G., H. & I. railway Co. of a magnificent new station building for Petoskey.

James H. Hayes, landlord of the Wayne Hotel at Detroit, and formerly of the Arlington, Petoskey has leased "The Royal Frontenac" at Frankfort—the hotel named by Miss Jarnac and Mrs. Laura Sehm. Mr. Hayes will open the Frankfort hotel on the 1st of June.

The Grand Traverse squirrels were wrestling last week with the accounts growing out of the assessors work in that county. Dr. Frank Willett, of Interlochen, who had charge of these cases from November 19th to January 14th, presented a bill for $2,785.50.

Petoskey Democrat: Walter H. Van Orden, of Petoskey, son of H. Van Orden, passed competitive examination at West Day City recently for admission to the Annapolis Naval Academy, with high honors, and was recommended to Congressman Aplin by the committee for appointment. He left the junior class at the high school and has been taking special preparatory at the Normal this term, and to the efficiency of both schools is due his success.

Two cub bears whose eyes were not yet open were caught by James Murphey seven miles north of Boyne Falls lately. The little bears were heard crying by Murphey and a companion and were thought to be child ren. An investigation of the brush pile from which the noise cause disclosed the cubs, which were at once taken to a lumber camp. A short time after some men were complained to fly from the vicinity by an enraged female bruin. The cubs drink milk readily, and Murphey is confident he can raise them.

Elk Rapids has in view a new industry that bids fair to become quite extensive. The American construction Co. has been organized with a capital stock of $5,000 to manufacture and sell a device lately patented for the construction of cement buildings. The machine will make either a smooth or rough surface block, giving a building when completed the appearance of a solid stone structure and if hollow wall are used the building becomes absolutely frost proof in the winter wi.le the best does not penetrate it in the summer. The machine which is light, weighing only about 50 pounds, is put at work on the walls of a build ing and as fast as moved a block of concrete is in its position ready to form a part of the wall under construction. H. B. Lewis and H. L. Moore, of Elk Rapids, are secretary and treasurer of the company.

Central Lake Torch: W. J. Getty, a prominent and well known citizen of Kalkaska, died last Saturday from a stroke of apoplexy. He held the office of justice of the peace and was stricken while performing a marriage ceremony. Mr. Getty was an early settler here, having been founded the place now owned by Philip Eckhardt, with whom he traded for Kalkaska property nearly 20 years ago. He was prominent in the politics of Antrim county for many years in its early history and is remembered by the old settlers.

Traverse City Record: L. K. Gibbs had just returned from Detroit, where he has been in the interest of the Traverse City and Old Mission electric railway. After laying the plans for the proposed road before the Detroit parties, arrangements were made for sending a representative here in a few days to make a personal inspection, and if everything is found as represented they will put up a forfeit to build the road. Mr. Gilbs says quite certain that work of the building the road will soon be commenced and pushed forward to an early completion.

Traverse City Record: The incorporation of a live stock company in Northern Michigan suggests the faith in this occupation entertained by those who have had experience in stock raising in this part of the state. Several thousand acres have been secured in Mecosta county and the business will be carried on with consider able magnitude. Northern Michigan has developed excellent conditions for stock raising and many who have engaged in it on a small scale have proved it profitable. It is therefore pretty certain that the industry conducted on a large scale will prove equally remunerative.

Petoskey Record: Lieutenant Geo. Van Orden, of the U. S. Navy, and a Petoskey boy, arrived at San Francisco on Monday and proceeded at once to Washington to receive his Captain's commission. Mrs Van Orden met her husband and is with him at Washington. Lieut. Van Orden has been considerable Philippine service, in fact he was with one of the earliest naval expeditions to the islands following the out-break of the Spanish-American war. Recently he has been quartermaster at the island of Guam. His present promotion is due, not to good luck, but to splendid record as an officer in the navy. He belongs to the marine line of the naval service.

FINDS PLOT TO ESCAPE.

Chicago Jailer Discovers Traces of Tunneling Scheme.

Attorneys and others seeking entrance to the Cook County jail in Chicago were compelled to remain in the vestibule of the jail half an hour after the regular time for opening the doors the other morning while Jailer Whitman and his guards were searching the cells for instruments used in an attempt to tunnel through a wall and liberate 125 prisoners. The attempt had been made in the northeast corner of the gun corridor of the old jail, where the wall offers less resistance because of a drain pipe extending from the roof to the sewer beneath the floor of the basement. This pipe is imbedded in the wall, one side of which is exposed to the interior of the corridor, except for the protection of a wire lath and brick which covers it. In attempting to get through the wall the prisoners had cut away the board above the first floor above the floor, and had broken up the pipe. It was the evident intention to remove a section of the pipe, which offered little resistance, and then cut of the wall between the pipe and the wall on the outside. The point selected is near an alley, and the tunnel when completed would open into the alley about five or six feet from the ground, which would be easy. In addition to the attempt made to cut through the pipe, small impressions had been made on the brick before the work was discovered. Holes in some of the scratches found an iron wall beneath the brick and the other servants the man going to deliver the valise to a man who was waiting for it. This was the girl's excuse for leaving. The man, it was seen, or her accomplice, if the abductress, had disappeared at the same time as the girl.

HONOR SLAIN CHIEF.

THE SENATE AND HOUSE HEAR EULOGY ON M'KINLEY.

Congress Sets Day Aside in Memory of the Late President—Tribute by His Premier President and Prince Henry Attend Exercises.

Official Washington paid formal tribute Thursday to the memory of William McKinley, John Hay, premier of Mr. McKinley's cabinet, pronounced the eulogy on his dead chief. It was one of the most impressive assemblages ever seen in the great Hall of Representatives. President Roosevelt, Prince Henry of Prussia, the members of the cabinet, the Justices of the Supreme Court, the general of the army and officers of the army and navy, who have received the thanks of Congress, the ambassadors and other diplomatic representatives of foreign countries, Senators and Representatives in Congress and a large number of distinguished guests were present.

Four times in the history of the country similar services have been held on Presidents who have died in office. It was the tried monarchation of a chief magistrate fallen by the hand of an assassin. George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, and to Blaine fell the lot of speaking the eulogy of the sorrowfully fitting End the last public ceremonies in the Hall of Representatives. Mr. Kinley should take place in the forum of the Senate, the place in the room where he was lost.

PLAN TO KILL MR. DENEEN.

Chicago Attorneys Seeks Life of State's Attorney.

Salem Hamed, a self-confessed anarchist, is in the county jail in Chicago, charged with having sought to procure a bomb to be used in killing State's Attorney Deneen. After being taken into custody Hamed avowed that he had been hired by an unknown person to kill the State's prosecutor because of his prosecution of the bomb throwers in the Haymarket affair. Hamed said he had been hired to do the job by a man whom he knew only as Mr. Ali, who he said was a member of Michigan and Chicago avenues, Chicago, and that

An Important Masonic Event.

The Masons had possession of Central Lake Wednesday night from the blowing of the six o'clock mill whistle until two o'clock Thursday morning. The occasion was the affixing of the official seal of the Grand Lodge of Michigan to the "appurtenances and hereditaments" of the new lodge in that enterprising town.

Herbert Montague, of Traverse City, chairman of the finance committee of the grand lodge, represented the Most Worshipful Grand Master, and his staff was composed of two Traverse City past masters—Brothers Pope and Holly, and other officers selected from neighboring lodges.

The official ceremonies embraced the consecration of the lodge, the installation of officers, and the dedication of their elegant lodge room. The consecration embraced the full ritual, with the use of the corn, wine and oil, as concerning elements, and the services were solemn and impressive.

After these services to which were admitted the Eastern Star Chapter, a banquet was served at the opera house, at which two hundred covers were laid. The post prandial program was as follows, with Bro. H. C. McFarlan as toastmaster:

Address of Welcome—M. W. Newkirk, of Central Lake.
Response—Herbert Montague, of Traverse City.
The New Lodge—C. J. Ackley, of Central Lake.
Early Days of Masonry in Northern Michigan—Willard A. Smith, of Charlevoix.
Masonry from the Standpoint of an Outsider—Rev. J. D. Deets, of Central Lake.
Any old Thing—Arch Cameron, of Torch Lake.
The Masonic Goat—C. E. Densmore, of Bellaire.

The ladies of the Star were the architects of the banquet, and they did their work grandly.

Blakely's orchestra furnished excellent music. Not until two o'clock in the morning did the banqueters retire, and none were found under the table at daylight.

The event was one of the best managed and most successful functions we have ever attended in Northern Michigan.

SCHOOL COMM'R COLUMN.

A. W. CHEN, COMM'R.

The Rural school problem is hard to solve. The plans proposed by one reformer are all kicked to pieces by the next person who takes hold of the work.

The transportation theory does not lighten expense, consequently has its opponents.

In Indiana where the unit system prevails the average wages paid rural teachers is $2.01 per day. The law compelling the wages to be at least $2 per day. In the towns the average wage is $2.42; in the cities $2.85.

The average time of school in the rural district is 134 days, in towns 153 days; in cities 180 days. The great body of rural school teachers desire to go where the school term is longer and the wages better.

State Supt. Jones of Indiana says: "This constant exodus of teachers keeps many country schools in a state of chaos. In one instance a rural school had ten different teachers in an equal number of terms, and each in succession taught his first term. Even though these teachers were bright young men who gave promise of successful careers, the inexperience and timidity of a first term made inevitably many mistakes. No lasting nor, indeed, very important impression can be made by a new teacher upon a strange community during one brief school year.

State Supt. Hayliss of Illinois advocates some changes in the laws of that state, that coincides with thoughts we have had for some time; namely:

1. He would make it lawful for small districts that have not children enough within their boundaries to make a school, to join other districts and together support a union school in which the country children shall have educational facilities equal to those enjoyed in cities and towns. All that is asked is that districts shall have this right if they choose to exercise it.

2. This right involves another that the people of the district thus formed shall have the right, if they so elect, to transport the children who live at too great a distance to go on foot to the school and return each day.

The method of uniting the schools of a township and giving transportation to the pupils is working satisfactorily in many localities.

Where geographical conditions are such that the union of township districts cannot be made, the plan of uniting weak districts would be beneficial.

NOTICE!

At a Township Caucus will be held, on Tuesday the 25th day of March, A. D., 1902 at 1:30 p. m. in Marion Town Hall, for the purpose of nominating officers for the township for the ensuing year.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor.

The choir and pastor are very sorry to announce the postponement of the "Overtured Evening with Hobby Horses" which was to be held next Wednesday evening, on account of sickness and absence of the members of the choir. It will be held immediately after easter.

The sermon last Sunday morning was on the subject of Sowing Light and death with it analogically speaking of the Seeds of Light—the Sowers of Light—the soils in which light grows—the Fruitage of Light.

The first of Mr. Hyslop's illustrated talks on "The Life of Christ" was certainly well attended, the seating accommodation being fully taxed. Expressions of appreciation of the service have been many. The next talk will cover about two years of Christ's public ministry. Sixteen very interesting old masterpiece views will be thrown on the canvas. All are cordially invited to enjoy these Lenten Sunday evenings.

The death certificate shows that he was born in April 1787 and was therefore nearly 115 years old. He was born on the shore of Muskegon lake, but has been for an ordinary life time resident of this northern country. We do not know whether documentary evidence of his age exists but white men who saw him thirty years ago say he looked as old then as he had any time of late years.

—Charlevoix county is to be congratulated on the fact that A. B. Nicholas is public prosecutor. The chief aim of Mr. Nicholas is to keep down the criminal calendar, when it can be done with due regard for the administration of justice, but once he gets a case in court, he shows the stuff he is made of. In the recent term he convicted every case in the calendar. A significant fact is that no attorney for defense ever attacks the prosecutors papers or information. His papers show accuracy and care, and he has yet to have the first one thrown out of court on account of insufficiency or inaccuracy of information—We expect, Charlevoix county is fortunate in having A. B. Nicholas for public prosecutor.

I prefer to engage in some kind of business that has something higher than the dollar side—a business that bears some relation to humanity and society. If I were asked today what is the greatest safeguard in time of national danger, threatened invasion or internal commotion, I would say it is clean, unpurchasable country newspaper of the land." The General does well to look higher than the dollar side in the country publishing business, and as he is the publisher of a country paper himself he knows whereof he speaks.

—Detroit News: Booth & Co., of Chicago, popularly known as the fish trust, filed a bill in the United States circuit court, yesterday, asking for specific performance of a contract, with Edgar A. Davis, head of the old Davis Fresh & Salt Fish Co., made in 1898, and perpetual injunction to restain the respondents from engaging in the fish business in Detroit or any territory operated by the Davis Fish Co., on the date of the agreement. The Chicago concern bought out Davis Fish Co. in 1898, and it was then agreed, it is alleged, that the seller would not again in the business. The bill alleges that they have been doing so and are soliciting their old customers. Besides Davis, Alex M. Hunerford M. J. Dee and the Wolverine Fish Co., of Detroit, and Eugene R. Edson, of Cleveland, are named as defendants. Judge Swan granted a preliminary restraining order against Davis' but this does not bar the Wolverine Fish Co., which is doing business at the old stand.

Some his hiding place Uncle Wilmon quickly decided to the preliminary conversation, and then wrecked the purpose then for signaling. He gave an thought to be longer of his own position till he saw the arrows downwelling directly over the tree, and realized that they must be fall on him or some him.

He sprang to his feet, and in the act drew his pocket. He heard a rush, saw the blinding flame, and felt the bullet fling arrows lit up the rock and the earth about him.

The desperados and the Indians saw the smoke, but discovered who so good as they were so confident that the white man was a friend, that some seconds elapsed before they took in the situation.

Richmond was the first to recover from shock of mind, and shouting, "He's a spy! Kill him! Kill!" rushed at the impudent man. The arrows sent on his tape as he leap, but he was fired, but before they extinguished, Uncle Wilmon was hanging.

He had backed into a cave in the running rock, and to get out he must pass through the renegades and Indians. He charging his bowie as he, in, he dashed into their midst, and the world have engaged had he not stumbled over a wounded man, who had fallen prey to his revenge.

Was wounded man who St. Louis, and in his desperation he grappled Guide about the waist, and the battle of the dusky warriors and half-breeds, who had joined in the fray, ceased for the time.

Both Wilson and Mr. Cantillo, who was sent hallooing to make a correspondence, quickly decided that Wilmon was "a sinner, they're retrouthin" then the two men up a piece and shouted to him and added their voices to the cry of triumph, and even the Indians caught the exciting contagion and clapped their hands.

"Do you think they will attack again tonight?" asked Gen. Grayson, addressing Col. Long, whom he looked up in authority in Indian matters.

"No, in the same way," replied the colonel. "But you can't be congratulate yourself that they are beaten."

"Have you any idea what form the next attack will assume?"

"I could not guess, but you can ask yourself. What you would do if the positions were reversed."

"I should certainly try to carry the fort by assault, as the Indians have done."

"But if you failed, as they have?"

"Then I should take advantage of the darkness to throw my opposing works within sample, and open fire at daylight."

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor

Copperheads Then, Copperheads Now.

Some of the leading papers of this country are criticising Gen. Funston for his speech at the Marquette Club in Chicago, last week.

The general said that soldiers in the Philippines were hanged for desertion, while citizens of the United States who give encouragement to the insurgents and place the patriot's laurel crown upon the brow of Aguinaldo, are permitted to live.

There were copperheads in 1861; there are copperheads now. What was treason then is treason now. Valandigham was jailed in 1862 for open encouragement of rebellion; we by should Edward Atkinson not have been imprisoned for sedition in 1899? When the army and the flag are in the field; when the forces of the United States are fighting to establish the lawful authority of the government in its own territory, is it not treason to encourage armed opposition? If not, of what does treason consist?

By the laws of God and the laws of Nations the Phillipines are as lawful American possessions as are Louisiana or California. In that territory the man who resists authority with arms is an insurrecto. What is the man here at home who encourages insurrection if not a traitor?

We don't think it is the place of a soldier to make speeches. "His but to do and dare." But Funston was right. There is but one way to define the word "traitor, and General Funston made a good job of it.

The Democrats and the Phillipines.

Col. Henry Watterson, Kentucky editor and occult spouse of the "starry goddess," says the democrats can win in 1904 on the Phillipine issue. Ever the same old story. It is not a question of the sacred, eternal principles of democracy, but the question as to what democrats should "duffer" loudest about.

They track consecutively, tariff for revenue only and free silver, and lost on both, as that these issues are cost into the scrap heap. In casting about for a new issue the Phillipine question seems to be the only thing available.

Of course, there is not a man in the United States who has brains who for a moment doubts that if the democrats should come into power they would proceed in the Phillipines the same as the present administration is proceeding. There would be no change there except in the officers. But the issue would be "a good enough Morgan till after election. The democrats would not recede from the work of suppressing rebellion if they could, and they could not if they would. With the democrats in the saddle local self government in the Phillipines would not be one day nearer than it is to-day.

The attitude of the democrats toward the Roosevelt administration is the same as it was toward the Lincoln administration in 1863, when it declared the war a failure. They are doing in the rear now the same as then.

Consistency is not a democratic virtue. What care they that their great prophet, Bryan, threw all his influence for the ratification of the Treaty of Paris, which gave to us the Phillipines and with them a sacred duty.

The only question with the democrats is, what issue can be most effectively used to fool the people.

Oregon As the Land of Promise.

Between the railroad companies and the Western real estate speculators, Oregon has been emblazoned on the dead walls in flaming posters, as the "Eldorado" of this great country. As a result many in Northern Michigan have been attacked by the miserabe and have followed the "star of empire" to where the rainbow touches the ground, after the bag of gold that is supposed to lie just where the beautiful tints bend with the "perpetual green" of the lassesaye.

Most of them are sick of the crazes and are longing for old Michigan again. We print below extracts from a letter written from Portland, March 10th, by the son of a prominent Charlevoix county farmer:

"I have been in Portland a week, and it has rained nearly all the time. I am going out to Troutdale to-morrow, and when it stops raining will go to work. I saw John Ikner and wife last week. They are living here in Portland. Mrs. Baker asked me if I had taken up a claim, I told her that I had not. She said that I was senseless, They would like to be out of the deal. Also others whom I might mention. Harry Messler and some of the other boys have opened a land office in Roseburg. They speak very highly of the land and timber, but it is $100 in their pocket for every claim they can locate. Harry has a school in Roseburg. John Baker is working in a blacksmith shop which he bought an interest. His wife runs a rooming house."

And thus another bubble is bursted. Now kill the fatted calf and get ready to welcome back the rainbow chasers. They did what is always justifiable—sought to better their condition, but were deceived by beautiful word pictures, and have gained only their experience.

Northern Michigan is a good place to return to after a sojurn in Oregon.

Strikes A Rich Find.

"I was troubled for several years with chronic indigestion and nervous debility," writes F. J. Green, of Lancaster, N. H., "No remedy helped me until I began using Electric Bitters, which did me more good than all the medicines I ever used. They have kept my wife in excellent health for years. She says Electric Bitters are just splendid for female troubles; that they are a grand tonic and invigorator for weak, run down women. No other medicine can take its place in our family." Try them. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by F. G. Hoyt & Co.

SCHOOL COMM'R COLUMN.

A. W. CROW, COMM'R.

C. S. Altmaier of Drexel institute says in a recent issue of the Journal of Education: In the seventeenth century England's most brilliant essayist, Addison, wrote: "While I am upon this subject (education) I cannot forbear mentioning a particular which is of use in every station of life, and which, methinks, every master should teach as a scholars; I mean the writing of letters. To this end instead of perplexing them with fictitious themes and verses, there might be a juncture correspondence established between two boys, who might act in any imaginary part of business to suit their fancy, and communicate to each other whatever tribes they think fit, provided neither of them has failed at the appointed time to answer his correspondent's letter. I believe I may venture to affirm that the generality of boys would find themselves more advantaged by it's exercise when they come to be men, than by all the Greek and Latin their masters can teach them in seven or eight years. The want of it is very visible in many learned persons, who, while they are admiring the styles of Demosthenes or Cicero, want phrases to express themselves on the most common occasions?

"If a knowledge of the writing of letters was important in Addison's century, when the modern facilities of letter writing were unknown and undreamed of, how much more important is it in this twentieth century, when commerce has increased a thousand fold, when the greater part of that commerce is carried on by correspondence, when for two cents a letter will be carried two thousand miles,—that every young man and woman should be taught how to write letters, and, as a matter of general information, should have full knowledge of the facilities which the modern post office offers to the public.

The post office is one of the greatest agencies in the world in the spreading and advancing of civilization, for there is no other single institution which reaches directly so many people and so many nations.

The organization of the post-office is surprising in its simplicity, and the accuracy with which it performs its work is truly remarkable. And yet thousands of dollars are being practically thrown away annually by the people of the United States, and millions of pieces sent through the mails never reach their destination because so many are careless or ignorant in the use of post-office facilities. The post-office is the one public servant which has more reason to complain of its patrons than its patrons have reason to complain of its management or of its service.

For instance, 7,536,150 pieces reached the Dead Letter Office last year (1900); 144,619 were held for postage; 422,793 were misdirected; 50,555 misdirected letters contained money amounting to $44,140.15. Drafts, notes and other evidences of indebtedness, as well as deeds, wills and other papers affecting titles, were found, representing a face value of $1,196,004.50. Over 4,000,000 pieces had to be destroyed.

The postage alone on this item represents an expenditure of from $40,000 to $80,000, which was sent by people and for which there was no possible return.

This enormous waste is increasing year by year instead of diminishing. Why is this? I fear that it is because students are, as Addison said they were 200 years ago, too often "perplexed with other things," while instruction in the subject of letter writing which is of so much practical value, and which every young man

BEET SUGAR OUTPUT.

LAST SEASON'S TOTAL PRODUCTION 185,000 TONS.

Thirty-one Factories in Operation in 1899, and Eleven More Started in 1900—Rock Island Pass Train Leaves Rails Near Neola, Iowa.

C. F. Saylor, special agent in charge of the beet sugar investigation of the Department of Agriculture, in Washington, sends his annual report, which gives the following figures regarding the industry during the past year: The total production of beet sugar in the United States in the season 1899-1900 has aggregated 185,000 tons, an increase of 146 per cent from the 75,000 tons produced during the season 1898-1899. There were 31 factories in operation in 1899, against 19 in the season immediately preceding. Eleven more factories are now being started in Nebraska, Michigan and Colorado, which will be ready for operation in 1901, as follows: Nebraska—Norfolk, Scottsbluff, Grand Island, Mitchell, Lyons, Bridgeport, Oxnard, Mitchell, Scottsbluff, Lexington, Bayard, Fort Collins, Sterling, Fort Morgan, Ault, Greeley, Longmont, Loveland, Eaton, Brighton, Littleton, Rocky Ford, Lamar, Swink, Ordway, Rocky Ford, Grand Junction, Delta, Montrose, Olathe, Cortez, Durango, Farmington, Fruitland, Hesperus, Ignacio, Montezuma, Pueblo, Rocky Ford, Sugar City, Swink, Ordway, Lamar, Holly, Sugar City, Fort Morgan, Brush, Greeley, Longmont, Loveland, Eaton, Fort Collins, Littleton, Brighton

MARINE NOTES.

The fishing tugs are doing business full blast.

The Beaver turned her engine over the first time Tuesday.

The steamer Columbia is in commission on her Traverse Bay route.

The steamer Beaver will leave here next Tuesday morning at eight o'clock for Beaver Harbor.

Honnor and Blocker, local inspectors, were here yesterday inspecting the fishing tug John Smith.

Algie Alexander, 1st officer of the steamer Illinois, left Saturday for Manistee to assist in fitting out the boat.

So far as Charlevoix harbor and Lake Michigan are concerned, navigation is fully open. Pine Lake, however, is still closed by ice.

There is some anxiety felt for the safety of the Booth fishing tug Maxwell. She left here Sunday to set nets, and has not been seen or heard from since.

The steamer Beaver has the old name "Oval Agitator" cleaned up from stem to stern, and the new name staring you in the face everywhere you look at her.

In accordance with the ordinance just adopted by the council, there will be no more blowing of whistles in Charlevoix harbor, except as required by the laws of navigation, and for bridge signals.

Traverse City Herald: Capt. William Franklin has secured the command of the steamer Lawrence the coming season. The steamer is well known here having years ago been operating on the bay. The boat will be lengthened and otherwise improved.

Geo. D. Turner, of Grand Haven special deputy collector of customs, was here yesterday re-admeasuring the tugs Minnie Warren and Tiger, and the steamer Marty. The Warren and Mary have increased their tonnage by rebuild. The Tiger, having been an undocumented boat on Carp Lake, will be documented under the new name of "Maggie."

Charlevoix had a bit of a strike Monday, but it was brief. The local L. T. P. A. called all its men out that were working for the Charlevoix Tug Association or the fishing tug Golkea, it occurred through a misunderstanding as to the employment of an outside man as engineer of the Golkea. It was fixed up satisfactorily and the man stays.

As the direct result of the complaints which were filed last fall by members of the lifesaving crew at Muskegon Capt. Woods has been relieved from duty and will be succeeded by Capt. Nelson, from a northern port. John Ellsud and William McKenzie, who were discharged by Capt. Woods at the close of last season, have been reinstated as members of the crew.

It is now said that all the differences between the tugmen and the tug trust have been adjusted, with the exception of the scale of wages in Chicago. The tugmen at Chicago insist that they should be paid $150 per month, while the trusts expects them to submit to the uniform scale paid at other ports. Tugmen say that it cost more to live in Chicago and that they should be paid higher wages. It is generally thought that there will be no trouble over this difference.

With the opening of the passenger season also comes the outlook for the most prosperous business done on the lakes. All the lines have made extensive preparations to care for a largely increased traffic. The business has grown from year to year, with a constantly increasing percentage of growth. With no exceptions being held to attract tourist the coming season, the passenger agents expect even a large volume of business than was done last summer when the Pan-American was being held at Buffalo.

The authorities of Mackinac Island village have decided to carry the "fog horn" case to the federal court of appeals, it being considered that the government can yet be compelled to remove they consider a nuisance. When about ten years ago the government established the station on the island a commission awarded the village $1500 for damages. The federal officials appealed to United States circuit court and the claim was disallowed. It has now been determined by the village that the noise made by the fog horn is intolerable and the decision of the court will be appealed from with the main intention of having the horn removed altogether from that section of the island.

—Prospects now point to a very lively season of resort building. Our contractors are all busy making estimates and plans for cottages, and preparing for work on contracts already taken. Mrs. Costes is still in Charlevoix jail, having been too ill to receive sentence at the time of her conviction.

THE SUGAR FACTORY.

Ground Will be Broken During Next Month.

Will Be Making Sugar by November 1st 1902.

The factory of the Charlevoix Sugar Co., has been a foregone conclusion for some time, but now the SENTINEL is able to announce, authoritively, that papers have been executed which make the thing a positive certainty.

Last week a contract was made and executed with M. Knauer, of Saxony, Germany, for the furnishing of 45,000 pounds of beet seed this year, and 75,000 pounds per year for the next two years. This seed will arrive in good time for distribution to farmers.

But the all important transaction is the recent signing of contracts for the construction of the buildings. The contractor is the National Construction Co. of Detroit. The contract calls for the erection of

1.—The main factory building, 70x200, four stories in height; floor space, 14,000 square feet; material steel and brick.

2.—Beet warehouse, 75x200; 15,000 square feet floor space; also of steel and brick; capacity, 8,000 tons beets.

4.—Machine shop, 25x60.

5.—Office building, 22x33.

The work of construction will, during the summer, constitute an industry that will dwarf any single industrial enterprise in the Pine Lake region.

The site selected, and already the property of the company, is 17½ acres on the bank of Pine Lake, and embraces, chiefly, the old shingle factory and dock. It also includes that portion of the old Stover farm east of the railroad through which Stover creek passes to Pine Lake. This stream will constitute a valuable auxiliary to the plant in the cleansing of beets, and other like uses.

The plant, when in operation, will employ 200 men night and day, for 100 days the first year. After that, it is expected, the run will last from ninety to 120 days. From 50 to 75 men will be attached to the plant the balance of the year.

But the great, substantial and lasting benefit of the factory is summed up in the following statement: There are now existing contracts with farmers for 2,000 acres of beets. On the basis of 2,500 acres the crop will annually bring to the farmers the disbursement of $125,000. This is a low estimate. The figures will be nearer $150,000. The expectation and intention is to increase the acreage to 3,000 acres.

The farmers have been fully informed as to the stability and profit of beet raising contracts. From evidence produced the fact is demonstrated that farmers can ask no better or greater benefit than a sugar factory. A most encouraging feature of sugar beet culture is the discovery of the peculiar fitness and adaptability of Michigan's soil for Sugar Beet producing. For co-efficient purity and for extraordinary high percentage of sugar, Michigan is the paragon of states, and the Michigan product the climax of perfection. That sugar is simple, no one will question. The demand for it will never cease. The consumption is increasing at a tremendous rate. Ruinous prices have never prevailed. Handsome profits under good management have been universal. The govern ment has and will afford ample protection in tariff and countervailing duties against all pirates. The Cuban tariff excitement is but ephemeral, and its importance more imaginary than real, as only about one-tenth of the sugar consumed in this country is from Cuba. There is no industry therefore in the United States today which affords greater inducement for the investment of capital than the manufacture of standard granulated sugar from sugar beets. There is likewise no field of action more inviting than Michigan. There is no location more favorable than Charlevoix.

The plant, when completed, will cost a round half million of dollars. Besides the industry itself, as described in these columns, many smaller industries will spring up about it, that will materially swell the magnificent enterprise.

The company proposes to break ground for the construction early in April, and have the plant ready to produce sugar by November first next.

It is cause for rejoicing.

Jean Guyon was not the only girl who was in love with Major Rochefort. Many good and admirable fellows of the remount, Jeffrey Mitchell, Jim Hunter, and Mary-Adelaide Dupré could not keep their eyes off him, and the officers and civilians looked on him as one of their most reliable companions.

Even the sergeant-major, Barbine Le Gros, and Mike Cadillac, without a position of politeness that they felt towards a Major, felt that he was a man to be trusted, and "very special," said old Mr. Cadillac, who was a sergeant in the Guards, "if he was in the marching line." Such manly praise was high.

After breakfast, on account of war was imminent, the possible of kicking Jean Guyon's mare on the subject was thrust aside. Mike Cadillac was not the only one who felt that Jean Guyon was too valuable a person to be carelessly sacrificed to a mere whim.

"If anything happens to Major Rochefort," said Mike Cadillac, "there will be no more of the Royal Guards."

"Or anything else," said Mary-Adelaide Dupré.

"Or anything else," said Mike Cadillac, "and I'm sorry for the Guards."

"Why?" said Mary-Adelaide.

"Because they will be the first to go," said Mike Cadillac.

"And then?" said Mary-Adelaide.

"And then they will be the last to go," said Mike Cadillac, with a very effective pause.

"Is there any way of telling them?" asked the general, now pale with alarm.

"If Jeanne Guyon and Jim Hunter can, we could help them," said Mike Cadillac.

"Jeanne to Major Cadillac," said Neil Iver, a great lean and sinewy that he brought from a Hay Indian when he were in station."

"Jeanne," said Herbrun, who had been a listener to this conversation.

The two and seven were soon forthcoming, and after a brief examination Major Rochefort they would do.

He asked for no outline fair, subject, and companion, which after some time he were procured.

Beginning at the same time, he covered them with a coat of the list back to the feathers, and making a picture of the impertinent, sulphur and some gunpowder, he placed the returns in it to seek.

While he was doing this the horses and mules were brought from the corral and made ready for entry the women and children should retreat because immediately necessary.

These preparations were made more too soon. From the east, north and west the hides of a great army, such as high as a man's head, were being piled towards the fort but until they got within three hundred yards not a man was visible.

Then out into the open the women and children were ordered to the fort, and the next instant they were hurried back behind the Major, Herbrun and Mike Cadillac.

"It is coming to that, Major," said Mike Cadillac, "when we can't even let a man go out to see what's coming."

"Why, Mike," said Herbrun, "there are two hundred men on the ridge."

"Well, Herbrun could look on a valley from Richmond's men answered that observation. They were in a position where, by using their rifles and hurling their bodies over the parapet, they could protect the two young ladies and the three young men from getting hurt, and this they effectually blocked the advance of the front of Gitu Gitu's army."

THE BENEFIT OF THE DOUBT.

The Modern Merchant Always Assumes that the Customer Is Correct.

The individual homeseeker who sometimes finds that the goods sent him by his tradesman are unsatisfactory or not quite what he ordered, is perhaps inclined to believe that the dealer always keeps the best end of the bargain and assumes, in any case of disagreement, that the customer is mistaken. A writer in the Outlook gives some experiences which show that in the largest and best managed stores an entirely opposite course is pursued. The policy is always to give the customer the benefit of the doubt, and he will cause to be the buyer enjoy the satisfaction of having the best of the argument.

Lately the "Spectator" the writer in question is a cousin to write to a large retail store, complaining that one of his purchases had been left out of the package sent home to him, and he was regretful a bag appeared in the ingredients of the missing article. Upon his return home with some embarrassment, discovered the original object wrapped inside one of his other purchases. This he told the messenger, who received the news with not a sign of interest or surprise.

"It was in the toe of the slipper," explained the purchaser.

"Was it?" said the boy, with his first glimpse of interest. "I'm sorry we mocked them. I put it in the heel."

"And you wrap it in the tissue paper, sir?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you tell your proprietor so?"

"Yes, sir."

"Why didn't you tell me you did?"

"We don't allowed."

At another time the Spectator was talking with the proprietor of a large grocery store, when a clerk came forward bearing on a platter, a cooked tongue, with one slice cut from it.

"Who from has sent this back," said he, "and complains of it."

The proprietor looked critically at the tongue.

"Send her another," he said, casually and left the bookkeeper to write a note expressing our regret. And, indeed, said that tum up to my house it's a particularly good one."

This did he show how great a respect a business man may have for a customer's patronage, and how little for his own opinion.

The House an Opera Built.

"The cretinous" an called because it was originally an apple orchard—at New Ivo-belle, New York, is the same-named home of Francis Wilson, the comedy opera star," writes Franklin H. Wileg, in the Ladies' Home Journal. The ground was bought and a modest house built on it when the run of "The Merry Monarch" began. As the profits of that opera increased, the original plans were enlarged in one way and another, until mount a third of the returns from the opera had been expended. The house is of stone and stands on 2 terraces. From the upper windows there is a twenty-mile view of Long Island Sound; and among the rolling lawns are a set of diminutive chairs and a settee made from the elaborately carved seats of an opera in China Chorus at Stratford-on-Avon, and a chair given to Sir Edwin Landseer by Sir Walter Scott from his library at Abbotsford.

"What do Redmond, but by pressing on he can strike Dryden's party in the Red Pass and cut them in two," replied Mike Armand. "The sick, wagons and non-fighting men would keep up and back home. The Red Pass is only six miles off. Dryden, and we can finish our job."

"Yes," said Herbrun.

IN this discourse, Dr. Talmage argues the idea that the Christian religion is good for this world as well as the next and will help us to do anything that ought to be done in life. I. SHIP SUBSIDY VOTED.

HANNA-FRYE MEASURE PASSED BY THE SENATE.

Six Republicans, Including Allison, Spooner, Dolliver and Quarles, Vote Against Bill, but Press No Unfriendly Amendment—Won't Pass House.

By a vote of 42 to 31 the Senate Monday afternoon passed the ship subsidy bill in its amended form. This majority of 11 would ordinarily be considered decisive, but the vote was unexpected and significant because six of the least known Republican Senators, coming from the three Republican States of Wisconsin, Iowa and Vermont, voted with the Democrats in opposition to the bill.

A surprising feature of the proceedings was the adoption of an amendment proposed by Mr. Hanna which is one other opportunity gives permission to the shipping trust, and is another clause taxes from the subsidy all foreign built ships carrying our mail. Of the American ships, built and to be built, the Senate has granted exemption to the duties imposed by sundry expenses to the end of the fiscal year, ending June 30, 1905. Prospects indicated that most of them were rich in gold from the surface down.

It was noticed that the stock was so wrapped in flames that it was impossible to save it. The insurance on the building is $1,000 for a year, but it was noticed that the stock was more than twice as much as the insurance. The Fox Lake Opera House was valued at —Dr. Wilkinson, of St. James was a passenger to this port on the Beaver Tuesday. He went to Elk Rapids Wednesday, and will return to the Beavers Friday.

—An old landmark has gone. The old Keyes building near the Fountain City House, has been torn down and carted away. It was built in 1867. The SENTINEL was printed in its upper rooms in 1870, and in 1873 was occupied by Dr. G. W. Crouter for his first drug store.

After the Thursday evening service will be held the annual election of officers, and reading of the reports from the officers of the church and Guild for the past year. —At the republican caucus Tuesday night the following excellent ticket was nominated: Supervisor, John Wand; clerk, Lisle Shanahan; treasurer L. S. See; justice, Dr. A. A. Swinton; school inspector, full term, H. M. Ross; vacancy, E. H. Green; board of review, James Ackert; highway commissioner, Jas. Alcock; constable, L. E. Smith, Ralph Washburn, Geo. Williams, Chas E. See. The following township committee was appointed: R. W. Paddock, L. E. Benton, Ralph Washburn.

—The editor of this paper long agreeded to ignore all the live, personal slurs, and unjust and unmanly attacks that come from the editor of a local paper. That we have kept silent under great provocation our readers will bear witness. But patience has a limit, especially when it must be exercised by one of weak mind body. The last issue of that paper contains another unfair, untrue and intentionally malicious attack, so any person can know by a fair investigation; a thing never done by the editor of the paper referred to—when the editor of this paper is involved. The readers of this paper do not want personal controversy, and we have carefully avoided them. But we cannot always endure it.

—The writer of this has the pleasure, one day last week, of inspecting the new city hall and court house at Petoskey, upon which the contractors are putting the finishing touches. The architectural appearance of the structure is imposing. It is of red pressed brick and gray sandstone trimmings, and is of a pleasing exterior detail. The interior, throughout, is of polished oak, excepting the basement, which is occupied by the fire-department and a modern steel-caged jail, with excellent sanitary appliances. The main floor is devoted to office rooms, large, high, and well lighted. Above are still more large offices, and the court room. This chamber will be one of the finest of its kind in the northern half of the state. From its window is afforded one of the most magnificent panoramic views we have ever seen, overlooking little Traverse Bay lis entire length. The building was constructed with a view of accommodating the court and county offices, the question of removal from Harbor Springs being now before the people. We have no desire to kick up with the Emmet county seat fight, but if the proposition carries, Emmet county will officiately occupy quarters that they need not be ashamed to show to metropolitan summer visitors. The building is a credit to Northern Michigan.

Easter opening at Mrs. Emery's Millinery rooms, Friday and Saturday of this week. A competent trimmer will be present.

Died, at her home in St. James, Mrs Bridget Molloy, wife of Anthony Molloy, on Saturday evening, March 22, at eight o'clock, 35 years. Deceased maiden name was Bridget Boyle and as she was born and raised on the Island and the major portion of her married life was spent here she was known and loved by every one. Mrs. Molloy's health was very poor during the last six or eight years of her life, and for the last year especially. She was confined to her bed a good share of the time with heart disease and other complications consequential to it which finally ended her life. She was the most patient of sufferers and always full of gratitude for anything done for her. Though suffering at times from the most excruciating pain during the last days of her illness it was a great comfort to her devoted husband and family to realize that the end came peacefully. A few hours before her death during an interval of consciousness she called her family to her side and bade them all good-bye, then lapsed into quiet unconsciousness till her death in the evening. The bereaved family consist of the husband and six children-three boys and three girls, three more having died during infancy. Her father aged 72 and mother aged 70, besides six brothers and two sisters still survive her. She being the first of this large family to answer the roll call up yonder. Her brothers Hugh, Dennis, Daniel and sister Mrs. Hamilton Rock reside on the Island and are highly respected. The others are influential citizens in the upper peninsula. The funeral occurred Monday forenoon at the Holy Cross church, of which she was a faithful and worthy communicant.

MARINE NOTES.

The towing tug appointments will be made next week.

The fishing tug Minnie Warren is laid up with a badly damaged boiler.

Emory Baldwin leaves today to go as second engineer in the steambarge Rudolph.

The steamer Hamilton will add Frankfort to her list of stopping places this season.

Capt. Peter McCafferty is here with his fishing tug violet, recently bought at St. Joseph.

The steamer Pine Lake, after her overhauling, will load Saturday at the Charlevoix Lumber Co's dock for Chicago.

The steamer Beaver was awarded the contract of taking the light Keepers to Waugoshance, Gallagher, and South Fox, and is doing the job this week.

The tug Mary McLane, having been sold to Detroit parties, is being fitted out and will leave for there Tuesday, in charge of Capt. Edward T. Hawley.

The steamer Beaver went out into Lake Michigan Sunday afternoon to try her machinery. Everything worked to perfection. She went to the Beavers on her first trip Tuesday.

Navigation is open in the Grand Traverse bay, the water in the bay having been frozen only twenty nine days. In 1901 the ice went out of the bay on the 14th of April, the water having been frozen fifty-nine days.

At the ship yard the steamer Gordon has been cut and extended for her 17 foot lengthening, and work is being rushed. The steamer Mary, of St. Ignace, is all ready to be launch after her re-build.

The fish tug Maxwell turned up all right. On Friday the Booth Co. went out the tug Parmelee to look up the missing boat. She was unable to get into the harbor, but made a landing at Cable's bay, where it was learned that the Maxwell was ice-bound at Beaver Harbor. Later the Parmelee got closer to the harbor, and saw the Maxwell leave the harbor, going through the north passage, where it was clear of ice. The Maxwell arrived at this port Sunday afternoon.

Milwaukee Wisconsin: The business of the 20th district of the government supply service which has headquarters at St. Joseph, has increased so that the steamer Dahlia is no longer able to handle it. The government has entered the new steamer Sumac here for duty. She is 700 tons displacement and cost $115,000. During last year the Dahlia traveled 11,000 miles and delivered 25,000 gallons of oil. Her capacity was not sufficient to satisfy all the demands, however, and as a result some lighthouses on Lake Michigan and Green Bay were obliged to close earlier than usual.

The people of Beaver Island are very proud of their new steamboat, the Beaver, and very much gratified that Capt. Campbell should name her in honor of their beautiful island. They have reason to be proud of the Beaver. She is a fine boat, and will give the Islanders better and more regular service than they have ever had before. The Beaver was a beautiful sight Tuesday evening as she entered this harbor with every electric light doing its "trick." She goes to the island again Friday or Saturday—the trip being made uncertain by the lighthouse keepers contract.

To-day Capt. S. M. Rose, of this place, bought the Erie L. Hackley of Capt. F. D. Campbell. The Hackley will go to an entirely new route, and Capt. S. M. Rose, will try to build it up to a paying basis. She will run between Frankfort and Manitou Island, Leland, Glen Arbor and Glen Haven. The primary object in the project is to afford the resort people at South Manitou Island an outlet daily. It is said that they are behind Capt. Rose, and as they are wealthy Chicago people there is no doubt of the result, as they never tied up to a squarer man than Capt. Sam Rose.

Night Was Her Terror.

"I would cough nearly all night long" writes Mrs. Chas. Applegate, of Alexandria, Ind., "and could hardly get any sleep. BENJ. BROWN.

That the talk about that Alpena railroad coming to Charlevoix was a bit of strategy to help get the Alpena right-of-way elsewhere is proven by the following from the Traverse City Eagle: The last talk a railroad connecting Alpena, Gaylord & Western, has been mentioned several times in these columns, but so far has created very little talk among our people. The design of the company is to build a railroad across the entire state from east to west, starting at Alpena and touching at Gaylord, Manistee, Traverse City ending at Frankfort. It is understood that the right of way has already been secured over the entire distance between Alpena and Gaylord. T. T. Hanes is just now getting out a letter from William Durand, saying that he in company with other parties interested, will start over the route from Gaylord today and will reach Traverse City Wednesday noon, when they wish to meet with the Traverse City people show up what they propose to do, with the view of inteasing our people in the matter. That the building of this road is of great interest to Traverse City there can be no dispute and it is to be hoped that these representatives of the road will meet with a hearty reception.

—Mrs. Martha E. Smith recently wrote Mrs. President Roosevelt asking her to contribute a handkerchief to the Charlevoix Ladies Episcopal Guild to be sold at the Easter fair. A handkerchief sale. Yesterday Mrs. Smith received a pleasant note from the president's secretary and desired handkerchiefs.

—The House of Representatives have passed the river and harbor bill and the provisions of the measure is of particular interest to shippers of East Jordan, Boyne City and the other points on South Arm and Pine Lake. The bill provides that the present appropriations and unexpended amounts in it be made available for the making of a sixteen foot channel from Lake Michigan through Round Lake to Pine lake. Former appropriations have all been made on the basis of a 12 foot channel and while the lower cut between Lake Michigan and Round Lake has been dredged up to a greater depth the upper cut into Pine Lake has been left to take care of itself with the result that the shippers of the above ports have been put to an increased expense each year to get their cargoes through. A permanent 16 foot channel will do away with all this difficulty.—East Jordan Herald. As long ago as after Dr. Avery was a member of Congress from this district the 16 foot channel from Lake Michigan to Pine Lake was provided for and recognized by Congress. But the actual depths engineer's offices, under Col. Lydecker, refused to recognize the act, on the grounds of impracticability—the old bridge draw, center-pier and sunk approach forbidding such extension of piers for harbor improvements. The new bridge, therefore, with its widened draw and deeply sunk piers, is the result of his conclusion the year referred to.

—Much praise is given the boys' orchestra for their fine music rendered at the Masonic banquet. The organization is a credit to the town.

—Mr. George H. Hall and Miss Nancy E. Huffman were married at the home of the bride's parents at Marion, on Sunday at two o'clock, by Rev. T. B. Hughes, pastor of the Baptist church.

—Peter Ackert died at the home of his son, Frank Ackert, Tuesday night. He was 80 years of age, and leaves a widow. Half a century ago deceased practiced medicine in the country about Grand Rapids.

—Notwithstanding the mud and storm, the Easter Missionary program rendered by the three Sabbath Schools of the Norwood circuit, were a splendid success. The program was furnished by the Methodist Missionary Society "God's Call to America." The children entered heartily and joyfully into the work and acquitted themselves very well, reflecting great credit upon the various committees. The children's offering to the Missionary cause was $22.10.

—Bert Smiley, well known here, is having a lovely time running a paper at Galesburg, Mich. One night recently his home was bombarded with rotten eggs and other refuse. The windows, doors, piazzas and sides of the building were covered with reeking, ancient bun fruit. Smiley sallied forth to investigate. He dodged a few missiles and the marauders ran away. When Bert was here he nearly drove bridge tender Uncle Jim Martin into the asylum. Bert had a small sloop that had a spar a foot too long to go under the bridge. Jim growled at Bert one day when he thought Bert was overdoing the thing, and Bert high order in placing the gates in harmonious action with the other machinery.

Nell on a little Turkish cushion for return as at noonday, but even in these days of strife a young Berkley knew how to be courteous to a maiden, indeed, he seemed a great deal more at ease than he had been.

"We were good ones, we shouted, and I believe we must have contributed his share to the noise of the rear guard." said he, with a twinkle in his eyes, when we had finally succeeded in quieting the men, when they stopped.

"Are we nearly about our friends, do you think?"

"We have not now much then if we hook. There is no doubt but that the Red Men are in the neighborhood, and if we come back to the edge of our cover we may see something of them."

With the moment ended Nell, she's several detachments of the little party, spread round in search. They were soon rapidly then before, and the men, who were not so well used to the saddle as the boys, they were not in a hurry, thickly wooded country, and the sound of wind bring rolled down from the hills, and the Mexicans were close to their eyes. But it was not this that drew Berkley and his men thither, and made Bertram Lenox was his best friend, and a good friend, too, to boot.

Leaving the Pass they had ridden quietly through a country of Red Cloud's own, where, they knew, he was now conducting up the rocks, and they heard the voice of triumph. They looked down by Glen Dome, and saw under the trees the long tier of tents, the tents of the chiefs's swarming in front, and the wolf-dogs and children with their yelps.

"We must grab one!" said Bertram, as they came to the mouth of the valley, "Red Cloud's camp is over there, and we can see what we can do."

"Why, what's the matter?" said Nell.

"Nothing, only I think we should be better off if we had a hostage."

"Why, what's the matter?" said Miss Nell, with the Berkeleys that would stop out under the most glorious circumstances, "you don't mean to bring us here?"

"And I am sorry for it," replied the guard. "But tell me, what has become of the others?"

"Why, they are in the Red Pass," said Nell Carlyle, "and they are making things lively, I tell you, I know that they have stopped them. See the wounded coming in."

"And suppose they should come here? remember what was being carried so close beside Nell's litter?"

At Little Wildcat's, Bertram, we are done under the tree, and Bertram Lenox gave a brief but clear account of affairs to the chief, who listened with the gaze fixed on the ground, and at the end, said, "But it is possible to extricate the party from the Pass?"

"Then you think your father and Gen. Harrison may be able to retreat?"

"No! that."

"But the men? cannot advance. See the Pass opens into the camp of the Red Cloud." said Little Wildcat, looking with a cover of his eyes in the direction of the Pass, and then under the trees and by the river.

"No, but there is still a chance. There is the cliff and the river."

"The river?" said Nell.

"Yes, the river, and I wish I had a hundred men, they would go, when the place is a mystery to the Indians, and be never visited except by their medicine men."

"Ah, I know, I know—you Mike Cox and Bertram Lenox to stop and look about him. The news of fresh captives just run through the camp.

The women and children, with the old men, and the wolf-like dogs, come flocking about the captives; the young speculators with axe and curiosity, the old gravitators with exultation. Some of them come close, and, coupling low and hoarse the beautiful pale face of the white girls; others seemed fascinated by the men, and many of them crept round and felt Bertram Lenox's long, yellow hair, equally sacred, and every valley in the country, and it was a time to raise a cry of to the Sioux."

"And the Cheyenne? asked the chief, his face a strange mixing of anger and curiosity."

"I am a white man."

"What do you?"

"A prisoner."

"Pale face!"

"Is not that enough?" asked Bertram, with a smile, "I have thought you a chief and a friend."

"Do they thought man's split this thought wrong, if they thought for a time they thought right."

"But dictatorial as you have done?"

"Why, what have I done?"

"What have I done?"

"Have I not prevented the Sioux and taken prisoner?"

"The land belongs to those who can maintain their right to its possession, said Bertram, with a trembling the Sioux. I only regret that my ability to continue that opposition is at an end for I should like to live in order to fight against those who have no respect for age and sex, and who treat women and children as white men would not treat brutes."

"Are you a coward?"

"Are you a coward?"

"Do you think I am afraid?"

"Why, what do you?"

"Do you think I am afraid?"

"Why, what do you?"

"Do you think I am afraid?"

THE NEW SOUTH.

Interesting Letter From Hon. R. R. Wilkinson.

TUSCUMBIA, Georgia, March 28th, 1902.

DEAR EDITOR: As there are many in the North who desire some place where they can locate with the means they can command, and secure homes and employment, and improve the conditions of themselves and families, I feel constrained to enlighten them through the columns of the Sentinel in reference to the climate, agricultural, mineral and manufacturing facilities of this portion of the Sunny South.

I see in the last Sentinel an item headed "Oregon as the Land of Promise," and the picture given agrees with my opinion of the far West as a point for people with moderate means to locate.

The most prominent factor in the development of any country is the facilities for moving its products and it is of this I wish to call the attention of your readers in this communication, and I hope to be able in the near future to write more particularly of the other prominent factors in the development of the country.

As there are no large rivers or large bodies of water in this part of the South that enter into the carrier question. I will only call attention to the railroad facilities which are equal to the very best in the land, and are far superior to most localities. As the great Queen & Crescent Railway system is the one that passes through and especially controls the freight and passenger traffic of this part of the South, I will only speak of its lines and their importance.

The traveler going south strikes this line at Cincinnatti where he can get through tickets to all important points in the South. Immediately on boarding the train he is struck with the magnificent character of the cars and their equipment, and the solid and permanent appearance of the road bed. The road is well graded and ballasted, the cross ties are heavy and of oak, and the rails are of the best of steel and almost double the size and heft of those used on many of the northern roads. Owing to the mountainous character of the country the road has cost nearly a mint of money, and in all its construction and equipment durability seems to have been the end sought. To illustrate something of its cost I will mention the 27 tunnels on the road between Cincinnatti and Chattanooga, and many bridges spanning rivers and gorges, one of which is over 200 feet high and several hundred feet long. In going south from Cincinnatti the more easterly portions of Kentucky and Tennessee and much of the way passes through a rough and mountainous country. The soil most of the way is fairly productive but in places is very fertile. Thriving villages and large cities with their stations are found all along the line.

I will only mention a few of the more important. The first place of much importance is Lexington, Ky., which is dubbed in the famous blue grass section of that state. The next is Harriman Junction, Tenn., where the northern branch of the Southern Railway "branches on, passing through Knoxville, Tenn., Ashville, N. C., Columbia, S. C., where it again branches, one branch going to Charleston, S. C., and the other to Savannah Georgia, passing on to Jesup where it connects again with the main line. Continuing south on the Q. & C. you come to Chattanooga, Tenn., one of the leading manufacturing and railroad centers of the South, here you can take the main line of the great Southern Railroad running through Rome, Atlanta, Macon and on south along the east coast of Florida to Jacksonville, Palm Beach, Lemon City and Miami.

There is also another branch running further west, touching a large number of smaller towns on the way to Port Tampa, and also a branch from Jacksonville through Palatka, Pomona, Winter Park and Plant City to Tampa. At Rome, Ga., there is a branch of the Southern running southwest through Talladega and Selma to Mobile, one of the great shipping points on the Gulf.

At Chattanooga those desiring to go to New Orleans and the southwest can take the Alabama & Great Southern R. R. connecting with the Illinois Centralat New Orleans. The road passes through Trenton, Ga., Fort Payne, Ala., noted for its wonderful boom a number of years ago, started by northern men with northern capital which soon collapsed, ruining financially many who had invested their money while the boom was at its zenith. From thence the road runs to Birmingham, Ala., which for its mines of iron and coal, its furnaces, foundrys and their great manufacturing industries is called the Pittsburgh of the South. From Birmingham the road passes on through Tuscaloosa the capital of Alabama which is known as one of the most beautiful cities of the south. From there it strikes Meridian where it branches, one branch going to New Orleans and the other passing through Jackson the capital of Miss., on the Shreveport where it connects with the Vicksburgh, Shreveport and Pacific R. R.

These lines of railroads composing the Queen & Crescent system pass through some of the finest farming, fruit and mineral lands in the south, and especially in this true of the Alabama and Great Southern railroads which are noted for the magnitude of the business done, and especially by the A. G. S. There are two lines of passenger trains daily, three fresh way, and usually each through train is composed of 1 mail 2 baggage and express cars 2 passenger coaches, 2 sleeping, 1 chair and 1 dining room car, making a train of nine cars. There are some 16 to 18 freight trains daily from 20 to 50 rods long with cars loaded with cotton, tobacco, grain, iron ore, coal, lumber, oil, stock, poultry, fruit and vegetables, and the products of furnace, mill and factory, all on their way to the markets of the world.

In my judgment these railroad facilities with the natural resources of this section of land present inducements. To those seeking locations for farming business, far superior to any other section of my acquaintance.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Boyne Citizen: W. H. White & Co. are now preparing to fence a large tract of land—fifteen hundered acres or more—for grazing purposes, near Maple Slope, for which they expect to commence shipping cattle from Chicago by April 1st to put on said ranch.

The Kalkaskian says that "Curly Thornton, whose body was supposed to have been found in a shanty near Boyne Falls a couple weeks ago, and which fact was noted in The Herald columns, is now serving 25 days sentence in the county jail. He stabbed a man at Sharon in February.

Petoskey Democrat: It is currently reported that Mike Elem M. Store, the noted missionary, will appear on the Bay View platform this season. She certainly would be a drawing card, in view of the remarkable experience which she underwent during her six months' captivity by Bulgarian bandits, and the fact that the matter came nearly being one of international complication.

Traverse City Record: The prospects of a railroad across the state from Alpena to Frankfort, by way of Gaylord and Traverse City are extremely bright and already right of way has been secured to Gaylord. The conditions are found to be so favorable that it is expected that the work of laying rails will begin about the first of May.

L. K. Gilda returned today from Grand Rapids, where he went to meet with the capitalists who have taken up for consideration the proposed Traverse City, Old Mission & Peninsula electric railway project. Mr. Gilda states that the matter is being given serious consideration and that the plan of bonding has been decided upon and other details is come of consideration. It is now apparent that the line to Old Mission will soon materialize.

The fame of Petoskey lime rock has reached the United States steel corporation and William Brady, purchasing agent of that illinois branch of that company, was there last week quietly sizing up the calcite in that vicinity with a view to securing for his company its supply from that point. Fifty carloads a day are used in its works. The company will probably make large purchases of land there and build docks for the accommodation of its fleet.

Harbor Springs cor. Petoskey Democrat: As election approaches the county seat question receives some attention, but it is not talked of here near as much as in Petoskey. There are quite a number of people who consider it of so little importance that they do not care which way it goes, some even claiming that the town will be better off without it, and then there are a large number in Harbor Springs who will vote for Petoskey outright. While they admire Mr. Dod's efforts in behalf of the town, they say it is work of the eleventh hour. They claim he is responsible for the condition whereby it is possible for Petoskey to get the county seat, as they say that when the village sent him to Lansing he could have secured the annexation of the Manitou Islands to Emmet county, instead of letting Charlevoix have them, and thus prevented the addition of the Charlevoix territory to the south end of Emmet. That, it is said, was the beginning of the end, and it is evident to them that Mr. Dodd was figuring more for his party than for his town. Every one concedes that Petoskey will get the county seat; and as every one in Petoskey claims it, it seems to be a pretty one-sided contest, with not much question as to result.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Miss Vowles did not resume her work until Tuesday.

The board have recommended that all pupils be vaccinated.

The high school has been presented with a framed picture of Mr. Tier by the Extemporaneous class.

The Basket Ball team are arranging to play Petoskey at that place or near future, probably this week or next.

Miss Mogg, the new teacher, takes the place of Mrs. Upright, who has been teaching part of the fifth and sixth grades.

Among the members who left school at the close of last term are Hugh Miller, Vesta Hughston, Will Peterson and Anna Peterson.

Mr. Parmelee, one of the former principals made the high school a visit Monday and gave very interesting talks on Chemistry and Physiography.

The high school Base Ball team won two games over the city team. Scores 26 to 6 and 23 to 3. The boys are doing good work and we expect to turn out a championship team.

On Friday the Extemporaneous class will have the last meeting of the year, at which the class of '02 will make speeches and incidentally have a little fun with the new members for the class of '03.

The Champion Banner for contest between Freshmen, Sophomores and Juniors was presented to the Freshmen at the last meeting of Lyceum. The banner was wrought in the superlative colors of the Freshmen—green and white. The Juniors also received a "banner" but it was not a "championship"—wonder why?

IN SERIOUS DANGER

ADVOCATES OF PROTECTION SEE CAUSE FOR ALARM.

The Proposed Tariff Concessions to Cuba Involve Needless Meddling with Home and a Grave Menace to Our Own Agricultural Interests.

The situation in the United States in regard to the practice of protection as a means of national development is remarkable. We have just emerged from a period of Hard Times in a way which has justified the strongest convictions of the Protectionists. Many a man has in past times hesitated over the Protection according to iron and steel in competition with the world at large? Yet iron and steel, strongly protected here, have sallied forth and opened for us the markets of the world. The very things on which we had the greatest doubts are the things which have placed our principles beyond dispute by practical illustration known and read of all men.

Nevertheless, this is the very moment when protection is running its greatest risk. It is a curious fact, in the nature of mankind, that there is no time when there is such great danger as the time of victory. After tension of muscles comes the natural reaction, and men, after victory, like to concede something to their enemies. This is all well enough when it relates to the courtesies of individual intercourse, but it has no application to business. Protection rests upon principle, or it does not. If it does not, then it is a mere bestowal of bounty, and is no part of the business of government. If it rests upon principle, then that principle must be that the American markets belong to the Americans. You cannot maintain your system and sacrifice anything to which it is applicable.

Recent events ought to show conclusively that the people are coming to understand these things. After such a victory as our system has had, it ought really be understood that all attacks on the system, if made at all, must be insidious and disguised. They cannot be open, for they would be resisted at sight. Hence there should be full discussion of these new attempts, which are now being made in our period of victory to turn the victory into defeat.

The first attack came in the disguise of reciprocity. It was carried well. All things sound well which are moved by an open Mr. Cleveland could talk most convincingly of the tariff which should protect all manufacturers, and yet he so nicely pointed that it would suit all importers here and all manufacturers abroad, so long as the question was against him and he could do nothing, there was no false note in the discussion. It was not a source of his own party, and they all went to work on a real tariff, to which the proposed reciprocity was a mere incident, or his face as a general by.

So with reciprocity treaties. Framed in the blind they exchange only commodities that one of the countries produces and the other does not. This seems plain. But no real reciprocity bill or treaty ever could do any such thing, or ever really tried to.

Recognizing this fact when they were face to face with it the manufacturers and producers of this country quite recently, in their meeting in Washington, earned the thanks of their country by their courageous action. This they did, though some of their friends stayed away as another method of protest.

Another insidious attack upon protection as a system has recently been made in the bill repealing more or less of the tariff for the benefit of Cuba. It does not, in any way appeal to our judgments. It is not addressed to our intellects. It is only addressed to our sympathies. We are told that Cuba has been misruled by land and free. Can that be so? Not at all. Some enterprising Americans have gone there, purchased land and built a railroad. Are we going to reward capitalization? We have a right to wish them success, and we give them our good will. Why should they be benefited at the expense of those who stay at home and develop our own country? Why should a desire to be kind to the absent lead us to withdraw protection for our own industries, and our own best customers? Why should we, for our sake, raise? Why should we, for the sake of gone away, crop, who have gone abroad to seek fortune, allow such an attack upon our system of protection as will be a good beginning for a final destruction?

If you need just one more instance of the attack, look at those who are flocking to the aid of the Cuban bounty or rebate, whatever it may be. Every journal that has ever advocated free trade is after us in a fashion which may be called lurid, all of those are attacking those who sustain protection, as if it were a crime to make taxes s

POSTOFFICE ROBBER CAPTURED ON PACIFIC COAST.

Head of Gang of Famous Criminals Is Placed in Custody—Confession of Prisoner Implicates Him A Jail Sentence Stays Another in Play.

One of the most remarkable illustrations of the inadequacy with which the United States government performs the most vital function of any government within its jurisdiction, the protection of its citizens, was the arrest of George Ingram, who was taken by the Western postoffice officials, in Tacoma, Wash., last week. Ingram was charged with the robbery of a postoffice in the Pacific coast, covering some thirty-five miles in a stagecoach, carrying $5,500 in cash, and the entire case is in the hands of Inspector Fleming, who has been shadowing Ingram for a year. Ingram was wanted back in Kentucky for the robbery of a postoffice in Salyersville, in 1899, and a jail sentence in Kentucky was waiting for him when the Western officials, in Tacoma, Wash., arrested him. Ingram is a man of good address and education, and is a member of one of the most famous families in Kentucky. The Ingrams and Allen Family are in charge of the famous feud between the Hatfields and Ingrams, of Kentucky, that lasted for years and cost the lives of a score of men. FACES LIFE TERM FOR DEBT.

Indentitle Imprisonment Confronts Son of Ex-Treasurer Of Pike County.

Life imprisonment for debt is in prospect for W. T. Nugent, a member of the bankrupt dry goods firm of R. H. Nugent & Co., of Louisville, unless he can produce $11,000, which he has been ordered to put in his possession. When the house, which was one of the oldest in the city, failed two years ago, it was charged that before the assignment was made, W. T. Nugent, son of the president, had disposed of a large part of the stock in other hands than those of the owner and set figures in the assignment, the Nugent asserted that it had been spent in payment of his father's debts. He, however, could not prove it, and in the instance of condition the son was tried on the charge of perjury. Judge Evan ruled that he must pay over the money, or go to jail for contempt of court for life. Attorneys for Nugent got him out on a writ of habeas corpus on ground that the Circuit Court of Appeals reversed Judge Evan's decision, but the Supreme Court of the United States sustained him. Nugent's counsel made a plea for a new hearing, which was denied. The Supreme Court of Kentucky ruled that the debtor is not under virtually imprisonment, but is free to go anywhere in the Pacific coast, covering some thirty-five miles in a stagecoach, carrying some $5,500 in cash, and the entire case is in the hands of Inspector Fleming, who has been shadowing Ingram for a year. MILES WOULD QUIT.

THREATENS TO RESIGN IF ARMY BILL IS PASSED.

Military Head of the Nation Tells Senate Committee He Could Now Name the Men Who Would Be Advanced—May Be Removed.

Lieut. Gen. Miles, testifying before the Senate committee on military affairs the other day, declared that if the army reorganization bill submitted by Secretary of War Root should become a law he would be in a position to name the officers who would be promoted to the vacancies in the new staff. He said that he could name all the officers who would be selected to fill the new places, should the bill become law. He said he would resign if the bill should be passed.

The declarations of Gen. Miles are expected by white House people to unsettle the Cuban situation. The Cuban Court of Appeals reversed Judge Duvel's decision that the Supreme Court of the United States had used language which made a plea for a new hearing, which was denied. The Supreme Court of Kentucky ruled that the debtor is not under virtually imprisonment, but is free to go anywhere in the Pacific coast, covering some thirty-five miles in a stagecoach, carrying some $5,500 in cash, and the entire case is in the hands of Inspector Fleming, who has been shadowing Ingram for a year. LED A DUAL EXISTENCE.

Joseph Hopkins Was a Criminal and a Respected Villager.

A genuine instance of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" has been revealed through the shooting of Joseph Hopkins by Dan Kohn, a former policeman, in Chicago. While Hopkins was lying at the point of death in a hospital the police were uncovering a dual life, such as is seldom found outside of novels. Hopkins, living in a little store-and-a-half house in the suburbs, at the end of the "third" county line, and a mile and a half from the Palos Park railway station, the man has lived, with a reputation among his neighbors as his wife, respected and admired. At his house, a farm of the place, he has a fine library, a billiard, a dozen cities and all around belongs. In the city he was a gay bachelor, frequenting the gambling dens and furious club. Hopkins has a criminal record of many years. He was wanted in New York when having a third mate on board. Authorities for Nugent got him out on a writ of habeas corpus on ground that the Circuit Court of Appeals reversed Judge Duvel's decision that the Supreme Court of the United States used language which made a plea for a new hearing, which was denied. The Supreme Court of Kentucky ruled that the debtor is not under virtually imprisonment, but is free to go anywhere in the Pacific coast, covering some thirty-five miles in a stagecoach, carrying some $5,500 in cash, and the entire case is in the hands of Inspector Fleming, who has been shadowing Ingram for a year. CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOLUME XXXIV. CHARLEVOIX MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, APRIL 10, 1902. NUMBER 3

Charlevoix Sentinel.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.

MARINE NOTES.

The Boyne City steamer Rhoecum was down Tuesday on her first trip.

The Charlevoix lifesaving station will open Saturday night at twelve o'clock.

The steamer Illinois will leave Chicago Friday evening for Northern Michigan points.

The tug Mary McLane left for Detroit this morning (Thursday), in charge of her new owners.

Since 1858 there have been but four springs that the straits of Mackinac opened in March, and this is one of them.

The schooner Maine will next week load lumber at Larkin's Pier, Grand Traverse bay, for a lower lake port, and bring back coal for Wilbur.

Capt. Herman Oertling has concluded not to sail this season and his schooner C. H. Hackley will be under the command of Capt. Thomas Hansen.

The schooner Annie O. Hanson, well known here went a shore at Manistee on the 31st. The crew were taken off by the life savers. Owners expect to save the vessel.

The towing tugs are officered this season as follows: Taylor, Capt. Wm. Cross, engineer. Tom Nowland, Wheeler, Capt. Wm. Taylor, engineer, Pat Crosson; Dennis Bron, Capt. J. P. Partridge.

The steamhargo Welcome, Capt. Geo. Weaver, arrived here Wednesday from Milwaukee with grain for the roller mills, and the schooners Hackley and Mars have left Milwaukee for Boyne City.

John Kelly goes as engineer of the steamer Eric L. Hackley with Capt. Sam Rose, and the boat is now being fitted out. She will be ready the first of the week, or sooner, and will go on the Charlevoix East Jordan route in the place of the Gordon during April, or until the Gordon comes out.

The steamer Beaver has struck the gait that she will maintain for the season. On Saturday she made the Beaver Island run, from pier to dock, in two hours and three quarters. In cases requiring a more rapid run, she can easily make the run in 2½ hours. The Hackley's time was 3½ hours. She has a trip to make from Petoskey to Northport with a load of lime.

The Northern Steamship Company has definitely announced that it will not attempt to maintain a passenger service the coming season on Lake Superior to connect with its steamers at Mackinac Island. Last season the Miami was brought from Florida and put on the run, but this year it will be left to the Anchor line, which operates the India, China and Japan between Duluth and Buffalo.

There is some prospect of the passage of the bill now pending in Congress providing pensions for members of the lifesaving service. Prominent lake shippers have taken the matter up, and will ask all marine organizations with which he has any influence to act upon it. If the lake interests are active in pushing the bill there is reason to expect that it will become a law.

The steamer Pine Lake left here Saturday for Chicago, lumber laden, the first clearance from this port with cargo. The John Spry, which wintered at Boyne City, started out from there Saturday for Tonawanda, and slumped a big portion of her deckload of shingles into Pine Lake. She returned, relaid her deckload and started out again Sunday noon. She was five hours getting here through the ice. She coaled here and left Tuesday.

The deputy collector of customs of this port has received instructions to enforce the law with naphtha, electric, and other launches running here in summer, whether they be private craft, or ferrys. While this class of boats are not documented, they are required by law to comply with "the rules of the road" in carrying signal lights. Therefore any boat of this character which hereafter runs without the lights required by law will be promptly dealt with. The local either has no discretion. All interested will take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

A correspondent writes from Frankfort, Mich: "The Alpena, Gaylord & Western Railway Company has finally decided to make Frankfort its Western land terminal. The open winter harbor here, together with its natural proximity to other important points on the western shore of Lake Michigan, convinced the officers that this is the best terminal they could find. It is the Company's intention to operate a carfery system across Lake Huron from Alpena to Georgian bay, and from there another railway will be built to Quebec, thus cutting off 600 miles of travel from St. Paul to the sea coast. The road will run through the finest lumber and farming belt of Northern Michigan. Its success is assured, and work has already been begun between Alpena and Gaylord. It is expected to have the road in running order to Frankfort within two years."

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

C. F. Edgar, of the Monitor Oil Co., paid the Island a visit on Wednesday.

Mr. Salisbury, representing J. H. Conrad & Co., is spending the week on the Island, doing business with our merchants.

H. P. Dix, of Hillsbard, Spencer, Hartlett & Co., left here on Wednesday.

The many friends of A. L. Coulter on the Island, are glad to learn of his reappointment to the Deputy Game Wardenship.

W. E. Gill and Frank Stafford returned home Wednesday.

Passengers on the Beaver to Charlevoix on her Wednesday trip were as follows: Rev. Fr. Zugelder, Supervisor W. J. Gallagher, Capt. M. J. Hosmer, Dr. Wilkinson and J. H. Gallagher. They will all return on the Friday boat, except James Gallagher, who is attending the Charlevoix High School.

The Squaw Island light keeper, Mr. Owen C. McAuley, and his assistants Nelson & Bladdie left the Harbor for their station yesterday.

"Button Man" Bankrupt.

Meyer H. Bimberg, widely known as "Bim, the Button Man," because he manufactures campaign buttons, has filed a petition in bankruptcy in New York. His troubles, however, are not due to any slump in the button trade or to failure of the prediction he made as to what faces should go upon the buttons, but to outside ventures. The manufacture of the buttons will be continued by a company of which he is manager.

To Recover Stolen Treasure.

Two million dollars worth of gold was stolen from the Transvaal three years ago, and a syndicate has now been formed to recover it. The gold was shipped on the French vessel Emmeline, which was bound for England. The vessel was wrecked, however, off the coast of Zululand, and it is the sole survivor of the wreck that has formed the syndicate.

Seals Are Rapidly Decreasing.

The increased value of sealskins in 1900 induced the lessees of the Pribilof islands, the breeding grounds of the seal herds, to kill 15,000 two-year-old seals, whereas the rule has been not to kill any seal which has not reached the age of at least three years. If this killing of two-year-olds is allowed to continue it is certain that the seal herd will soon be exterminated.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor.

The annual offering for Foreign Missions was made, amounting to $18.60.

At the evening service, an Easter program provided by the Congregational Pot-Shing Society was rendered. The choir again gave both an anthem and carol. The congregations were good at both services.

Easter was observed last Sunday with neat decorations and appropriate services. In the morning the sermon was on the words "Come see the place where the Lord lay." The choir sang an anthem and an Easter Carol. The service of thankful praise with musical responses was much enjoyed.

Next Sunday Mr. Hyslop commences his third year of pastoral relationship and will take occasion to make some references to the past year and the future. The text will be "Come ye up out of Jordan." Joshua IV, 17. Mr. Hyslop hopes that the members and friends of the church will not fail to be present at both services. The hour of evening service is now changed from 7:00 to 7:30.

Street Sprinkling in Chicago.

Chicago has lost a street. It was worth about $1,000,000, and the city would like to find it again. Gradual encroachments were made on the street by a railroad company until it was completely covered, and the city will institute eviction proceedings.

Body Preserved by Copper.

The discovery in a Chilean copper mine of the body of an Indian workman, who has died there many years ago, and who had been preserved from decay by the antiseptic action of copper, is reported in an American mining journal.

A GRAND EVENT.

The Elston Hotel Masonic Banquet a Most Successful Affair.

About 175 Masons and ladies filled the Hotel Elston Tuesday night, on the occasion of the Masonic Banquet.

The mess-banquet hours were the social hours of the event, and the large office and parlors were the scenes of most enjoyable social intercourse. That fine musical organization, the mandolin orchestra, gave eclat to the occasion by a repertoire of excellent music; Miss Myrtle Miller executed a classical number in an artistic manner, Miss Florence Smith sang, and the ladies' quartet sang beautifully two exquisite numbers.

At 10:30 the dining room doors were thrown open, and the feast began.

It was midnight when toastmaster Green rapped for order and called upon Rev. C. T. Stout to invoke the divine blessing upon the event. Then followed the following post prandial program:

"The Moral and Philosophical Teaching of Masonry" ..... C. T. Stout
"The Great Country in Northern Michigan" ..... W. A. Smith.
"Benevolence of Masonry" ..... W. W. Aylsworth
"Order of Eastern Star" ..... Mrs. Margarite Harris.
"The Spinsters and Companions" ..... J. W. Morris
"Michigan, My Michigan" ..... Archibald Bostater
"The Craftsman" ..... H. Lee Iddings.

The last speaker at the close of his scholarly and highly edifying address, began to shower compliments into past-master Frank G. Hiscs, who sat at his right. He warmed up to his subject as he progressed, and drew from his pocket a magnificent gold and silver past-master jewel, which he, in behalf of the lodge, presented that popular and efficient Mason—a gift never more deserved, or more gracefully or worthily bestowed. Past-master Hiscs could not be expected to talk under the circumstances—he could not. He briefly and gracefully accepted the gift and sat down amid applause.

There was never a more successful or enjoyable event in Charlevoix, and it will go into the lodge history as a social and fraternal milestone.

Great credit is due the Hotel Elston management for the high character of the menu, and the excellent service given. Absolutely no criticism could be made.

He Kept His Leg

Twelve years ago J. W. Sullivan of Hartford, Conn. scratched his leg with a rusty wire. Inflammation and blood poisoning set in. For two years he suffered intensely. Then the best doctors urged amputation, "but" he writes, "I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and 1½ boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg was sound and well as ever." For Eruptions, Eczema, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Sores and all blood disorders Electric Bitters has no rival on earth. Try them. F. G. Hines Co. will guarantee satisfaction or refund money. Only 50 cents.

SCHOOL COMM'R COLUMN.

A. W. CHEN. COMM'R.

The Charlevoix county rural schools will be pleased to know that one of our Charlevoix county boys, Clyde Gilson of Bay township, won the oratorical contest at Petoskey high school last week and represented the Petoskey city schools at the state contest at Ludington on March 31. Of the class of three at the Petoskey contest two were from Charlevoix county rural schools. Miss Ruby Carpenter who graduated from the eighth grade of the Clarion school a year or two ago and received the commissioner's diploma, and Clyde Gilson. At Petoskey B. W. Halstead, W. E. Seegmiller and E. E. Gilbert were the judges who awarded the honors. The State contest at Ludington, for State honors will be announced shortly.

There were 39 teachers at the recent examination, and in consequence of the extra work this is a busy week for the examiner.

The teachers have been careless in regard to noting the change in Reading work and the examination proved some surprise along those lines. Refer to the Moderator for the announcement in Reading work or apply to the commissioner for information.

The recent sensational but unfounded report that King George of Greece had been attacked by an anarchist had its birth in an incident far more amusing than serious. The king visited the zoo at Athens, when an obstreperous ostrich made for him, covering his majesty with dust and embarrassment. His dignity alone suffered. The report reached the world by way of Vienna, where the ostrich was transformed into a wild-eyed anarchist.

VOLUME XXXIV. CHARLEVOIX MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, APRIL 10, 1902. NUMBER 3

Charlevoix Sentinel.

MARINE NOTES.

The Boyne City steamer Rhoenan was down Tuesday on her first trip.

The Charlevoix lifesaving station will open Saturday night at twelve o'clock.

The steamer Illinois will leave Chicago Friday evening for Northern Michigan points.

The tug Mary McLane left for Detroit this morning (Thursday). In charge of her new owners.

Since 1858 there have been but four sailings that the straits of Mackinac opened in March, and this is one of them.

The schooner Maize with next week load lumber at Larkin's Pier, Grand Traverse bay, for a lower lake port, and being lock coal for Wilbur.

Capt. Herman Oertling has concluded not to sail this season and his schooner C. H. Hackley will be under the command of Capt. Thomas Hanson.

The schooner Annie O. Hanson, well known here went a shore at Manitisee on the 31st. The crew were taken off by the life savers. Owners expect to save the vessel.

The towing tugs are officered this season as follows: Taylor, Capt. Wm. Cross, engineer. Tom Newland, Wheeler, Capt. Wm. Taylor, engineer, Pat Crosson; Dennis Hros., Capt. J. P. Partridge.

The steamhauge Welcome, Capt. Geo. Weaver, arrived here Wednesday from Milwaukee with grain for Hoffman roller mills, and the schooners Hackley and Mars have left Milwaukee for Boyne City.

John Kelly goes as engineer of the steamer Erie L. Hackley with Capt. Sam Rose, and the boat is now being fitted out. She will be ready the first of the week, or sooner, and will go on the Charlevoix-East Jordan route in the place of the Gordon during April, or until the Gordon comes out.

The steamer Beaver has struck the gait that she will maintain for the season. On Saturday she made the Beaver Island run, from pier to dock, in two hours and three quarters. In cases requiring a more rapid run, she can easily make the run in 2½ hours. The Hackley's time was 3½ hours. She has a trip to make from Petoskey to Northport with a load of lime.

The Northern Steamship Company has definitely announced that it will not attempt to maintain a passenger service the coming season on Lake Superior to connect with its steamers at Mackinac island. Last season the Miami was brought from Florida and put on the run, but this year it will be left to the Anchor line, which operates the India, China and Japan between Duluth and Buffalo.

There is some prospect of the passage of the bill now pending in Congress providing pensions for members of the lifesaving service. Prominent lake shippers have taken the matter up, and will ask all marine organizations with which he has any influence to act upon it. If the lake interests are active in pushing the bill there is reason to expect that it will become a law.

The steamer Pine Lake left here Saturday for Chicago, lumber laden, the first clearance from this port with cargo. The John Spry, which wintered at Boyne City, started out from there Saturday for Tonawanda, and dumped a big portion of her deck-load of shingles into Pine Lake. She returned, red eared her deckload and started out again Sunday noon. She was five hours getting here through the ice. She coaled here and left Tuesday.

The deputy collector of customs of this port has received instructions to enforce the law with napths, electric and other launches running here in summer, whether they be private craft or ferrys. While the class of boats are not documented, they are required by law to comply with "the rules of the road" in carrying signal lights. Therefore any boat of this character which hereafter runs without the lights required by law will be promptly dealt with. The local officer has no discretion. An interested will take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

A correspondent at Grifen from Frankfort, Mich: "The Alpena, Gaylord & Western Railway Company has finally decided to make Frankfort its Western land terminal. The open winter harbor here, together with its natural proximity to other important points on the western shore of Lake Michigan, convinced the officers that this is the best terminal they could find. It is the Company's intention to operate a carferry system across Lake Huron from Alpena to Georgian bay, and from this,"another railway will be built to Quebec, thus cutting off 600 miles of travel from St. Paul to the sea coast. The road will run through the finest lumber and farming belt of Northern Michigan. Its success is assured, and work has already been begun between Alpena and Gaylord. It is expected to have the road in running order to Frankfort within two years."

HEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

C. F. Edgar, of the Moalter Oil Co., paid the island a visit on Wednesday.

Mr. Salisbury, representing J. H. Conrad & Co., is spending the week on the island, doing business with our merchants.

H. P. Dix, of Hilsdale, Spencer, Hartlett & Co., left here on Wednesday.

The many friends of A. L. Coulter on the Island, are glad to learn of his reappointment to the Deputy Game Wardenship.

W. E. Gill and Frank Stafford returned home Wednesday.

Passengers on the Beaver to Charlevoix on her Wednesday trip were as follows: Rev. Fr. Zugelder, Supervisor W. J. Gallagher, Capt. M. J. Bonner, Dr. Williamson and J. H. Gallagher. They will all return on the Friday boat, except James Gallagher, who is attending the Charlevoix High school.

The Squaw Island light keeper, Mr. Owen C. McAuley, and his assistants Nelson & Bladdie left the Harbor for their station yesterday.

To Recover Stolen Treasure.

Two million dollars worth of gold was stolen from the Transvaal three years ago, and a syndicate has now been formed to recover it. The gold was shipped on the French vessel Ecrehou, which was bound for England. The vessel was wrecked, however, off the coast of Zululand, and it is the sole survivor of the wreck that has formed the syndicate

Seals Are Rapidly Decreasing.

The decreased value of sealskins in 1901 indicates the season of the Pribilof Islands, the breeding grounds of the seal herds, to fill 15,000 two-year-old seals, whereas the rule has been lost to kill any seal which has not reached the age of at least three years. If this killing of two-year-olds is allowed to continue it is certain that the seal herd will soon be exterminated.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor.

The annual offering for Foreign Missions was made, amounting to $18.60.

At the evening service, an Easter program provided by the Congregational Publishing Society was rendered. The choir again gave both an anthem and carol. The congregations were good at both services.

Easter was observed last Sunday with most decorations and appropriate services. In the morning the sermon was on the words "Come see the place where the Lord lay." The choir sang an anthem and an Easter Carol. The service of thankful praise with musical responses was much enjoyed.

Next Sunday Mr. Hyslop commences his third year of pastoral relationship and will take occasion to make some references to the past year and the future. The text will be "Come ye up out of Jordan." Joshua iv., 17. Mr. Hyslop hopes that the members and friends of the church will not fail to be present at both services. The hour of evening service is now changed from 7:00 to 7:30.

Now Resident on Governor's Staff.

Gov. McSweeney of South Carolina has appointed Col. J. H. Estill of Savannah, Ga., an honorary aid on his staff, with the rank of lieutenant colonel. Surprise at the selection for such a position of a resident of another state may be lessened by the knowledge that they have been for many years close personal friends; that both are newspaper men, and that Col. Estill, who has had much military experience, is a native of South Carolina.

Street Stolen in Chicago.

Chicago has lost a street. It was worth some $1,000,000, and the city would like to find it again. Gradual encroachments were made on the street by a railroad company until it was completely covered, and the city will institute eviction proceedings.

Body Preserved by Copper.

The discovery in a Chinese copper mine of the body of an Indian workman, who has died there many years ago, and who had been preserved from decay by the antiseptic action of copper, is reported in an American mining journal.

A GRAND EVENT.

The Elston Hotel Masonic Banquet a Most Successful Affair.

About 175 Masons and ladies filled the Hotel Elston Tuesday night, on the occasion of the Masonic Banquet.

The ante-banquet hours were the social hours of the event, and the large office and parlors were the scenes of most enjoyable social intercourse. That fine musical organization, the mandolin orchestra, gave eclat to the occasion by a repertoire of excellent music; Miss Myrtle Miller executed a classical number in an artistic manner, Miss Florence Smith sang, and the ladies' quartette sang beautifully two exquisite numbers.

At 10:30 the dining room doors were thrown open, and the feast began.

It was midnight when toastmaster Green rapped for order and called upon Rev. C. T. Stout to invoke the divine blessing upon the event. Then followed the following post prandial program:

"The Craft and Philanthropist" ..... C. T. Stout
"Woman's Place in Masonry" ..... Mrs. Margarita Hardin
"Masonic Memory in Northern Michigan" ..... W. A. Smith
"Beneficence of Masonry" ..... W. W. Aylesworth
"Order of Eastern Star" ..... Mrs. Margarita Hardin
"The Dignity and Consistency of Masonry" ..... J. W. Burdo
"Michigan, My Michigan" ..... Archibald Bottser
"The Craftsman" ..... H. Lee Ishinge

The last speaker at the close of his scholarly and highly edifying address, began to shoot compliments into past-master Frank G. Hines, who sat at his right. He warmed up to his subject as he progressed, and drew from his pocket a magnificent gold and silver past-master jewel, which he, in behalf of the lodge, presented that popular and efficient Mason—a gift never more deserved, or more gracefully or worthily bestowed. Past-master Hines could not be expected to talk under the circumstances—he could not. He briefly and gracefully accepted the gift and sat down amid applause.

There was never a more successful or enjoyable event in Charlevoix, and it will go into the lodge history as a social and fraternal milestone.

Great credit is due the Hotel Elston management for the high character of the menu, and the excellent service given. Absolutely no criticism could be made.

He Kept His Leg

"Twelve years ago J. W. Sullivan' of Hartford, Conn.' scratched his leg with a rusty wire Inflammation and blood poisoning set in. For two years he suffered intensely. Then the best doctors urged amputation, but" he writes, "I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and 1½ boxes of Bucklen's Arnic Salve and my leg was sound and well as ever" For Eruptions, Eczema, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Sores and all blood diseases Electric Bitters has no rival on earth. Try them F. G. Hinz Co. will guarantee satisfaction or refund money. Only 50 cents.

SCHOOL COMM'R COLUMN.

A. W. CHES. COMM'R.

The Charlevoix county rural schools will be pleased to know that one of our Charlevoix county boys, Clyde Gilson of Bay township, won the oratorical contest at Petoskey high school last week and represented the Petoskey city schools at the state contest at Ludington on March 31. Of the class of three at the Petoskey contest two were from Charlevoix county rural schools. Miss Ruby Carpenter who graduated from the eighth grade of the Gaskin school a year or two ago and received the commissioner's diploma, and Clyde Gilson. At Petoskey R. W. Mainstead, W. E. Seegmiller and E. E. Gilbert were the judges who awarded the honors. The State contest at Ludington, for State honors will be announced shortly.

There were 39 teachers at the recent examination, and in consequence of the extra work this is a busy week for the commissioner.

The teachers have been careless in regard to noting the change in Reading work and the examination problems some surprise along these lines. Refer to the Moderator for the announcement in Reading work or apply to the commissioner for information.

The papers are full of opportunities for investing you money in oil stock.

Expert promotors fill columns of space, and offer a large amount of stock for a small amount of money.

They give you a picture of a gusher combined with extravagant statements as to profits, and expect the public to pour in the money to help develop their airy, oily project.

Confiding investors may win, but their chances for paying assessments, and more assessments, are better than for recieving dividends.

... The Jones Chain Mower

Supreme on every Meadow.

The Modern King of all Grass Cutters.

It makes no noise—the power other mowers waste in racket is here applied to cutting grass.

It cuts the closest, the cutter-bar hugs the ground closely, either end will freely rise or fall into depressions—saves every inch of grass.

Stripped of non-essentials, this Jones Mower is easily managed by a boy—your lightest team will pull it through the season and grow fat.

Ostrich, Not Anarchist.

The recent sensational but unfounded report that King George of Greece had been attacked by an anarchist had its birth in an incident far more amusing than serious. The King visited the zoo at Athens, when an ostrich approaching within some distance of his majesty with dust and embarrassment. His dignity alone suffered. The report reached the world by way of Vienna, where the ostrich was transformed into a wild-eyed anarchist.

—Albert Holmes returned home from Florida Monday. He reports Charlie Lauerman in improved health, and that he will probably remain there until about July 1st. Mr. Carpenter will probably remain in the north until that date, putting in some of the time in South Carlonia.

—A spring edition of winter came Sunday night, leaving for our astonished morning gaze, four inches of the same kind of snow that falls in January, while the temperature was of the overcoat and overshoe sort. The general comment is that it is all for the best—that our farmers will not now borrow March winds and cold, cloudy skies.

—There are ways and ways of making "easy money," but another has got great in a peanut machine. A sample of the earning capacity of the machine is shown by the fact that one man at Flint who bought a machine last September for $16 has had nearly 4,000 pennies dropped into it. The pennies cost him $40 and he had taken out of it $20.56 or a profit of about $10 with the machine all paid for.

—At a recent meeting of the Charlevoix Sugar Co. the following officers were elected: President, Harry Nichols; vice President and general manager, Jas. M. Felts; Secretary, J. —In Grand Rapids Monday the republicans carried the city, electing Palmer for Mayor over Perry, by a good majority.

—The board of physicians recently appointed by the Judge Mayne to examine Mrs. Coates as to her sanity, on Tuesday did its work and pronounced the prisoner sane and competent to receive sentence.

—We congratulate our neighbors sincerely [on the sugar factory] and agree with the editor and the Charlevoix county farmers, that there is nothing in the rumpus in Congress over the reduction of duty on Cuban raw sugar which in any approach shape way will militate against the success of beet-sugar manufacturing in northern Michigan.—Petoskey Record.

—Service will be held in the Episcopal church Monday evening, April 14, at 7:30 o'clock, by Rev. C. T. Stout. It is hoped that all who are thinking of Confirmation will be present at this service and at the instruction to be given after the service and sermon. Subject of the sermon, "The Meaning and Purpose of the Church, or Duty of membership in it. The public cordially invited.

—Election passed off quietly Monday, there being but one ticket in the field. The following ticket was elected: Supervisor, John Ward; Clerk, Lisle Shanahan; Treasurer, L. S. See; Highway Commissioner, J. W. Alcock; Justice, A. A. Swinton; School inspector, full term, H. M. Enos; Vacancy, E. H. Green; Board of Review, John M. —S. Shepperson, the Ives Marquette lly. Co. agent here has been transferred to Petoskey, to take immediate effect. While we are sorry to lose Mr. Shepperson, we congratulate him on his promotion, as the change carries with it a substantial increase of salary. —Rev. Dr. James Hyslop begins his third year as pastor of the Charlevoix Congregational church next Sunday. In his morning sermon he will review the work of the past year, and speak of his hopes for the future. Dr. Hyslop's pastorate has been marked by a steady growth of the church membership and a harmony of co-operation of the church, which is a guaranty of continued temporal and spiritual good. Under the Calvinistic system, Dr. Hyslop would be considered an "irremovable," so unconfusd has he been in his relations, not only with his church, but with the public at large.

—The last year in the auditor general's office has been remarkable for the increase in business done by the tax department. The unprecedented activity has been aired up by some who have had business there as due to a craze for tax files. Auditor General Powers says that an especially encouraging feature of the rapid disposal of lands that have become the state's through the non-payment of taxes by original owners lies in the fact that many thousands of acres are being bought for colonization purposes and will thus become improved and not only add to the general prosperity of the state, but, in time, materially increase its taxable valuation.
